Messrs. H. S. and R. Rolston are applying for the registration of the word Assiniboine as their kennel name. Action will be taken at the next meeting of the C. K. C. executive.

The following announcement from Our Dogs makes interesting reading: Stock-Keeper Shares For Sale.— Mr. Geo. R. Krehl, having decided to sever his connection with the "Stock-Keeper," in consequence of the policy of the Board instituted during his enforced absence through illness, is prepared to dispose of the whole of his interest in the paper at a figure at which the shares have recently changed hands. For the same reason the shares of Mr. E. B. Joachim and Mr. Edgar Farman are also for disposal, and applications should be addressed to Messrs. Morse, Hewitt & Farman, Solicitors.

The Stock-Keeper, without Geo. R. Krehl's distinct personality pervading its columns, is hard to reconcile to one's idea of things as they should be. Evidently even our big cousin across the water has "troubles of his own."

* * *

Mr. J. R. Innes, the secretary, has called the regular monthly meeting of the Montreal Canine Association for January 16th, 1902. We should be glad to publish reports regularly of these meetings if the "press man" of the Association will do his duty.

* * *

It is intended to hold a show in Winnipeg in either February or March to fit in with the southern circuit if possible, and the western men are very anxious that Ontario should be well represented. Anyone who could spare the time and could engage to take out a string should write Mr. H. S. Rolston to Winnipeg.

Several good specials and cups have already been donated, and as the show will be held under C. K. C. rules wins will count towards championships.

Mr. Henry Reynolds, Port Hope, has something up his sleeve for Toronto next fall for the Beagle puppy class, bred from his Cliffmead Zaida and his young dog Regal. There are five in the bunch, all promising

* * *

Mr. Jno. G. Kent, the president of the Canadian Kennel Club, has sent each member a most artistic calendar, with his Christmas greetings. The calendar is, of course, doggy, and depicts a hunting scene in colors, portraying two Setters at work. Since its issue, Mr. Kent has had more applications for further copies than he could supply, much as he regrets it.

* * *

Messrs. Spratts Patent have sent us a "poster" calendar of unique design and, needless to say, advocating "Spratts" for everything. A pair of pussies in front have that satisfied look that follows a full dish of Spratts, and the other pictures — three, dogs, game and poultry — have all a healthy, well-fed, well-bred look.

* * *

Messrs. Stableford and Mills have sold Mr. Frank Jay Gould the St. Bernard, Mayor of Watford. This is a sound, active rough, a full brother to Mr. Miller's Bayview Baden-Powell. Mr. Gould has had the dog in view for some time.

We are pleased to see by the stirring letter of that good, all-round fancier, A. P. Mutchmor, of Ottawa, that the capital club has decided to give a show in that city in April next. Ottawa contains many friends of the dog and always has done so, and it needs but a strong effort of united forces to place her in the front rank as a show town. The Canadian Kennel Club will give five bronze medals as specials in addition to those mentioned by Mr. Mutchmor, and we think we can promise that the president of the club, Mr. Jno. G. Kent, with his usual liberality, will donate a handsome cup. The Canadian Fox Terrier Club and the Spaniel Club might add to their membership by offering their trophies here also.

* * *

We have been asked the question, is Toronto to hold a show next spring? at least twenty times within the last two months. We cannot say definitely, the Canadian Fox Terrier Club feels like resting on past honors for a season, but we understand the Ontario Collie Club have at least a Collie show under consideration, as this is really the best season in which to show this breed where heavy coat is so desirable.

* * *

Will Montreal hold a spring show?

* * *

How would this do?

Ottawa, April 7, 8, 9.

Fox Terriers—James A. Caldwell, Jr., of Penllyn, Pa.

Irish Terriers—Singleton Van Schaick, of New York, N.Y.

Scottish Terriers—W. P. Fraser, of Toronto.

Newfoundlands, Greyhounds, Whippets, Bull Terriers, Dalmatians, Skye Terriers, Black and Tan, Bedlington, Yorkshire and Toy Terriers, Pomeranians—T. S. Bellin, of Minneapolis, Minn.

Bloodhounds, Mastiffs, Russian Wolf Hounds, Deerhounds, Griffons, Old

English Sheep dogs, Airedale Terriers, Toy Spaniels, Chow Chows, Pugs and miscellaneous—R. F. Mayhew, Clifton, N.Y.

Mr. Fraser, the man from Canada, has had more than one good Scottie, has never lost his interest in the breed, and knows what he wants, so should prove a welcome addition to Mr. Mortimer's list.

NEW CLUB FORMED IN VICTORIA.

