Aldon Quaestor by Venio x Venoya, by D'Orsay x Venio. Fee $25

This dog has, with very limited chances, sired a long list of terriers, that have won and continued to win at the best shows in the country. For 4 years in succession his progeny have headed their classes at New York. One of his daughters, Otterburn Surprise has just been sold to England at a big price.

Aldon Vandal by Meersbrook Bristles x Vandalia by Valuator ex Hunton Dulcibelle. Fee $10. Vandal is a "big little one" (weight 18 lbs.) with immense bone united with true quality. He represents two of the most fashionable lines of blood in England—that of "Matchmaker" and "Master Bristles." Though on the small side from a show stand-point, his striking excellence landed him 2nd in the open class at the Toronto shows, beating the well-known "Raby Fireaway," who beat "Hands-Up" at Pittsburgh.

FOR SALE—Several good Wire Bitches by "Aldon Quaestor," which will be sold with a free service to "Aldon Vandal."

NOTES AND COMMENTS

HOW do we look in our new clothes?

We have been enabled to carry out the promised change, and this issue of Gazette is a forerunner of what we intend doing.

Send us the names of your friends who are interested in dogs, either in Canada or the United States. We desire to place a copy before their notice.

This is our growing time—grow with us.

Don't be bashful, lots of room to expand in our business pages.

Mr. W. H. Stepler, Druggist, of Strathroy, offers $100 reward for the detection and conviction of the person who poisoned his valuable Setter dog, Dock, on December 11th. This dog was bred by Dr. Lindsay, and was a full brother of Strathroy Tupper, who won a first prize at the Hamiltan Bench Show, a few years ago.

Man's Best Friend for December 15th, is unique in the quality and printing of its many engravings, and contains very happy photographs of Mr. Jas. Lindsay, and Mr. W. P. Fraser.

The winning Dachshund bitch,
 Polly Flinders, is dead.

We are glad to hear from Mr. Skinner, that the Southern Fancier has finally located in New York, and will in future be issued as a weekly. It will cover different "fancies," and not dogs alone.

The St. Louis Kennel Club has sent in its resignation to the A.K.C., and so no show will be held there this season.

"Our Dogs" Christmas number, at the modest price of fourpence, is a marvel of cheapness and contains a mass of high class matter and engravings that together form valuable souvenirs. Mr. Marples, the editor in chief, describes his journey to America, some of the men he met here, and the letter press is embellished with several portraits of American breeders.

The holiday number sent out by the English Stock-Keeper is handsome in the extreme, in fact even some of the illustrated advertisements are models of the printers' and engravers' art. The portraits, of which there are many, are most life-like, and the engravings are brought out in wonderful clearness. A group of front page portraits reproduced, is a masterpiece of detail.

It is rumored that Her Grace, the Duchess of Newcastle, has been invited to judge Russian Wolfhounds, Deerhounds, Greyhounds, and Fox Terriers, at New York, in February, and that a note of acceptance has been sent Mr. Mortimer, whose astuteness we commend.

Mr. Miller was in Toronto last week, attending the meeting of the canned goods trade, in which he is largely interested, and had just received a wire from Mr. Klein, who is handling his dogs in the South, stating that he had won at New Orleans, no less than three firsts, eight seconds, and four thirds, while in addition Bayview Beryl won the special for the best light Bull Terrier in the show.

Messrs. F. & A. Stuart's rough St. Bernard bitch, Rosey O'Grady, is due to whelp to their grand dog, Earl of Shrewsbury, whose portrait appears in this issue. If all goes well, we look for a few better St. Bernard's in the near future.

Mr. Fred Miller, of the Bayview Kennels has bought the prize winning rough dog, Baden Powell, from Mr. Stableford, and will place him in the stud, where he should do well being by Uncle Remus ex Zantha.

Cleveland has abandoned the idea of holding a show this season, and has relinquished the dates claimed with the A.K.C.

Turf, Field and Farm, announces that Mr. Jas. Mortimer has been appointed as special reporter and kennel advertising manager for that Journal. We congratulate T. F. & F.

Mr. E. Davies, of Dewdney, B. C., judged all breeds at the recent Oakland, Cal., dog show. His decisions were well received, and were carefully made. In Fox Terriers, Fordham was first; Norfolk Arbitrator second; and Vibo third, with Aldon Artist, reserve. This was in the open class. We were not aware that Mr. Bell had purchased Fordham.

We can assure Mr. Mortimer that the libelous diatribe which recently appeared in the American Field did not emanate from a resident of Toronto, though dated from this city. We have a shrewd guess as to the author, but then—hysterics may be overlooked. Publication of such an epistle should bring quick reprisal, from more than one.

Mr. C. E. Hopton, will revisit New York, and will exhibit his famous Bulldog L'Ambassadeur.

Mr. Tyler Morse, a frequent and welcome visitor at Toronto shows has bought through Geo. Thomas, the bulldog, Footpad, and three good brood bitches.

Bulldogs are all the go now, on the other side of the line, and breeders in the U. S. find it hard to reconcile our patriotism with our lack of interest in old England's national dog.

The new Criminal Code of Canada, which came into force with the new year, provides for the further protection of animals—amongst which dogs are specially included.

Section 332 deals with the crime of stealing any dog, bird, beast or other animal ordinarily kept in a state of confinement, and greatly increases the penalties for stealing valuable pets, or stud animals. The amended clause reads:

(332). Every one who steals any dog, or any bird, beast or other animal ordinarily kept in a state of confinement or for any domestic purpose, or for any lawful purpose of profit or advantage, is (if the value of the property stolen exceeds twenty dollars), guilty of an indictable offence and liable to a penalty not exceeding (fifty) over and above the value of the property stolen, or to (two years' imprisonment, or to both, and if the value of the property stolen does not exceed twenty dollars), is guilty of an offence and liable upon summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding twenty dollars over and above such value, or to one month's imprisonment with hard labor.

2. Every one who having been previously convicted of an offence under this section, is summarily convicted of another offence thereunder, is liable to three month's imprisonment with hard labor.

The words in brackets are the newly added portions, in this and other clauses quoted.

THE DOG'S ANATOMY.

WE are indebted to the dog's best friend, Messrs. Spratts Patent, for the accompanying engraving and descriptive text. To the novice and even to the old hand it is worthy of preservation.

Apple-headed—Skull round instead of flat on top.

1. Arm.

Blaze—A white mark up the face.

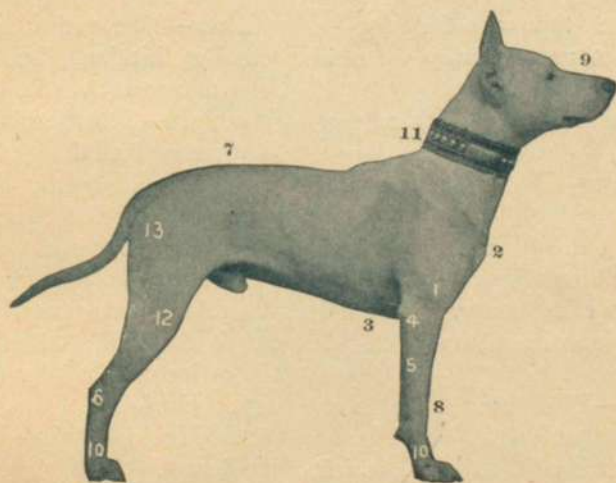

brisket; the breast, or chest extends between the forelegs from the brisket of the belly.

Cheeky—When the cheek bumps are strongly defined.

Chops—The pendulous lips of the Bulldog.

Cobby—Well ribbed up; short and compact.

Couplings—The length or space between the tops of the shoulder blades and tops of the hip-joints,

2. Brisket—The part of the body in front of the chest and below the neck.

Brush—The tail; generally applied to Sheepdogs.

Butterfly-nose—A spotted nose.

Button-ear—An ear which falls over in front, concealing the inside, as in Fox-Terriers.

Cat-foot—A short, round foot, with the knuckles high and well developed.

3. Chest—The chest of a dog must not be confounded with the or huckle-bones. A dog is accordingly spoken of as long or short "in the couplings."

Cow-hocked—The hocks turning inwards.

Dew-Claws—The extra claws found occasionally on the legs of all breeds, but especially of the St. Bernard.

Dewlap—Pendulous skin under the throat as in case of bloodhound.

Dish-faced—This term describes a dog whose nasal bone is higher at the nose than at the stop—a feature not unfrequently seen in Pointers.

Dudley-nose—A flesh-colored nose.

4. Elbow—The joint at top of fore-arm.

Elbows Out—This term defines itself. Bulldogs and Dachshunds are desired with elbows so shaped, but it may occur as a fault through weakness.