A meeting of dog fanciers was held in T. Plimley's bicycle store, with J. W. Creighton in the chair, and T. P. McConnell acting as secretary pro tem, when it was decided to form a new kennel club, to be known as the "Victoria City Kennel Club." The following officers were duly elected for the year 1902: President, C. W. Minor; vice-presidents, T. P. McConnell, Mrs. Hitchcock; secretary, O. C. Bass; treasurer, T. Plimley; superintendent, F. Turner; managing committee, T. P. McConnell, T. Plimley, R. R. Watson, Otto Weller, J. W. Creighton, C. H. Southfield, Wm. Bostock; bench committee, T. Plimley, T. P. McConnell, R. R. Watson, Otto Weller, Dr. L. Hall, D. Campbell, J. W. Creighton, F. Turner, C. R. Goodwin, W. C. Adams, G. Florence, J. Phillips, E. Pferdner, Wm. Bostock, J. McSweeney, A. G. Davies; veterinary surgeons, Drs. Tolmie and Hamilton. The meeting adjourned until a later date, when bench show dates and other matters of importance will be considered. A full attendance of all those interested in dogs and dog matters is requested. The membership fee is $2 for the year. Tickets may be had from any member of the committees or the officers.

Show in Winnipeg in March.

At a meeting of the Western Kennel Club held last evening it was decided to hold a bench show March 20th, 21st and 22nd, and as soon as formalities have been gone through we will send you a check and claim these dates. We have chosen the above dates in anticipation of getting some entries from Chicago. The club held a very successful show last year, except from a financial standpoint; this year a good entry is already assured and think we should pull out all right. We appreciated last year the prizes given by the Canadian Kennel Club, and, if it is not asking too much, we would appreciate very much the same consideration this year. We have had a die struck off for the purpose of getting medals for ourselves, but we find that the C. K. C. medals are much more appreciated than any given by this club, and I would like you to see if you can arrange this matter for us.

The committee chosen for the bench show are as follows: J. Lemon, Geo. Carruthers, F. W. Scott, C. C. Bennett, A. C. Cummings, H. H. Cooper, V. H. G. Pickering, F. Code, A. H. M. Clarke, 316 Langside street, Winnipeg, secretary, and myself. The prize list is well under way and we expect to have it out in about a week. It is not the intention of the club to give any money prizes, but a large number of specials have been offered.

I wish to acknowledge the receipt of the handsome calendar from our worthy president, Mr. J. G. Kent.

Yours truly,

H. S. Rolston.

Winnipeg, Jan. 15, 1902.

Color of Field Dogs.

It has been a great many years since there has been such a variety of color in good field dogs as has been shown during the past year. In the early days of field trials lemon and white, and liver and white, were common Setter colors. But they gave way to the fashionable black, white and tan. For years this has been the popular color, some breeders and sportsmen going so far as to refuse to have any other than black, white and tan Setters in their kennels.

This color selection, which has been carried on persistently for many years, has had the effect of making that color predominate to a very large degree. But within recent years breeders have not been so particular with regard to color, being satisfied to keep the off-colored dogs where other qualities have been good enough to warrant it. As a result, there have come up within the past three years a number of good dogs that are not of the fashionable color, and at this year's trials they were shown in unusually large numbers, fully a dozen lemon and white Setters getting places in the important field trials. Among the number in this list are several of exceptional merit, notably Count Whitestone, Robert Count Gladstone, Ortiz Lad and Sport's Boy.

Mr. Avent, who is a stickler for color and has been breeding the black, white and tan for a great many years, has a Derby dog that is liver and white. He ran him at Manitoba, where he made a most excellent showing. This dog showed so much quality his color was overlooked, much as Mr. Avent dislikes it.

There is this to be said in favor of all these off-colored dogs: They were selected originally because of their promise, which in the minds of their owners outweighed the color objection.

Of course color has little or nothing to do with actual field merit. A certain color is important because it is fashionable, and being fashionable it gives to the dog an increased commercial value. Aside from their individual fancy, breeders are governed in the breeding for color by the public taste.

But breeders need not fear to use these prize-winning lemon and white Setters because of their color. The fashionable color is the predominating color in the breed, and it will assert itself in the progeny of these lemon and white sires. Almost any black, white and tan Setter, bred to one of these lemon and white dogs, will be likely to produce more puppies of her own color than of the dog with which she is mated. Not that the dam is more prepotent in the matter of color than the sire, but because the sire's ancestry is largely black, white and tan.

The Pointers, too, which have been in the fore at field trials, were numerous lemon and white, liver and white being the fashionable Pointer color. A number of years ago, when the light and delicate lemon and white Pointers were plentiful, the color became unpopular, and the big, strong liver and white dog was in favor. For a number of years the liver and white color was the thing and breeders shunned the lemon and white dogs. Within more recent years there has been less objection to the lemon and white Pointer. In fact, there are many good breeders to-day who prefer the lemon and white color for Pointers.