Feather—The fringe of hair on the back of legs of some breeds, notably Setters, Spaniels and Sheepdogs.

Flag—A term for the tail, applied to Setters.

Flews—The chops, or overhanging lips of the upper jaw. The term is chiefly applied to hounds or other deep-mouthed dogs.

5. Fore-arm—This makes the principal length of the fore-leg and extends from elbow to pastern.

Frill—The projecting fringe of hair on the chest of some dogs, and especially of the Collie.

Hare-foot—A long, narrow foot, carried forward.

Haw—The red inside eye-lid, usually hidden, but visible in Bloodhounds and St. Bernards.

Height—The height of a dog is measured at the shoulder, bending the head gently down. The proper method is to stand the dog on level ground close by a wall, and to lay a flat rule across his shoulders horizontally so as to touch the wall; then measure to the point touched by the rule.

6. Hocks.

7. Huckle-bones—Tops of the hip-joints. The space between these and the tops of the shoulders is called the couplings.

8. Knee—The joint attaching the fore-pasterns and the fore-arm.

Leather—The skin of the ear.

9. Nasal Bone—

Occiput—The prominent bone at the back or top of the skull; particularly prominent in Bloodhounds.

Overshot—The upper teeth projecting beyond the lower. This fault in excess makes a dog pig-jawed, which see.

10. Pastern—The lowest section of the leg, below the knee or hock, respectively.

Pig-jawed—The upper jaw protruding over the lower, so that the upper incisor teeth are in advance of the lower, an exaggeration of an overshot-jaw.

Pily—A peculiar quality of coat found on some dogs, which show so as to disclose the inside of the ear.

11. Shoulders—The top of the shoulder-blades, the point at which the height of a dog is measured.

Splay-foot—A flat, awkward foot, usually turned outward; and the opposite of "Cat-foot."

Stern—The tail.

on examination a short wooly jacket next the skin, out of which springs the longer visible coat. This short wooly coat is "pily." When an ordinary coat is described as pily, it means that it is soft and wooly, instead of hard.

Rose-ear—An ear of which the tip turns backward and downward,

12. Stifle-joint.

13. Rump-bone.

Septum—The division between the nostrils.

Stop—The indentation between the skull and the nasal bone near the eyes. This feature is strongly developed in Bulldogs, Pugs and short-faced Spaniels, and considerably so in many other dogs.

Tulip-ear—An upright or prick ear.

Undershot—The lower incisor teeth projecting beyond the upper as in Bulldogs.

THE PHILADELPHIA DOG SHOW ASSOCIATION.

OFFICERS FOR 1901.

THE Annual Meeting of the Philadelphia Dog Show Association, was held in their offices upon the 7th inst. The reports of the various committees and the officers were read and placed on file. The following officers were unanimously elected for the ensuing year.

President, Clement B. Newbold; vice presidents Edward Moore Robinson, Alexander Van Rensselaer, and Louis A. Biddle; secretary, Marcel A. Viti; treasurer, S. Boyd Carrigan; The Board of Governors,—the above named officers and Messrs. Reginald K. Shober, D. Murray Bohlem, Francis E. Bond, Mitchell Harrison, Jay B. Lippincott, C. Leland Harrison, Sidney W. Keith, and Geo. R. Packard.

It was decided to hold the Third Annual Show, in the latter part of November of this year.

Bayview Robin, red, by Red Wonder-Lill. A winner of three 1st's at last Pet Dog Show, New York, beating amongst others Mohican (late Hamilton Jack II). Also firsts at Philadelphia, Montreal, Toronto, &c., &c., and has made two wins for Cosgrove Cup. A full list of wins will be given later. Back of him are such dogs as Ch. Red Obo, Red Roland, Red Jacket, Brant, Obo II, and Brahmin. Fee, $15.00. Also other winners at stud in reds and blacks, at a fee of $10.00. Particulars on application.

Rough St. Bernard.

Bayview Baden-Powell, 2nd at Toronto Fall Show of 1900 when 8½ months old. By Uncle Remus x Zantha. One of the largest St. Bernards in Canada. Will this season be allowed to serve five approved bitches only, outside of owner's kennel. Terms on application.

Brood bitches and puppies in these breeds usually for sale. Address

FRED T. MILLER, Trenton, Ont.

SPANIEL SPARKLE*CANADIAN SPORTING SPANIEL CLUB

President,
H. PARKER THOMAS,
Belleville, Ont.

Secretary,
R. J. JEFFS,
529 King Street West, Toronto

At the recent Birmingham show, a variety Spaniel, a blue-roan bitch, Coleshill Constance, secured the championship over all the cracks, including the blacks.

Mr. Miller, in offering the services of the Cockers, Holy-Smoke, Bayview Robin and others, is assured of a portion of breeders' business, as both the dogs individually named, are of the very best winning strains, and Robin is also a big winner.

It seems as hard to get Spaniel items as to get teeth from a hen, and it is not because we haven't enough of them.

President Thomas and Secretary Jeffs, both say it is the other fellow's turn now, and state they will decline to stand at the next election of the Canadian Sporting Spaniel Club.

Mr. Webber has something up his sleeve, in Montreal, and a recent advertisement of sale in a contemporary, does not by any means refer to his giving up the breeding of Cockers, as more than one of our readers has taken it.

Bright, newsy Spaniel items wanted. Be sure and send any such.

ON THE DIVISION OF DOGS INTO SPORTING AND NON-SPORTING CLASSES.

WHAT is and what is not a sporting dog, has been exercising the minds of English breeders, for some months, and several lists setting forth the claims of different breeds have been published in the kennel papers of England. "Este," whose writings are always worthy of more than a passing glance, goes more fully into the subdivision of classification in our London name-sake, and we give his ideas in full.

It would be untrue to say that every dog has not some sporting instinct and capacity. The Blenheim Spaniel, although usually but a lady's lap-dog, has been known to be an excellent dog for woodcock and other game; and even the Pug has been used in partridge shooting. The writer also had a Mastiff which never failed to mark where a pheasant had run into a hedgerow, and to very soon put him out, if allowed to. These are, however, exceptions, which prove nothing but that a dog has a nature to hunt; and seeing that it is a carnivorous animal, we should be surprised if it had not. Years of domestication, and consequent demoralisation, have done much to impair the sporting character of many of our breeds of dogs; but I doubt not, if any of us were to be thrown upon our own resources in some wild and uninhabited forest, we should soon re-develop the sporting instincts of any dog, if we were so fortunate as to be accompanied by one. Those who read Mr. Charles Bruce's shooting adventures in Burmah (related in the Kennel Gazettes of October and November), will remember how his life was saved by a white Bull Terrier (a granddaughter of Pegg's White Wonder).

It is easier, therefore, to say what breed of dog should be classed as sporting than it is to designate which breeds should not. About some there can be no doubt, and it will be far better not to admit any into this category unless it can be clearly shown that they are kept for the purpose of taking game or vermin in the field, either in this or foreign countries. For the purposes of exhibition in this country (and that is the object of this more or less arbitrary arrangement), only those foreign dogs, such as the Borzoi and Dachshund, which are kept in large numbers here (although not for sport), should be admitted. The Elk-dog, of Sweden, and the Griffons, of Germany, are equally as sporting as either of the former two breeds, but they are not kept in sufficient numbers to warrant their inclusion in the lists, and if we admitted them we should have to include any foreign sporting dogs, such as Chien de Gascoigne and others which have been occasionally exhibited. This would always keep open the question as to which were and which were not sporting breeds. It will be best to have, then, an arbitrary line drawn between what we know to be sporting breeds and other breeds—call them “non-sporting” if you like—but preferably “dogs not commonly used for sport.” It will, firstly, be necessary to define what is sport. “Dogs kept for the purpose of taking game or vermin in the field” would seem to give a fair definition. “Sport,” “game,” “vermin,” and “field,” all cry out for definition; but our common sense will direct us, and a certain amount of this is necessary in all such problems. Bull-baiting, whip-pet racing, ratting, and rabbiting or rabbit coursing, are all done in the field; but they are not the true sport, in the sense that is implied by “taking game or vermin in the field.” Again, some breeds of dog are made by crossing so that they would take game or vermin, if such existed, e.g., the Irish Wolfhound. We would hardly admit this crossed breed as a sporting variety, because it has never had the opportunity of proving its capability of the work for which it is nominally bred. The whole question is bristling with difficulties, and there is probably no breed that some admirer will not wish to champion as a sporting one. Let us work on sure ground, therefore, and not admit any as a sporting breed that is in any sense doubtful.