With regard to Pointer color the public taste is not influenced by the same causes to-day as it was a number of years ago. The delicate little lemon and white toy Pointer has passed away. When he was in evidence he was not in high favor because of his want of workmanlike qualities, and naturally the color became associated with Pointer weakness and became unpopular. We now have a rugged family of lemon and white Pointers, with plenty of liver and white blood in their pedigrees. They are no longer objectionable on account of their color. Some sportsmen prefer it to the liver and white. Certain it is that we now have some very handsome lemon and white field trial Pointers.—Am. Field.

Mrs. Coleman, we learn, will show a brace of Bedlingtons in New York in February.

Mr. Musgrave Morris, Minnedosa, Man., has a nice litter ten months old of four by Norfolk Trueman, ex Aldon Esther by Aldon Quaestor. Two are dogs and two bitches, and they should help out the fancy a bit in Manitoba.

* * *

We are glad to know from Mr. Little that the hardy Scottish Terrier has taken fresh root in America and is fast growing into popular favor. This fact is emphasized by further indications and we may soon look for an increased number of specimens at our shows. Mr. Little has had so many inquiries for Scotties that he finds it difficult to supply the demand for decent puppies and even for more mature and valuable dogs.

* * *

Mr. Fraser sends us a stud card of his two grand wires, Champion Matchmaker and Champion Endcliffe Banker. Matchmaker's pedigree is extended in detail for six generations, and if for this reason alone the booklet is worth possessing as a work of reference. From his long list of wins we notice that he has pretty well won all over England, including several times the special for best any variety. He has sired many of the best dogs living.

* * *

Banker is so well known here that it seems almost superfluous to say that he is the sire of such dogs as the well-known wires Bank Note, Half Back, Banker's Daughter, Norfolk Bristles and many others.

Norfolk Craftsman was sold at the L. K. A. show to Mr. E. A. Hardin, of Atlanta, Ga. He is by Norfolk Richmond ex that grand bitch, Norfolk Handicraft, and is a good, all-round Terrier.

* * *

Mrs. Bradley-Dyne's new Irish Terrier is a dog of great bone, built on galloping lines, and carries a coat of the right texture. His ears, though small, might be carried more correctly, but this fault can be overcome by correct mating of some matrons that excel here, in Mrs. Bradley-Dyne's kennel.

* * *

The new Scottie was got over simply on his record as a producer of winners, and will be used for this purpose alone. Several youngsters from this kennel will come out at Seattle, and one in particular, a son of Loyne Ruffian, who is much better than the usual run, a cobby dog of quality.

* * *

An opportunity is now given breeders of securing the services of the Irish Terrier, Brigg's Muddler, a son of Ch. Brigg's Best and Leeds Molly, the dam of the winning bitches at New York and Boston last winter. This dog possesses a beautifully long head and dense coat, and as his breeding could hardly be improved on, he should make a most successful sire.

* * *

Mr. Southcott, of the Parkdale Kennels, has seven alive out of a litter of eight, by Bullet Proof, from his Lady, a full sister to Masterpiece. Six of these are dogs. Lady is a most prolific breeder, her former litter by a son of Milton Muddler consisting of seven, of which six were of the male sex.

Mr. Hayes, of Hamilton, is rejoicing in the litter he has by Champion Norfolk Mainstay out of his bitch Carrie Nation, that won at the late Hamilton show. The little lot consists of two dogs and one of the other sex.

BLACK AND TAN CLUB.

The first meeting of the committee of the Black and Tan Terrier Club of America was held in the Russell House, Ottawa, Jan. 1st, at 2 p.m., all the members being present, consisting of F. C. McLean, Hull, Pres. Geo. G. Mitchell, Toronto, Vice-Pres. R. J. McGaughey, Pembroke, Ont., Sec.-Treas. W. H. Williams, Pembroke, Ed. Mack, Toronto. After making a round and seeing all the Black and Tans in Ottawa and Hull, they got right down to business at once and inside one hour had the by-laws, which will govern this organization for the benefit of the Black and Tan Terrier in America, adopted, also the standard and scale of points, which they particularly wished impressed on the judges. The Sec.-Treas.' report consisted chiefly of the work he had gone through in organizing the club and bringing it to the point it was now at. The committee then instructed him to open a bank account, and asked him to draw the amount of his expenses to date out of the club's funds. This he would not do, but stated that he was now open to receive subscriptions to the challenge cup, for the club, when Messrs. McLean, Mack and Williams subscribed five dollars each, all the other members of the committee having previously subscribed.

It was decided to leave the matter of conditions for the cups, etc., until their meeting on July 1st. But on motion of Messrs. W. H. Williams and Ed. Mack, it was unanimously carried that the secretary be instructed to communicate with the secretary of the Ottawa Kennel Club, offering two medals at their coming show, one for best novice Black and Tan Terrier bitch, and one for best novice Black and Tan Terrier dog. After several other items of instructions to the secretary, a vote of thanks was tendered the secretary for the work he had done and the wish was expressed that he would live to be repaid by seeing the club become one of the strong specialty clubs of America, which it cannot help coming to with such enthusiastic members and fanciers at its head. The meeting then adjourned.

R. J. McGaughey,
Sec.-Treas.

THE WEIGHT AND SIZE OF TERRIERS, ESPECIALLY BLACK AND TANS.

Editor Gazette:

Dear Sir,—I notice with satisfaction, as one of the oldest breeders of Black and Tans in America, that a club has been organized to foster the breed. But I also feel a certain amount of anxiety when a new club is formed, inasmuch as such an organization, by giving authority to certain views, thus fixes and stereotypes them as it were. As may be seen by a reference to page 435 of the Gazette, one of the highest authorities in England has condemned the Fox Terriers of the day, many of them, for being too big. And he is right. The only safe course in forming the standard for any breed is to bear in mind the purpose for which the variety in question is intended.

Now, a Black and Tan is, above all things, a dog for ratting. He should be a sort of rat-trap, and for this purpose a large specimen is not so well adapted as a smaller dog. For one thing, he is too high; his mouth (trap) is too far from the creature to be caught; so that I hope the new club will not encourage large specimens.

A well-made, active dog of sixteen to eighteen pounds, will best serve the purpose, and a dog of twenty-four pounds is quite out of the question. He may be a nice animal, but he cannot be a typical Black and Tan. This breed is discouragingly difficult to keep in condition, so far as skin and coat are concerned, and if the club will encourage good condition by giving prizes for it and express itself strongly against "faking," it will do the exhibitors, as well as their animals, a service.

Truly yours,

little can be done except in writing up (to some extent) the trials which are being held in the south, and particularly giving detailed reports of trials held in Canada, even the very smallest. I understand there are small trials held in Western Ontario, other than the one or two which are recognized as large ones, and, beside this, squibs or "notices" or "write-ups" of dogs, kennels, or field trial men, I think, would have a tendency to draw into closer touch the sporting dog men, as the same class of work keeps the bench show men in touch with the C. K. C. At the time approaching the trials a greater interest might be created by the club offering a medal or cup to each district or club, to be competed for by men who are members of C. K. C., or by dogs which are registered in C.K.C. Stud Book. I am sure the secretaries of F.T. I am glad the club has taken up this matter, and the progress will necessarily be slow, particularly as this class of people are now well served by the numerous American sporting papers and clubs, and they will have to be weaned, but if the persistent

J. G. Kent, Esq.—Would it not be interesting to members of the C. K. C., and of advantage in drawing new members to the club, if some field trials for dogs were given under the patronage of the C. K. C. a few times a year, say for Beagles, Greyhounds, Foxhounds, Setters, Pointers, etc. They could be held at the Woodbine or other suitable place, and the prizes given be in proportion to the entrance money, which should be numerous and high enough to cover all the club's expenses. No doubt there would be some gentlemen members willing to give a few special prizes for certain classes (I for one to help the sport along would contribute a prize). I think many non-members who heard of the trials, having dogs they had confidence in, would become members for the sake of running their dogs and having the day's sport.

The dogs could be classified; say dogs or bitches, under one year old, and then aged dogs, etc, the standard for size being the standard in each class according to the C. K. C. rules. Whether non-registered dogs should be allowed to compete would be matter, as would be many other points, for consideration; but I have just in a crude way outlined my ideas in this matter and trust you will see your way to bring the matter before the other members of the club at your convenience. Waiting favor of your reply,

Toronto, Ont. John G. Harvey.

ARE TWO CLUBS DESIRABLE?

The Vancouver Island Kennel Club lost a few of its members on the death of Dr. Duncan, and we thought we would like the club to be more representative, the subscription of twenty-five dollars having kept the club principally to the Doctor's personal friends, or at any rate to wealthy dog owners, and so we lowered the subscription to $5.00, and invited outsiders to come in and join us. They came, but said they could only afford $2.00 as a subscription. We said we'd take that and they were to collect these dues and forward the names to the treasurer before our annual meeting. We next hear they have thrown us over and formed a club of their own. They were to bring us seventy-five new members for certain to offset the fact we had nearly $200 on hand as cash balance. We also carefully explained to them that if properly managed a kennel show was a business proposition. I think they have treated us very shabbily, but as I bear no grudge for anything that is in the interests of canine matters, I am quite willing, for one, to step back and let them handle the bench show. I only hope they will keep the show under the rules of our national club, the C. K. C.