Our list of sporting breeds would comprise the following:—

Hunting together by scent:—
Bloodhounds, Otter Hounds, Fox

Hounds, Harriers, Beagles, Basset Hounds.

Hunting by sight:—Greyhounds, Deerhounds, Borzois.

Used with the gun for game:—Pointers, Setters, Retrievers, Spaniels, (not Toys.).

For taking Fox or Badger:—Fox Terriers, Dachshunds.

There can be little difference of opinion that all the above are Guardians and champions of man:—Mastiffs, Great Danes, St. Bernards, Newfoundlands.

For the care and protection of animals:—Collies, Old English Sheepdogs, Dalmatians.

As Pugnaces and foundation of blood for courage:—Bulldogs, Bull Terriers.

Kept as toys and pet dogs:—King Charles Spaniels, Blenheim

A STUDY IN HEADS.

THE ENGLISH MASTIFF CHAMPION "MARKSMAN."

worthy of being called sporting dogs, but there are many other breeds which are occasionally used for rabbit shooting, etc., but which can hardly be classed with the above.

Dogs which are occasionally used for sport:—Airedales, Bedlington, Dandie Dinmonts, Irish Terriers, Old English Terriers, Scottish Terriers, Welsh Terriers, and Irish Wolfhounds, Whippets.

Spaniels, Ruby Spaniels, Tricolour Spaniels, Japanese Spaniels, Pekinese Spaniels, Toy Bulldogs, Toy Bull Terriers, Black and Tan Terriers, White English Terriers, Skye Terriers, Clydesdale Terriers, Yorkshire Terriers, Maltese Terriers, Italian Greyhounds, Rough and Smooth Toy Terriers, Poodles, Pomeranians, Chows, Pugs, Griffon Bruxellois, Schipperkes, Foreign dogs.

Sporting dogs must be dogs kept and used for the purpose of taking game or vermin in the field. "Game," must be wild game; "vermin," an animal which is hunted, e.g., wolf, fox, otter, or badger, and not merely rats or other small deer; "in the field" must mean unenclosed country. If at any time a breed rises to the position and establishes its reputation as a sporting breed, it will be very easy to include it in the list; whereas it would be more difficult to remove any from the list. Bloodhounds might be objected to by some, as they are, at the present time, mostly used for tracking man who is neither game nor vermin, but they are, or were lately, used by Lords Wolverton and Carrington and Mr. Fitt for hunting deer and hare, and as the fountain head of all our hounds they could not be excluded. As there seems to be a want on the part of the public for some distinctive line to be drawn, the Kennel Club will doubtless soon give its decision where it should be made.

WHERE THE DOGS GO.

NO less than 189 canines were coraled by the dog-catchers of Toronto, during the ten days they were out last year. Forty-seven were released on license, four on payment of fines, three on country license, and thirteen as under six months old. One was sold, three were given to the foreman of the city yard, and ten to be taken out of the city, while one hundred and three were destroyed.

CANADIAN KENNEL CLUB

(Incorporated)

Address all letters to President. H.B. DONOVAN,
 JNO. G. KENT, Toronto. Secretary-Treasurer,
 124 Victoria Street, Toronto.

The C.K.C. registrations will be brought right down to date in next issue, and will in future be printed in full, that is details of extended pedigrees will be given. This will entail a little more work in the office, and a little more expense for the Club, but it is all for the good of the cause.

President John G. Kent, has not yet returned from California, but is expected home this month.

About twenty-five gentlemen are applying for membership in the C.K.C., and will be voted on at the next meeting of the executive.

CANADIAN FOXHOUND CLUB.

I HAVE much pleasure in enclosing you the constitution and running rules of the Canadian Foxhound Club, formulated last summer, but really only just budding forth for recognition with the advent of the new century.

It has taken considerable time to get this work finished, longer perhaps than is beneficial to the welfare of the Club, some will say, but I crave the members' leniency (and others interested in its welfare), to pardon the delay, when it evolves upon one individual to do all the work and hustling to bring it into a solid practicable club, I feel my tardiness will be excused.

Now that we members, knowing exactly where we are at, and having the advancement of this our Club at heart, let us unite for work. When meetings are called those out of town, who may be prevented for various reasons from attending, will confer a favor by writing their likes and dislikes, suggestions, etc., to me, and I can assure them, they will have a hearing, and their suggestions, and whatever other correspondence they deem beneficial, will be appreciated. Don't sit idly by and leave some other one to run it all, and perhaps later on find fault.

Talk the club up amongst your Hound friends. Members who can create a friendly rivalry in their own districts, as to the relative merits of their dogs, (and who can't do that!) are advancing the welfare of the club, inasmuch, that they will want more fields to conquer, and will become one of us.

I would like to remind those fanciers who have Foxhounds that are prize winners as well as workers, that there will be three silver cups, and most likely other specials, open for competition amongst members only, at the spring show of the Fox Terrier Club this year. The cups are given thus; one for best puppy, either sex, English or American; one for best novice classes, either sex, English or American, one for best American Foxhound dog. As competition will be extremely keen, would it not be wise for those fanciers, who are not as yet members, (and are keeping a good one back) to make application for membership at once? It will assuredly prevent misunderstanding at some later date. I will be pleased to send application blanks to any one desiring same.

It was impossible to hold field trials this fall, the club not being in working existence long enough, to be in condition, either numerically or financially to attempt same, but I feel that I can safely assure those who are anxious to test the hunting, running, and staying qualities of the other fellow's dog, that the opportunity will be offered this coming fall.

I would like, before closing this letter, to draw the attention of my brother fanciers and others to the sad loss the fancy has sustained in the death of Dr. James Robinson, M.D. He was the unanimous choice of the members for the Presidency of our club, but was unable to accept the honor on account of failing health, nevertheless, he assured me personally, his interests were with us. He was an ardent fancier of the Foxhound, and had he been spared to us, Canada would have been the possessor of some of the finest strains of Foxhounds money could buy, as it was his intention to import hounds from the best kennels in Europe.

I had the pleasure of first inducing the doctor to take up a class of Foxhounds that are fit for show purposes, as well as hunting, a combination which is by no means easy to obtain. A great many fanciers are satisfied with any nondescript, so long as it hunts well. His enthusiasm soon became so intense, that he discarded what dogs he had been using for deer hunting, with the exception of one old hound, Morgan by name, who was a favorite and privileged character about the house and grounds, and who remained in his possession until his death.

His kennel comprised from ten to fifteen hounds, that either in the field or on the bench, were as good as any in Canada. His English Foxhound dog, Pattern, now in the possession of Mr. Williams, of Pembroke, Ont., being the equal of any hound possessed by either the Montreal, Toronto, or London Hunt Clubs, having demonstrated this at the bench shows held in the two former cities. The Doctor's loss is a hard blow to the fancy, and I feel when making these few passing remarks that I am but voicing the feelings of the entire members of the club, and others who had in divers ways become personally acquainted with him. May his memory ever remain.

I would request all members if possible to procure one or more persons in their locality for membership, and all fanciers who have been hanging on the fence, as it were, waiting for developments, to send in their names.

A committee meeting will be called shortly, when new members will be voted upon. Come, gentlemen, this club is to boost your hobby, so send in your application,

HARRY TAYLOR,
Secretary, Toronto.

The Bayview Kennels, Trenton, have placed that grand young Uncle Remus dog, Baden Powell, at the service of owners of a few approved bitches, and the probabilities are that his slate will soon be full. Early application is therefore desirable, as the energies of the dog will not be over-taxed.

WHAT THE LAST CENTURY HAS DONE FOR DOGS.

ONE century has gone, but another has come. The endless stream of time goes on regardless of all personal or political interests. We cannot stop the inevitable, and the next best thing to do is to endeavor in every way in our power, to make each epoch more worthy of our higher civilization, and by using the thoughts and experience of past years to improve our present and the future. That this should be done in every object of life is showing that our mental qualifications are really benefited by the labors of those who have gone before. It is foolishness of anyone to say that by their own unaided work the great things of the century were accomplished. They had all the benefit of the workers of the past, and began their labors where others laid them down. This applies to every branch of human industry, whether in the animal or mechanical world. We are more interested in the former, and I may be allowed to write a few thoughts from past experience in which that world has been the gainer, more particularly in regard to our friends and companions, the dogs.

What useful changes have been made in regard to the improvement in canine matters, during the 'last century,' and how are we to improve on them?