HAMILTON ITEMS.

Fanciers here are all well pleased with the way their stock has sold during the past year. Going through their kennels you will find them all sold out of young stock. Every day we hear of some one wanting to purchase a young dog, and you can scarcely find anyone who can fill the bill. I speak of all breeds. This speaks well for the quality and also the reputation of the Hamilton dog men, but at the same time it seems too bad to have to turn business away.

Mr. Jos. Kennedy is busy getting ready for New York. It is whispered around that he has a new card up his sleeve. We hope he will be able to play it all O.K., but no matter; Joe is not a quitter. He stays with the game, and he knows when he gets all that is coming to him.

Mrs. S. Gammon has lost her Yorkshire Terrier, Blue Bells, who did so well at the Brantford show; more distemper. Her beautiful little Cocker, Lady Dottie, has had a hard struggle with the same complaint, but is in a fair way to recovery.

Mr. Geo. H. Carley sold to A. G. Blain a Fox Terrier puppy, by Norfolk Blue ex Aldon Aurora.

What! Another litter from Fred Small's black Cocker, Floss? Yes; twenty puppies in eighteen months. She is certainly a money-maker, as her offspring find ready sales at good prices. We have heard her owner say that she is by far the best paying thing he has in his possession.

Jas. Hughson reports business good with his Boston Terrier, Benny H.,

his latest visitors being from the kennels of M. T. Collins, St. Thomas, and Mr. Edmonds, Norwich.

Mark O'Rourke will be out in full bloom at New York next month, with a pair of light weight Bull Terriers, under twenty pounds, also a pair under thirty pounds. We expect to see him in the money as usual.

A. B. Baxter's Great Dane bitch, Cleopatra, is dead. Five weeks ago she gave birth to six puppies, all dogs, which made her owner feel very proud. But hard luck came along and took away the best Dane bitch around these parts. Five of the puppies are doing well, and look as if they had not felt the loss of a mother. Most breeders are anxious to have male puppies, but here is a case where a female would be more than acceptable.

Mr. S. Woods has a litter of five Bull Terriers from his bitch, who was the winner at the Gore Kennel show. Mr. Woods is a new Bull Terrier breeder here, who we expect to see make some of the older heads look to their lamps.

Who would ever think Santa Claus would find his way to Dundas? But he did, and we find he was very liberal to H. C. Davis. His red bitch, Office Girl, has six red and one black by Little Wonder, and his black bitch, Kolo, has four reds and five blacks by Champion Hamilton Jack. There should be a lot of good ones among them. We hope Herb will have better luck than he has had heretofore.

E. MACDONELL,

P.O. Box 120 1.02 Kingston, Ont.

Miss Eleanor Macdonell's kennel has suffered sadly since the Toronto show, from distemper, in consequence of which she, unfortunately, lost Knoydart Pete. Knoydate Fashion, Cornwall Redskin, Knoydart Romany and two others, surely a disheartening blow.

To crown all, Knoydart Chloe, a good daughter of Ch. Romany Rye, got at a box of arsenic pills with the usual effect. In spite of all that could be done in the way of emetics and antidotes, she paid the penalty of her inquisitiveness and, we fear, some one's carelessness, too.

As even in Cocker breeding — and losing — every cloud has its silver lining, the advent of a kaleidoscopic litter by Miss Macdonell's imported Braeside Blue Jacket, is the recompense. This is the dog's first litter, and includes a blue roan, a red roan, a liver roan and a nicely marked black and white. They are all cobby, with the requisite bone and coats, so surely more than one should prove a success in the variety class.

Miss Macdonell is a member of the Ladies' Kennel Association of America and the American Spaniel Club, and so keeps in touch with all that is going of interest to ladies in Spanielism.

We are sorry that our old friend, Mr. Perley G. Keyes, of Ottawa, finds his time so fully taken up with affairs of state—he is Secretary of the Department of the Interior — that he feels he must even resign his membership in the Canadian Kennel Club. Mr. Keyes has bred and owned many a good Cocker and the prefix Rideau often brought victory to Ottawa. Rideau Flossie in particular was one of the best black bitches ever whelped.

Red Wonder by Red Obo ex Lady Leta is now owned by the Newcastle Kennels, Brookline, Mass., and so is within easy distance of Canadian breeders. At the moderate fee of ten dollars, this sound red Cocker's services should be in repute.

WHO OWNS THE PUPPY?

I am having a dispute about the ownership of a pup, and would like to have your opinion on the matter. My dog lined a bitch about the 4th of October, and a little over two weeks ago she had a litter of five pups—one dog and four bitches. Now I have never charged a fee for the service, therefore always have had first choice of pups. I, of course, claim the dog, but the owner of the bitch says, as there is only one dog in the litter, it should go to the breeder, and I should take one of the bitches. This is the first time I have had any trouble of this kind. Would you kindly let me know at your earliest convenience if I am not entitled to the dog pup.

Yours truly,

Cocker.

Our reply read: If your arrangement was to get pick of litter, i.e. first choice, then you are entitled to Ottawa to Have a Show in April.

Our kennel club has at last got down to business and selected dates for holding a show, which I trust the Canadian Kennel Club will ratify. We are engaging Mr. Jas. Watson, of New York, as judge, and intend doing all that is possible to make it a success. It will of course be a blue ribbon show, but there will also be some very good specials offered by way of medals and cups. We now have a membership of ninety, with several applications in that will come before the next meeting of the executive.

We have had two matinees, both of which proved very interesting and were largely attended. On Monday evening last the club took up Collies and Foxhounds and some very good specimens were shown. All were greatly interested in the manner in which Mr. Williams went over Foxhounds, and at present local owners of dogs in this variety are rather mum for fear some one who was at the meeting the other night will tell him what he don't like to hear about his dog. The Black and Tan Terrier Club have very generously offered two medals to be given at this show. You will notice that the dates we have chosen will fall in nicely after Boston. We are counting on the support of the Canadian breeders, for if we can make it a success we have a promise from the Canada Central Exhibition Association assuring us a show in the fall. If we can once get the thing started nicely it should be easy to form a regular circuit.

THE BLOODHOUND MATCHES.

The series of matches between Bloodhounds owned by Mr. E. Brough, Scarborough, and Lieut.-Col. Joynson, Leamington, were contested in the Warwickshire country on Friday and Saturday last week, the program being identical with the outline given in the Stock-Keeper a week ago. Unfortunately, hard frost on the opening day was all against good work; in fact, on arrival at Cherterton, about six miles from Leamington, a little after 10 a.m., it was extremely doubtful whether a start could be made, the Rev. W. R. Verney, who had made all the local arrangements, including sending off the runners and mapping out their courses, stating to Mr. Fitt that it was unsafe to ride. Mr. Fitt, however, who was judging, thought an attempt should be made to run off the single hound stake, between Kickshaw, representing Mr. Brough, and Ballet, Lieut.-Col. Joynson's well-known hound, and so at 10.45 the hounds were laid on the line of a runner who had gone out an hour previously. Having skirted the lodge grounds, leaving the ice-covered pool to the left, he had crossed over the hill surmounted by Indigo Jones' famous windmill and then over part of the Roman camp and down the old Fosse way for a short distance. He had then traversed by the side of the brook and on to High Down, and worked his way left handed to Mr. Dick's farm, where the quarry was secreted. From the windmill the spectators could follow most of the line, and among those who mounted this coign of vantage were Mr. W. K. Taunton—who represented the Association of Bloodhound Breeders in the absence of Mr. A. Croxton-Smith—the Rev. H. Adams (Newbold Pacey), Mrs. Joynson, Miss Brown, Mr. H. Deverson Jones (Moreton Hall), Mr. H. Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Betteridge, and Mr. Falkner, M.R.C. V.S.

On being laid on the line, Kickshaw at once struck it and went away with a long lead, going down stubble bordered by plough at racing speed. Ballet had to be lifted a short distance, but, on lower ground and working up to the windmill hill, she hunted very perseveringly, and, casting prettily on foiled ground, made up several points. The hounds seemed a long time in the country from view, but eventually they led the horsemen a merry dance across the meadows to sanctuary. Kickshaw, who showed the more drive, being awarded the match, although Ballet's perseverance gained her several points in the last mile. The hounds were hunted by Fuller and Upton, Mr. Brough and Colonel Joynson following on hoseback.

A start was at once made with the novices' competition, but as neither match was at all satisfactory — although Hornbeam was awarded the first—on account of hounds not being thoroughly trained, the less said about them the better. The second one, indeed, Halys-Bodice, was drawn and re-contested on Saturday, when, after another tame contest in which both had to be lifted for close on a mile, Lieut.-Col. Joynson again got the award, well deserved, for his novices, although only partially trained, were distinctly more persevering than those of Mr. Brough.