At the beginning of the last century, Foxhounds and Bulldogs were about the only breeds that were considered worth the keeping pure, with pedigrees that were handed down by word of mouth, rather than by being kept in any register. Not till the days of Laverack did the English Setter get recognized pedigrees. Spaniels were kept for shooting purposes, but not till Dr. Boulton and Mr. Bullock took them up, were there any records except those which may have been kept in secret at Clumber Park. Fox Terriers were in the 40's, bred and kept at some of the Fox-hunting kennels to go to earth after the foxes, which were hunted down by the pack, and by what can be gathered of the earliest they were black and tan, with very little white, and were said to be crosses of the black and tan and Bull Terrier. The Bull Terrier during the last century was evolved, said to be a cross between the Bulldog and Greyhound. I should have mentioned Greyhounds as being early on the scene of the 19th century.

Now, all this making has been accomplished during the last century, and it is for us to keep what they have produced for us, and to keep them for the purposes for which they were intended by the originators.

In shape and form, during the last decade, dogs of all breeds have been almost perfected, but we cannot say that their usefulness has been improved upon. Dog shows have done much for the type of what they should be like, but it appears as if dog shows had not improved the usefulness of many of the breeds. How seldom is it that a Setter or Pointer who excels in the field is noticed on the bench. The same can be said of Field and Cocker Spaniels. Terriers have also suffered to a certain extent, but not so much as some others, notably the Collie. As a rule the bench show winner never saw a sheep, and if he did he would probably run away from it or chase it to death.

The latter part of the last century has improved the type in almost all breeds of dogs. Now, what I want to get at is, to try in the new century to improve in usefulness our dogs, by having more field trials for Setters, Pointers and Spaniels, Sheep dog or Collie trials. For Bulldogs I don't think it would be well to re-introduce bull-baitings, but some means might be originated which would show they were useful. For Terriers, some method should be adopted to show that they were not useless, but that they could both hunt and kill vermin, which was the original object of their creation.

Let the dog lovers of this new century, ponder on these thoughts, and if by doing so, they can establish usefulness with type, and attain perfection, they will be advancing both the interest in dogs, and make them of use to help civilization in its advance for the greater good for all. I am out of the ring, but others younger and better qualified might take this up, and I should like to hear from Terrier or Collie men such as Mr. G. H. Gooderham, R. McEwen, "Father" Geoghegan, et hoc. Yours, + 20th Century.

HAMILTON NEWS.

ALEX BENZIE has sent his best black bitch, Flossie, on a visit to Mr. T. Payne's champion, Romany Rye.

F. J. Dodman, reports the sale of Yorkshire Terriers better than ever. Cannot supply the demand.

Mr. Geo. Dunn, of Woodstock, was in town a few days ago, looking over the Cocker situation; the result will be some additions to the Waverley Kennels.

Mr. Fred Flynn, is well pleased with his recent importation, Saybrook-Louis, as a stud dog. He is a red Cocker, but his get is anything you want, having litters of blacks, reds, and parti-colors from black bitches. Mr. Flynn has hard luck like others, losing nine out of a litter of ten, all red.

A. B. Baxter has sold to Mrs. J. J. Caspari, of Detroit, a pair of Great Dane puppies, dog and bitch, four months old, for $125, which we think a fair price for youngsters of this age. This sale was made through the Phone.

Mr. H. C. Davis has had some tempting offers for his Cocker bitch, Office Girl, but has declined them all.

Winner of 5 firsts, Toronto Spring Show, 1899, and 3 firsts, Toronto Industrial Exhibition. Only times shown here. Fee $20.

Beaumont Jarvis,

Mr. Joseph McCann, the well-known hotel-keeper, died suddenly yesterday, at St. Joseph's Hospital. Mr. McCann was also a lover of the thoroughbred dog, his fancy being Fox Terriers. He was the owner of Bachelor, a prize winner. The Gore Kennel Club loses a good member, which will be hard to replace.

Arthur Garrack's parti-color bitch, Juno, whelped a beautiful litter of parti-colors. Sired by Miles, A.K.C. (51054).

WHY HE SMILES.

Frank England, proprietor of the New England Kennels, has at last secured a fine young red Cocker bitch, which he has been trying to buy for some time. She will certainly be a strong addition to his already excellent string of thoroughbreds.

Mr. Mark O'Rourke is busy getting ready a batch of Bull Terriers for the big bench show to be held in Madison Square Gardens, New York City, in February. We expect to see Mr. O'Rourke bring home a bunch of ribbons.

The Irish Terrier bitch, Brittons Molly, a winner at Toronto, and by Ch. Dunowen, out of Flash Kid, got mixed up with a trolley car recently, and came out with a broken leg. Her owners, Messrs. Britton and Cobban now retire her to the brood kennel.

The Scottish Terrier Club is offering quite a lengthy list of specials at New York, open to members of the club.

Mr. Geo. W. Southcott of Toronto, has purchased from Mr. Bruckheimer, a sister of Masterpiece in whelp to Milton Muddler.

George S. Thomas, who has been showing a string of Terriers from the Norfolk Kennels at New Orleans, wired Mr. Gooderham advice of the following winnings in addition to the kennel prize and several specials:—Champion Norfolk Victorious, first open; first winners, and special for the best fox-terrier in the show; Norfolk Rattler, first puppy, first novice, first limit and reserve to Victorious in winners; Norfolk Butterworth, first limit, first open and winners; Norfolk Nive, first puppy and first novice.

Members of the American Fox Terrier Club are reminded that entries of bitches in the Sixteenth Grand Produce Stakes must be made by February 1; also that entries for the Apollo Homebred and Tomboy stakes close on that date. In the Stud Dog Stakes there is now due an additional payment of five dollars for brace, which the owner of the stud dog may elect to show for the stake. Any information may be had on application to the secretary, H. H. Hunnewell, Jr., 87 Milk Street, Boston, Mass.

Norfolk Veracity, has been proclaimed the American Fox Terrier Club's Champion for 1901, he having won the grand challenge cup twice out of the four times it was put up last year.

The annual statement of the Canadian Fox Terrier Club has been mailed to all members, so we need not do more than congratulate the club on the business-like look of secretary Jacobi's sheet. It shows the club to have a balance on hand of $131; and gives a full list of where the many club specials and cups went to last year.

Mr. George H. Gooderham received a telegram from Memphis, Tenn., to the effect that he had won with his Fox Terriers; Rattler winning puppy, novice and limit, and reserve winners; Champion Norfolk Victorious, first open and winners; Norfolk Nina, first puppy, first novice; Butterworth, first open, winners and limit.

There is a great deal of talk still going on over the disqualification of the Fox-Terrier Royston Remus, for being shown with signs of a white powder in his coat, but a scene we witnessed at Birmingham in the gallery proves that exhibitors still see no harm in cleansing their dogs with white powder. In front of his bench stood a Clumber Spaniel, in front kneeled his keeper, and straddle-legs over him, his owner, who had a large lump of chalk in one hand which he scraped with a pen-knife, and as the powder fell the keeper rubbed it into the dog's coat. The passers-by stopped to look on, and some were horrified, and we were amused. Query: when we can get K.C. stewards would this be a case for their attention?—English Stock-keeper.

A little thing like this does not seem to affect us here. We have before now referred to this "white-washing" process, in pretty strong terms, especially in Bull Terrier circles, where it is done quite openly, and where it has more than once hidden skin eruption.

Mr. Carnochan, has sold to go to England, the winning wire bitch, Otterburn Surprise, that was brought out by Mr. Ford, and whose career has been so successful. She is a credit to her sire Aldon Quaestor, the father of so many good ones.

Mr. W. C. Roberts, of Wales, has sold the Welsh Terrier, Dearwr, (ouch!) to Mr. Howard, of New York. He leaves a grand record behind him.

Mr. Gus Greitzner, of New Orleans, has imported the famous smooth bitch, Brockenhurst Agnes, bred by Mr. J. C. Tinnie. She came over in whelp to champion Adam Bede.

Norfolk Kennels have sent out the neat annual catalogue issued in the interests of this large kennel, and he will be hard to please who does not find a mate to fit his brood bitch, or a good Terrier to suit his pocket. To our readers in the United States, we may say that there will now be no trouble with the customs, as the bitches remain "in bond" while at the kennels, an arrangement made with the department, by Mr. Gooderham. If you have not received a catalogue and stud list, send for one.

Mr. Jno Seath has sold to Mr. Ford, the wire haired bitch, Aldon Constance, little sister to Otterburn Surprise, and the dam of Nobility, the winner at the spring show of 1899.

CANADIAN FOX TERRIER CLUB NOTES.

A MEETING of the Canadian Fox Terrier Club will be held shortly, to make arrangements for their fourth annual spring show. The show will no doubt be held in the Pavilion, as the Walker building, in which the show was held last year, is being pulled down.

Members of the Canadian Fox Terrier Club are reminded that entries may now be made for the first division of the Produce Stakes, to be decided at Toronto Fall show. This stake is for Terriers whelped between August 14, 1900 and February 14, 1901, inclusive.