The "packed" competition, the last event on the card, was from Cherterton Green, Mr. Brough running Bodice, Kickshaw, and Koko, whilst Col. Joynson relied on Hornbeam, Haldis, and Ballet. This was a long way the most interesting contest, the runner being found in a few seconds over fifty minutes, the hounds having but one check, at Barn Hill, on a road which had been foiled by cattle and foot passengers quite recently. Kickshaw and Ballet were leaders throughout, but all hunted well, and frequently spoke to the line. Mr. Brough's pack got the award, honors therefore being fairly divided, for Lieut.-Col. Joynson's hounds had won both novice matches. —Stock-Keeper.

WHEN A PEDIGREE IS NOT A PEDIGREE.

"Honest John Bull" is having some trouble just now with some of his administrators in Kennel Club office.

The following from the Stock-Keeper gives the meat in the nut.

We greatly regret that the dawn of the new year should be associated with the publication of the details of a scandal which most seriously affects the honor of the dog world. We have been in possession of some knowledge of the facts for several days past, but preferred to refrain from making any reference to the subject until some more reliable information was forth-coming, and with this object in view we recently called personally upon Mr. Jaquet, the secretary of the Kennel Club, a result of our interview being the letter which appears in another column. It is obvious, however, that Mr. Jaquet is debarred, by reason of the position which he occupies, from entering into full details of the scandal, which is a matter of serious import, not only to the dog breeders of Great Britain and America, but to the Kennel Club, some of whose officials appear to have been deeply implicated in a scheme for defrauding the importers of dogs by the means of false pedigrees. With the object of securing further information, we also despatched a member of our staff, who has some experience in shipping live stock—not dogs, but horses—to America, to call at the American Consulate, where he was most courteously assured that some grave deceptions had undoubtedly been practised upon the American Customs, but that it was impossible to give any details at present, for the simple yet sufficient reason that the consulate was entirely in the dark as to the extent of the wrong-doing.

We are, however, in a position to inform our readers that the offences were committed in connection with the certificates of pedigree which entitle dogs to free admission to the United States, on the ground that they are desirable acquisitions to the canine population of America for stud purposes, owing to their breeding. With this object the United States tariff provides that all dogs which possess a pedigree of three generations, certified by the English Kennel Club, can come in free of duty, and hitherto the official certificates issued by the K. C. have been recognized as reliable documents. We understand, however, that a short time ago the desk of one of the club's employees was examined during his absence through illness, when several fictitious pedigrees made out on Consular forms were discovered. Mr. Jaquet, with most commendable promptitude, lost no time in continuing his investigations, and meanwhile, of course, summoned a meeting of the committee, who, we learn, have unfortunately good reason for believing that these frauds upon the New York custom house have been going on for some time, one dealer alone having gained £150 on a single transaction.

Here our references to what has occurred must remain for a time, as it would be obviously most undesirable for us to publish any names at the present stage of the proceedings, but we may add the information that six employees of the Kennel Club have been discharged. We therefore suggest to our readers that it will be considerate upon their part if they forbear to approach Mr. Jaquet upon any business matters which can be postponed for a while, as, with a depleted staff, he is working night and day to keep abreast with the routine work of the office, in addition to which the investigations upon which he is engaged are occupying a great deal of his time. Mr. Jaquet is entitled to the sympathy of the fancy for the additional responsibilities which have been sprung upon him, through no fault or negligence of his own, and he is doing his best to trace the whole course of the conspiracy with, we have reason for believing, every prospect of success. For our own part, we trust, as we feel confident will be the case, that the Kennel Club will spare neither time, trouble nor money in their efforts to discover the identity of the persons who are responsible for the frauds. The guilty parties have undoubtedly rendered themselves liable to prosecution, either in this country or America, and it will be a most gross reflection upon the honor of the canine community in either country if they are not brought to trial.

Mr. Pickering's Noted Deerhound Scamp, Dead.

The Result of Neglect on Someone's Part.

We were sorry to learn from Mr. Vere H. Pickering, of Minnedosa, Man., that his famous dog, Scamp, recently illustrated in Gazette, was dead, the result of almost criminal neglect on the part of some one concerned. Mr. Pickering regrets the painful death of an honest friend more than the financial loss, though this is heavy.

We print below copies of correspondence received by Mr. Pickering, referring to the case. If the crate was signed for in the usual way the onus seems to be on the Philadelphia management.

You will be sorry to hear that I have lost my Deerhound, Scamp. I am sending you the correspondence that I have received so far about the matter, and I am sure you will agree with me that it is simply scandalous. Of course, what Mr. Dole says about the crate being too small has nothing to do with the dog's death; it was simply starvation. Why Hoodless did not send the dog in my own crate I do not know. I think that this should be generally known and I mean to make a row about it.