Entries to the Derby Stakes closed January 1st. Owing to the holiday season, the Committee have decided to accept entries for this stake till February 1st.

Stud Dog Stakes of 1902 close February 1st.

The special prize offered for the best wire haired puppy dog, at the late Toronto Fall Show, which appears in the annual statement as having been won by the Norfolk Kennels, has been withheld pending meeting of the Bench Show Committee of the Toronto Industrial.

The produce of the following bitches have been entered in the 2nd Division of the Produce Stakes, which will be competed for at the spring show. Probable value $70. ## BAYVIEW BRIGADIER.

THE Bayview Kennels grand Bull Terrier dog, Bayview Brigadier, has had a notable career since he came out at New York, last year when but seven months old. Since then under Mr. Klein's careful charge he has won a long list of prizes, including the following; 2nd puppy class; 3rd, novice; 2nd limit, New York; 1st novice class, 2nd, limit, Chicago; 1st novice class, 2nd, limit, Kansas City; 1st, light weight, St. Paul; 1st, open, Boston; 1st puppy class, 1st limit, Pittsburg; 1st puppy, 1st limit, Cleveland; 1st puppy, 1st limit, 1st open, 1st winners, Montreal; 2nd limit, 1st Canadian class, Toronto Industrial, 1900; 1st open, 1st winners, Tri State Fair; 2nd Danbury. All in 1900.

Brigadier was bred and is owned by Mr. Fred Miller, the owner of the Bayview Kennels, at Trenton, and he takes a just pride in the product of his own skill in mating.

Mr. Harold Wood has been induced by the receipt of a big cheque to sell his Scottish Terrier Baberton Lass, (K.C.S.B. 1,166D), to Dr. Fayette C. Ewing, of St. Louis, U.S.A. She is a winner of firsts, specials, and championships galore, and the fancy will be sorry to see her go out of the country. At the same time Mr. Wood had a tempting offer for Champion Balmacron Thistle, but we are glad to hear that he will not part with him, as he prefers to see the triumphs of his progeny in this country. — Stock-Keeper.

Airedale Terriers are particularly suited to our rigorous Canadian climate and are rough-and-ready customers that fear nothing. Mr. Laurin has spared no effort to procure a kennel of the best obtainable, and the services of such a dog as Willow Nut, are now available at a moderate cost.

considering his intrinsic value. Briar Ranger is another high class inmate of the "Colne" Kennel, and puppies are generally for disposal.

Mr. Eugene Stratton, the renowned music hall coon artist, sails for America to-day, and takes with him the well known prize-winning St. Bernard bitch Chantrell Betty, in whelp to Lord Newlands, purchased from Miss Smith, of Leeds, and a white Dachshund puppy by Hans Holbein, bred by Mr. Alphonso Tooth. The prices paid were £50 for the St. Bernard, and £20 for the Dachshund puppy. — Stock-Keeper.

N.B.—A NUMBER OF THE ABOVE BREEDS ON SALE.

Mr. McAllister has been unfortunate lately. In addition to losing Laurel Laddie through an accident, a good young dog he was importing, Moreton Eustace jumped overboard from the "Andonia" during the voyage over, and was drowned.

Mr. Ford has sold to Mr. Lepman, Chicago, the owner of Old Hall Paris, the Collies, Otterburn

Don, by Otterburn Conqueror, and the imported Otterburn Purity by Ch. Southport Perfection. Both are golden sables, with white collars, and should do well in the West.

Mr. Ford has just now in his kennel, the famous champion Ellwyn Astrologer, just off the water. He is described by Mr. Ford as the largest Collie he has ever seen, with marvellous head, ears, coat and frill. He is a handsomely marked tri-color, and both as a bench show winner and as a sire, has proved himself to be in the very first rank. He is the sire, amongst others, of Champion old Hall Duchess.

Mr. Jarrett has sold his kennel of smooth Collies to the well-known Fox Terrier breeders, Messrs, L. & W. Rutherford. The sale includes Wellesbourne Veto, Busybird, Blue Peter and Monkton Maid.

Mr. Reynolds, in the "for sale ads," is offering a good son of the defunct Laurel Laddie, at a reasonable figure, as he now has no place to keep him. He is nine months' old, and is described as being of a good size with really good eyes, ears, legs, feet and coat.

If you have Collies for sale, do not neglect printer's ink. The Gazette is an excellent advertising medium.

BRAINLESS COLLIES.

IN reading the Gazette we have seen very little news from this district, and that is not as it should be, when we have so many here who take an interest in the dog. But I suppose they are like ourselves, too careless to send a word to you.

Our dog Batchelor is looking well at present, and is proving a useful sire, not only of good lookers, but every pup, so far, where sold to farmers, has proved a worker. He, no doubt, is helped in this by the bitches, as all are thoroughly broken, and are kept at work right up to day of whelping. And if parents transmit a trait to their offspring, the puppies certainly should work.

We are of the opinion that a great many breeders cater too much to fancy, to the detriment of usefulness in the Collie. Take some of the very narrow headed, brainless specimens, and very often they are winners, and put them among a herd of cattle or a flock of sheep and it is soon seen that fashion has eradicated all natural instinct for the work, that the Collie was expected to perform. We do not intend to convey the idea that it is necessary to have abnormally large heads to have intelligent dogs; but there is reasonable ground for complaint with the thoroughbred Collies of the day. Are we not paying too much attention to the length and narrowness of head, coat, etc., etc., at the expense of the intelligence and power of endurance, as well as the instinct that should prompt a Collie to be up and doing, when among cattle or sheep, and not do like so many thoroughbreds do, run and hide at the sight of these animals?

We must not say any more just at present, or some of our Collie men will be after us for so describing the Collie of to-day. We have at present seven puppies, 5 dogs and 2 bitches, by Batchelor ex Wanda. They are all big strong fellows, nicely marked; now four weeks old.

We are yours,

TENNENT & BARNES,

London, Ontario.

MONTREAL COLLIE ITEMS.

I HAVE been around at most of the kennels in Montreal, and vicinity, and have seen a lot of promising young Collies. Of course, they are all promising when they are puppies. Mr. Watson, Secretary of the American Collie Club, imported a fine dog, and Mr. James Reid, of St. Lamberts, Que., was lucky enough to get his tricolor bitch served by him, the result, a fine litter. The sire Parkhill Galopin being a fresh importation, our enterprising President, and founder of the Montreal Canine Association. Mr. Jos. Reid went across the river and bought the pick of the litter, and thinks he has a blue clip. At Logan's Kennel, or I should say Bloss-som Kennels, where everything blooms, he has them by the score. Mr. Reid will let you take the pick but somehow or other they always leave the best. Some say it is the east end abattoir tripe, others say it is the red cow that puts the bloom on his Collies. At all events at the show, in the Arena, I heard a fine-looking Scotchman, from where they build fine canoes, making a five hundred dollar offer for the red cow.

At Afton Kennels, Knight Errant II, the white dog, and a few other good ones, are in the pink of condition, also their Dilhards, Midlothian Chief and Wishaw General. Mr. Motherwell, one of the partners, is in Scotland on business—I got it in a secret, but since I had the measles I can't keep anything—I heard he was seen at "Wishaw Kennels" talking very confidentially to Mr. Robert Tait, the premier Collie breeder, and judge of Scotland. The Collie men of Montreal are all on the tiptoe of expectation.

Mr. Walter Elliott, of Blair Athol Kennels has got a fine bitch puppy by Knight Errant II., ex Clover Blossom. She is undoubtedly the most likely one I have seen this year. If she keeps her head clean she will make some of the sky-scrappers shake out all their reefs, to come within hailing distance of her. We wish our young member every success.

Craikstone Kennels, (Mr. John Cumming), has a fine young dog in Craikstone Day Star, by that grand but unfortunate sire "Woodmansterne Conrad ex Logans Apple Blossom, that won first and riedal, owned and bred by a member. He has also a lot of young promising ones, including a fine young bitch, by the late Laurel Laddie. Mr. Cummings is the only thoroughbred Scotch shepherd I know in Montreal—and show dog or no show dog, he trains them to work for their living. Strathcona Kennels has a lot of fine looking Collies, and expects to take the pole from some of the flyers at our next show.

Mr. Wilson, of Point St. Charles, has thrown his incubators, brooders, cocks and hens, where Rob Roy sent Baillie Nicol Jarvie, and goes in for Collie breeding, And our auld freen, David Alexander, of Goose village fame, who took all the prizes at our local Collie show last summer, thinks they can repeat at our big show next spring.

Auchcairnie Kennels have about eighteen brood bitches, sable and white, and tricolor with Gem as king of the harem, and Hielan Rory assistant—this kennel is the largest outside of the Hunt Club.

R. S. KELLIE.

A Cocker Spaniel club was formed in Oakland, on December 8th, with a membership to begin with of about a dozen. The organization was called the California Cocker Club, and Mr. W. C. Ralston, is president, and Mr. E. C. Plume, Secretary-Treasurer.

MR. JNO. G. KENT.

PRESIDENT CANADIAN KENNEL CLUB, AND PROPRIETOR OF THE TERRA COTTA
KENNELS.

It seems fitting that in inaugurating this special series of portraits of prominent Canadian cynologists, our first choice should fall on the gentleman who so ably occupies the official seat of honor in Canadian Dogdom. Mr. Kent's interest in dogs is of many years' standing, and his kennel, the Terra Cotta Kennel, of greyhounds and wolfhounds, has been prominent on the show bench for a long period. His famous dogs have won the cream of the awards where he competed at such shows as New York, Boston, Chicago, and nearer home, at the big fall fixture at Toronto. As President of the Canadian Kennel Club, Mr. Kent brings that business acumen to bear on its affairs that has been acquired during a long and successful career as one of the heads of probably the most wide awake wholesale house of its line in Canada. During Mr. Kent's presidency, the club has increased in membership from about sixty to about two hundred and fifty, and this in but two years.

Mr. Kent is a well built, well set up specimen of Canadian manhood, whose personality attracts to him all that is best in kennel circles, and the Canadian Kennel Club is fortunate in having for its official head a gentleman who so freely gives of his best, both in time and talents.

EXPRESS RATES AGAIN.

WILL you kindly let me know if members of the C.K.C., get an advantage when shipping dogs by express, over the ordinary rates. The express charges that we have to pay on dogs purchased from eastern breeders are simply outrageous.

C. M. ROLSTON.

Vancouver, B. C.

Members of the C.K.C., get no special rates, but the club was partly instrumental in reducing the rate on long distances. You should now have to pay but one first-class rate, not two as heretofore.—ED.

THE DACHSHUND IN ENGLAND.

[TRANSLATED.]

ONE of my English friends sent me some time ago a few numbers of one of your contemporaries, which were of interest to me because they contained something about the Dachshund. In the contemporary in question the extraordinary statement is made that in Germany the Dachshund is used for hunting in packs, and that the "music" of the same is melodious and houndlike. From this the deduction is drawn that one has the right to consider the Dachshund a "hound," and that the German type is therefore wrong. I must say that I have never read such nonsense, and my first idea was that the whole thing was meant to be a joke, which had by mistake missed its proper place, namely, the columns of Punch. I am, however, sorry to say that the conviction was forced upon me, that I was not reading a comic journal. It is, in any case, very sad to find in a serious journal such total ignorance on the subject of sport in Germany, and I would like to give that journal the benefit of the doubt by assuming that by some mistake the Dachshund was mentioned instead of the Basset, who is really a packhound.

Principally the Dachshund is used with us for fox and badger below ground, but his sporting qualities are so many-sided that in some parts of Germany he is employed to hunt game in the forest and underwood, a task which, as far as I know, is allotted in England to the Spaniel. But the Dachshund is never used for hunting in the field, and in the forest he is generally worked singly, or at most in a couple, but never in a pack. How, therefore, anybody can deduce from the way that the Dachshund is used for sport in Germany, the right to call him a hound is a riddle to me.

The conditions under which shooting is followed in Germany are such that our German Pointer and sometimes also the Pointer and Setter are employed in finding and beating up game in the forest; but does that make them hounds? An illustration was also published that looked like a mixtum compositum, with the head of a Wolfhound. It was called a Dachshund who won first prize. Continental sportsmen must protect against that name being applied to such an animal, and I would propose to call it a Toy Bloodhound.

The Dachshund is kept in Austria, Russia, France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, and Sweden—in fact, all over the civilized world, and in all countries mentioned he is bred according to the German standard. Then why does England make an exception, and want to breed a Dachshund of a type which in character is the reverse of ours? What would English fanciers say if we started to breed

Fox-terriers with a Bulldog head, and then called the produce the German type of Fox-terrier? Englishmen would be justly indignant, and particularly so, the Fox-terrier breeders, who at present find a good market for their stock in Germany. "Do unto others as you wish that others do unto you" is a well-known proverb, and very apropos in this case. I must, however, admit that there are a good many English Dachshund breeders who are fair enough to breed to the German description of the Dachshund, and as we on the continent are doing our best to breed all English varieties of the dog strictly according to English standards, it is not asking too much that our fellow fanciers in England should treat our dogs in the same way. I sincerely hope that the English Dachshund Club will take an early opportunity to draw up a standard in agreement with the one adopted in Germany. If, in spite of that, some breeders adhere to the English type, then their dogs should not be called Dachshunds, but rather Toy Bloodhounds, and they could form a club which looks after that breed.

The German standard is the result of the most careful observations based on the sport for which Dachshunds are used. For instance, we want the ears only of medium length, set on high and far back, because the fox or badger is not to find in the dog's ears a part which they can readily attack. If I were to send a dog of the English type to earth, his ears would soon be in ribbons.

If the members of the English Dachshund Club were to construct an artificial earth and hold trials on badgers, they would soon see what a game sporting dog the Dachshund is; the German type would be adopted, and the English type would die a natural death. If I have been carried away by my subject to use somewhat strong language, I hope I shall be pardoned; but, as one of the oldest breeders of Dachshunds in this country, I thought it my duty to break a lance on behalf of my favorite, the German Dachshund. —EMIL ILGNER, In English Stock-keeper.

It may be of interest to note that "back north" the Dachshund is occasionally used by the settlers and hunters to "drive" deer, and that from his low formation and keen scent, he is well suited to the work.

ED GAZETTE.

Mr. Macdonald's business announcement will be found in its old position, on our front page. The merits and record of his stud dogs, Aldon Quaestor and Aldon Vandal, are there set forth in detail, and a liberal offer of wire bitches, by Quaestor, in whelp to Vandal, is made. One of these dames should prove a good investment for the moderate sum Mr. Macdonald asks for them.

NORTH AMERICAN FIELD
TRIAL CLUB.

THE annual meeting of the North American Field Trial Club was held on January 2, at the Manning House, Windsor, Ont.

The secretary-treasurer's report was read and referred to the auditors.

The following officers were then elected: President, M. K. Cowan, M.P.; first vice-president, D. G. Revell; second vice-president, A. Wigle; third vice-president, Dr. Campeau; fourth vice-president, George M. Hendrie; secretary and treasurer, R. Bangham; board of directors, A. Anderson, William Revell, T. W. Brook, W. E. Warner, F. E. Marcon and R. M. Morton; auditors, William Revell and T. W. Brook. Messrs. Montague Smith and William Tristem were elected honorary members and the secretary was instructed to extend to them and Mr. John Davidson the thanks of the club for the able conduct and the general satisfaction they gave as judges at the late trials. It might be stated that all who competed, both winners and losers, were loud in their praises of the judges, not even a murmur being heard.

A vote of thanks was also given to the retiring president, Mr. James B. McKay, who has held the office since the club was organized.

Mr. Frank Marcon stated that he had been informed that some members of the International Field Trial Club were anxious to amalgamate with the North American. He moved that an invitation be extended to the International Club to amalgamate with the North American if they are of the opinion that by so doing it would be for the best interests of the dog in Ontario and the adjoining states. Out of all those present not one would second Mr. Marcon's motion. It seemed to be the general opinion that there was room for both clubs; and as the Michigan club had opened their trials to Ontario and as the dates would not conflict, it would make a good circuit. Mr. Marcon's motion, therefore, fell through for the want of a second.

November 19, was the date chosen for the 1901 trials.

The caretaker of the grounds stated that no birds had been shot during the past season, and that all arrangements had been made to feed them when necessary during the winter.

F. BANGHAM,

Secretary and Treasurer.

Since printing the paragraph elsewhere referring to the New York Show, the following list of judges has been sent us as the one and only correct card. It is as follows: St. Bernards, mastiffs bloodhounds and deerhounds, Mr. Arthur Trickett, Kansas City, Mo.; Great Danes, Mr. J. Blackburn Miller, Newburgh, N. Y.; Russian wolfhounds, Mr. Edward L. Kraus, Slatington, Pa.; greyhounds, dalmatians, bull terriers, Airedale, Skye and Bedlington terriers, Mr. T. S. Bellin, Minneapolis, Minn.; fox hounds, sporting spaniels and collies, Mr. Harry Jarrett, Chestnut Hill, Pa.; pointers, Mr. George Jarvis, New York; setters, Mr. W. S. Bell, Pittsburg, Pa.; old English sheep dogs, basset hounds, black and tan terriers, Yorkshire terriers, toy terriers, pugs, Pomeranians, toy spaniels and miscellaneous classes, Mr. R. F. Mayhew, Clifton, L. I.; poodles, Mr. H. G. Trevor, Southampton, L. I.; bulldogs, H. C. Beadleston, New York; Boston terriers, Mr. J. F. Holt, Faneuil, Mass.; French bulldogs, Mr. John R. Buchan, New York; dachshunde, Mr. Joseph Graefle, New York; fox terriers, Mr. G. M. Carnochan, Riverdale-on-Hudson, N. Y.; Irish terriers, Mr. O. H. Donner, Rye, N. Y.; Scottish terriers, Mr. J. Steele MacKenzie, North Bend, O.; Welsh terriers, Mr. J. W. Mitchell, New York.

WORMS.

BY favor I have been allowed to ventilate the views I hold on the subject of helminthiasis in the columns of your valuable journal. So far my object has been to show that a better and more effectual system of ridding dogs and cats of these pests than that commonly in vogue is available, and I have also endeavored to explain that many morbid conditions observable in these animals are not, as is generally believed, independent entities, due to extraneous and unexplainable causes, but that they are in reality intimately associated with helminthiasis, and in the majority of cases owe their development to the presence of worms in the alimentary canal. In proof of this assertion in my last communication I presented a list of symptoms that I had observed in helminthic patients, which were practically the symptoms that appear in well-recognized ailments, and which when scientifically and systematically treated yielded to the action of the appropriately selected drug, both as to the destruction of the worms, the worm diathesis, and the accompanying morbid conditions.

In order to render the treatment of this subject complete, I propose to offer some explanation about my methods of procedure, and the remedies used under given conditions, and I do this all the more readily as I am given to understand it will be acceptable to some owners, although I am free to admit that it is very much like putting tools into the hands of one who has never been taught mechanics. Under such circumstances the unpractised and amateur workman frequently cuts his hands or otherwise injures himself; so it is I know with very many dog and cat owners who pride themselves upon their abilities in treating their own animals and advising friends respecting the management of theirs. Let the shoemaker stick to his last, thereby much trouble, anxiety and pecuniary loss would be saved.

In order to make the matter as clear as possible, I cannot do better than quote from my own experience several interesting cases, and give the treatment, but I shall refrain from mentioning names of owners and breeds of dogs and cats, as recognition might not be acceptable to persons concerned.

A highly bred little bitch whose normal weight would be about twelve pounds, came to me in a wretched condition, practically nothing more than skin and bone, the subject of tape worm, so weak she could not stand, when attempting to walk pitched head foremost, great internal irritation of the ears, sunken state of eyeballs with dilated pupils, intermittent pulse, every third beat missed, breathing very urgent, temperature slightly elevated, blood and mucous discharge from the uterus, anus swollen and haemorrhoids; she experienced great thirst, but retched without vomiting after drinking, took little or no food, vitality and nervous system frightfully depressed, special senses of hearing, seeing, and touch very acute, faeces at first, lumpy and coated with mucous, followed by a looser evacuation, experienced great difficulty in passing same, could not retain her urine, was extremely restless, and could not lie in one position two minutes together.

Now, in this case the ear, eye, and heart symptoms, together with restlessness, thirst, and enuresis were all covered by the remedy called, "spirelia anthelmia," which the bitch received in two drop doses every few hours. As is frequently the case, not only the symptoms specially pointing to this remedy yielded promptly to its action, but all the other symptoms referred to above were cured, and in ten days the bitch was practically convalescent, no sign of worms after the first three days appearing in the evacuations.

Again, a Toy dog, whose normal weight would be about 5lbs., was the subject of tapeworm and pin worms. This dog's sight was considerably affected when I first took him in hand, for he could, apparently see at a distance, but objects near at hand only very imperfectly. He experienced a good deal of irritation over the whole body, and the skin was in certain parts very scurfy, the coat also was rough and wiry; there was great irritation of the anus; every day he passed several scolices of the tapeworm; and continued to do so for four months, during the whole of which period he was receiving a powder night and morning of cina anthelmintica. The pin worms were not observed after the first week of treatment, within a month there was an improvement in the powers of vision, and the skin gradually assumed a healthy condition, and the coat became soft and silky. At the expiration of four months the owner reported that the patient was quite free from worms, and general health was good. This remedy covered the whole of the symptoms enumerated.

Another case was that of a large dog puppy, about six months old, whose weight would probably stand at sixty pounds or perhaps a little more. This animal was literally infested with long round worms, the ascaris marginata. They came away from him in nests: his faeces were dysenteric, being coated with mucous and blood. A considerable erythematous eruption developed about the head and ears, which he scratched very frequently until the parts were covered with a mass of bloody scabs; he was unable to retain his urine, which when passed was of a dark green color and evidently loaded with solids, the specific gravity low; the temperature of the body was considerably elevated, the pulse rapid and wiry, respirations normal, vitality low, and nervous system inordinately depressed, appetite fairly good, thirst at first very considerable. I commenced by giving hourly doses of aconite, which were continued for five consecutive hours. The dog then went to sleep, and kept very quiet for some hours, by which time the temperature had dropped, and the feverish symptoms indicated by heat and dryness of nose, heat of feet and body generally had abated. I then resorted to mercurius corrosivus, a dose every four hours, the effect of which was to arrest the dysenteric symptoms, restore the faeces to a normal condition, among them being observed batches of partially digested worms, and some few intact. This process went on for about a week, since which no helminths have been observed, and the general health of the dog has become established.

The case of a Toy dog, whose normal weight was about four pounds, with following symptoms, viz., distended abdomen, particularly after eating, capricious appetite, tendency to convulsions, constipated bowels, milky urine, nervous irritability, was treated in the first place with spigelia anthelmia, which acted very favorably upon all the symptoms but one, namely, distension of the abdomen; this symptom was accompanied by considerable rumbling in the intestines. I therefore discontinued the spigelia, and administered lycopodium, which effectually completed the cure, and restored the little animal to perfect health, no worms having been observed for some months now.

Cats also are amenable in a notable manner to this constitutional treatment. I will quote one interesting case. A well-bred young tom was the subject of long round worms, known as the ascaris mystax, the principal of the concomitant symptoms being a persistent scaly eruption, small flakes peeled off, and left the under surface raw, and sometimes bleeding; if the eruption healed up and cleared off in one place it broke out in another. The owner kept this patient under the most favorable conditions right out in the country, and gave every reasonable attention to it. The cat had been treated with the ordinary vermifuges without the slightest benefit. I at once addressed myself to the treatment of the eruption as indicated by the symptoms, and administered a remedy called mezereum. It took about six weeks regular and persistent dosing to effect a cure, but this was ultimately attained with the complete eradication of the worms.

I could keep on multiplying details of cases such as the foregoing, but already I fear I have trenchéd upon your space unconsciously. I have not mentioned the various strengths of the remedies relied upon lest everyone should be tempted to use them empirically.

THE MONTREAL CANINE ASSOCIATION ELECTS OFFICERS.

IT WAS DECIDED TO HOLD A BENCH SHOW IN THE SPRING.—AS-SOCIATION IS FLOURISHING.

AN adjourned general meeting of the Montreal Canine Association, was held in the Natural History Rooms, Montreal. Mr. Joseph Reid presided, and there was a large attendance of shareholders. The first business was the reception of the treasurer's report, which, on being read, proved to be a very satisfactory one. The association has assets to the amount of something like $586, with a balance in bank and on hand of nearly $300, with no outstanding liabilities.

The secretary, Mr. E. C. Short, submitted a statement in connection with the last show, which showed that everything in connection therewith had been settled on a satisfactory basis, and that the result had been a gain to the association. Both reports were received and referred to the auditors.

The election of officers for the current year was the next business, and the result, as reported by the scrutineers, Messrs. W. Elliott, F. C. Saunders and A. Stuart, was: President, Mr. Joseph Reid, (acclamation); first vice-president, Mr. D. Crawford; second vice-president, Mr. A. H. Hersey; treasurer, Mr. Jos. A. Laurin, (acclamation); secretary, Mr. E. C. Short, (acclamation); Executive committee, Messrs. Jno. A. Pitt, Alex. C. Smith, W. O. Roy, W. Henry, Jas. Lindsay, S. P. Howard, John Cumming, D. Taylor, Jos. Quinn, D. W. Ogilvie, G. H. Webber. Auditors, Messrs. S. P. Howard and J. A. Brosseau.

The committee were instructed to go ahead in the matter of making arrangements for a spring show. The meeting dispersed after passing votes of thanks to the retiring officers, the chairman and the scrutineers.

TRAIL HUNTING AND TRAIL HOUNDS.

By F. C. HIGNETT.

It is difficult to conceive how it happens that Trail Hunting does not make more rapid strides in popular favor, since it is not only a health-giving and exciting sport, but it has the additional advantage of being inexpensive, and can therefore be participated in by all classes of the community.

In some parts of the north the sport is very popular, particularly in the Lake District, where, in almost every town and village, a number of these hounds may be found. Hereabouts many of the very best have been bred and trained, the extraordinary speed and cleverness which they have attained being really surprising.

My object in writing this article is to give as concisely as possible a description of the sport, in the hope that it may perhaps be the means of creating an additional interest in, and giving an impetus to, what is admittedly a most enjoyable, healthy, and innocent, yet inexpensive, recreation.

By some outward means Trail Hunting has become associated, in the minds of a certain section of the community at least, with something not quite de rigueur. Let me at once say a greater fallacy never gained credence, as witness the company at the Grasmere Sports, where the trails are witnessed by the very elite of society; not only residents, but visitors from all parts of the world.

The origin of the sport, as indeed of the Trail Hound itself, is apparently lost in the obscurity of ages past. Some old hunters aver that the hound was produced by a cross between a Greyhound and a Bloodhound; others insist that the Greyhound and Harrier, or Foxhound, are the responsible ancestors; while still others are positive that they were originally bred from the Harrier and the Deerhound, a by no means unlikely suggestion, for even if objection be made on the score of coat, the difference could easily be accounted for by the process of evolution.

But from whatever parentage they sprang originally, certain it is they have from the earlier part of the century, at all events, been bred very much among themselves, with an occasional outcross of Foxhound, and for years past there has been such a family likeness, or similarity of type, that they may fairly claim, and are now acknowledged to be, a distinct variety. In height they vary from 21 inches to 24 inches, and when in racing form weigh from 35 lbs. to 46 lbs. In them we find combined extraordinary speed with extreme scenting powers, and the ease with which they clear a six-foot boundary wall, or any other obstacle, when going at full speed, would surprise the oldest master of hounds in the shires when first he made their acquaintance. As an instance of their extraordinary speed I may mention that a number of North Country hounds were correctly timed over a measured mile on the sands, and, although running in the teeth of a strong head wind, they covered the distance in 2 minutes, 32 seconds; and on grass, down wind, the same distance was covered in 2 minutes, 25 seconds. It is also on record that 6 miles 975 yards, actual measurement, over rough, stony country, intersected by 21 stone walls, averaging 5 feet 6 inches in height, were covered in 24 minutes 30 seconds, in a private trail, undertaken to correct the local report, which had given the distance as nine miles, and the time as 23 minutes.

A pure bred Foxhound, by Lord Galway's Harkaway, drafted from the pack because it was too fast, and properly trained for the purpose, invariably took three minutes longer to cover the same course. This same Foxhound belonged at that time to my informant, an esteemed friend and devotee to the sport, whose testimony is not only to be implicitly relied upon, but has the additional advantage of being disinterested. It will readily be assumed that when cutting the work out at such a speed, the hounds run mute, or nearly so. Needless to say, therefore, riding to these hounds is entirely out of the question. The best horse that was ever foaled, mounted by the hardest rider that ever crossed a saddle, would very quickly be thrown out.

In disposition the generality of them are quite sociable, though undoubtedly game, quickly resenting any overbearing attitude on the part of other dogs; but that the old Adam still dwells in odd ones is occasionally made manifest by their love of human flesh; with such renegades the constant use of the muzzle is a necessity, of course.

So far as training goes, very little, if any, schooling is necessary; the puppies take to the work of their own accord, as though jealous of the fame and traditions of their ancestors. When old enough, they may be given an occasional spin over the trail, in company of experienced hounds, which will encourage them and put more dash into their efforts. The preparation of a hound for an actual race involves some care, though not more than is usually given to any other animal in training, and a considerable amount of healthy exercise, as will readily be understood when the severity of the task, and the extraordinary amount of physical endurance to be displayed, if he is expected to cover the distance—usually from six to ten miles of rough moorland or mountain country, over hills and through cloughs, intersected by high walls and other obstacles, over which the trails are run—with any hope of success. And it follows that the trainer who takes his hound to a fixture in condition fit for the work before him, may be relied upon to be as fit as a fiddle himself.

It is surprising, therefore, that we have not more amateur owners and trainers, among the thousands of the dog-loving community, who not only take pleasure in the company of dogs but delight to see them at work. In most parts of England, there is suitable country, within easy access of towns, over which trails could be run; while for those who cared to train their own hounds, no cheaper nor more health-giving enjoyment could be desired. For those who prefer to take their pleasure a-wheel, and like to be accompanied by a dog, here is their ideal animal.

So much for the hounds; now for the hunt. The trail may be laid over any kind of land, but, as I have before stated, as it is quite impossible to keep up with the hounds, they would soon be lost to sight in a flat country; for this reason alone a hilly country is much to be preferred, for then, by a little judicious selection of the course, the trail may be laid up and along the hillsides, thus enabling the spectators to view the progress of the competitors during the greater part of the journey. No regard need be paid to the nature of the going, grass or moorland, over rocks and fences, through bogs or plantations; in fact, wherever the trail has been laid the unerring nose of the stout-hearted Trail Hound will lead him on, and the greater the obstacles he has to negotiate the more he seems to delight in his work. As to the scent, or, as it is commonly called, the trail, all that is required is an old woollen stocking, well saturated with aniseed and paraffin mixed; this is attached to a string, sufficiently long to allow it to trail behind the person who is sent out to "lay the trail," and who should cover the whole course long before the hounds are started. A circular course is adopted where practicable, for this enables both the start and the finish, as well as the race itself, to be viewed by the spectators; but it is advisable not to have these two points in close proximity to each other, though they should be in the same field. Place the spectators in a body at one end or side, on rising ground if possible, for that enables everybody to see and forms a natural grandstand. Let the layer put down his trail some distance, say, 50 to 100 yards, according to the size of the field, from one of the fences, and strike away directly, over or through it, into the country, returning after the completion of his journey, through the fence at the opposite end of the field, which it is advisable should be made the winningpost, to save the confusion likely to ensue if the hounds are allowed to reach the crowd before the race is decided.

KLEIN'S COLUMN

A WELL-BRED

BULL BITCH

One Guaranteed to Breed or Guaranteed to be in Whelp

mated to the Best Sire in America

Champion Ivel Rustic, is the most profitable business investment. The combination of SPORT and PROFIT appeals to all. I have sold Bull bitches the past season for $100 which netted to their owners OVER $450 in the first litter. There is one party in my neighborhood (a refined lady) who has cleared over $1600 this year out of 3 Bull bitches bought from me and bred to CH. IVEL RUSTIC.

Why Don't You Buy One

For Yourself? Your Wife? Your Daughter? I guarantee to buy the puppies back if you are afraid you could not dispose of them.

Write to me about it anyway.

If you already own a Bull bitch, breed her to Champion Ivel Rustic, everything considered, the best Bull-dog in America. He is a sure stock-getter. He is the sire of Winners. He only recently (Philadelphia) again defeated all the crack Bull-dogs in the country, except Rodney Stone. His service fees are reasonable and within reach of everybody, $25 (after January 1st, $35.)

DACHSHUNDS,

I am tired winning all and everything in the Dachshund classes. I want good, strong, hot competition. I have offered to all members of the American Dachshund Breeders' Association my services free at any of the coming shows. I will go one better. I will give FREE to any member of said Association (or any one declaring his or her willingness to become a member) ONE OF MY BEST BROOD BITCHES, provided he agrees to the following three conditions: 1. To breed said bitch to one of Venio Farm Stud Dogs. 2. To show the progeny at, at least, four shows a year. 3. That I have the refusal of any young stock he wishes to dispose of. The bitch itself remains the property of the Venio Farm Kennels.

There has not been a prominent winner in the country for 5 years which did not come from my Kennels. I HAVE BRED THEM ALL and the very dams of these Winners I offer now to you FREE.

I show dogs because I love dogs. Have your dogs handled by one who loves dogs. If everybody who shows dogs would love them, I would handle them all. As it is, I handle more than anybody else. (From one-eighth to one-tenth of the entire shows right here in the immediate vicinity of New York. Special carloads of my own for distant shows.) NEW ORLEANS and MEMPHIS NEXT.

A new field entirely, and certainly advantageous to breeders. Communicate at once (if you have anything to send) with