Yours truly,

Vere H. G. G. Pickering.

V. H. G. G. Pickering, Esq.,
Minnedosa, Man.;—

Dear Sir,—I am sorry to tell you that I just received word from Mr. Dole that Scamp is dead, and that he never got him until Saturday night. I enclose you his letter. I notice that he says in his letter that I shipped Scamp in too small a crate. This is not so. I shipped him in one of my own Backus crates that I had made for a Wolfhound, and I have used this crate always before in shipping him, and nothing ever happened. The trouble is on their part for not delivering the dog to Dole on his arrival, but keeping him shut up in crate from Monday a.m. until Saturday night without any food or a drink of water. Enclosed please find Dole's telegraph. This is the reason I wrote you. If you had given him permission to enter him and take him home. I wrote Mr. Dole he could handle him at the New York Show but to send him home after the Philadelphia Show. Hoping to hear from you soon, I remain,

Yours truly,

Robert Hoodless.

P.S.—I have just written Mr. Viti, of the show, asking him to inform me about the dog. The strange name that Mr. Dole says was on the crate was Longwood Kennels, Chicago, Ill.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 6, 1901.
Mr. Robert Hoodless,

9802 Winston ave., Chicago, Ill.:

Dear Sir,—Yours of December 3rd just came to hand, and I hasten at once to reply thereto. Had you not written, events transpired which would have necessitated my communicating with you at any event.

I have noted the contents of your letter and I shall ignore the exceedingly distasteful allusions therein relating to myself and simply remind you that the suggestion of entering your dog in the L. K. A. show, was made by yourself in a former letter to me, which has evidently escaped your recollection. With reference to your statement that you sent me three letters to the Philadelphia show, I desire to state that the only communication received from you at Philadelphia was a letter handed me late Saturday afternoon, concerning the re-shipment of the dog home. For reasons which will hereafter more fully appear, this request could not be complied with. Any other letter alleged to have been sent by you has, therefore, probably been either returned or miscarried.

I went to the dog show Wednesday morning and at once asked the man who was receiving the dogs if there were any dogs there for me, and he said there were not. I asked him if he were sure, and told him that I was expecting some from Canada and one from Chicago. He said there was nothing there for me. I went and looked Scamp up in the catalogue and found his catalogue number was 82, and saw that he was not on his bench. I then asked Ben Lewis if he had seen Scamp among the Deerhounds and he informed me that the dog was not there. During the day I continued to make inquiries as to whether your dog had arrived and received no further information. All the dogs which I had been expecting had been received, with the exception of one from Canada and your Deerhound, and I concluded that perhaps your dog had likewise in some way miscarried and was likely to put in an appearance with the other. The following day I again made enquiries as to whether your dog had arrived and visited both of the express companies and was informed that it had not. The next day the dog not having as yet put in an appearance, I concluded that you had decided not to send it. However, so that there might be no mistake, I requested the management to have an examination made of all the stored crates in which dogs had arrived, to ascertain whether by any misadventure the dog had been overlooked. I personally supervised this examination so as to leave no room for doubt. Naturally I was looking for a crate which would be a proper and a suitable one in which to ship this dog, that is to say, this Deerhound. No trace of the dog was discovered. Friday, the dog not having put in an appearance, I then, of course, concluded that you had not send it.

I desire at this point to again re-iterate as stated above, that up to this time I had received no word from you, as may be easily verified. Late Saturday afternoon I received your letter in which I was for the first time advised that the dog had in point of fact, been shipped. I at once concluded that there had probably been some mistake made on the part of the express company, as is not infrequently the case, and that the dog had been mis-sent and then returned to you.

Saturday night as we were packing up, one of the men from the express company sent for me and asked me if I wanted a certain crate shipped. My dogs already having been boxed, I thought there must be some mistake and inquired to what crate he referred. He then conducted me to a crate suitable for a Setter dog, located in a hallway, with a strange name on the top. Of course I did not for a moment believe that your dog could have been shipped in such an unsuitable and improper manner, and stated that the dog was not of the highest quality. Particulars of stud dogs on application.

mine. He then called my attention to a small tag marked "F. Dole," which was attached to it by a string. I then examined it more particularly and discovered that your dog was contained in it. I at once took the dog from the crate and gave him immediate and careful attention, and was satisfied that through the apparent carelessness of yourself in sending a dog in such a crate as that, coupled with the negligence of someone connected with the management having charge of the receipt of dogs, that the dog had arrived and in the condition and under the circumstances named, and that it demanded immediate and careful attention, which I of course gave it to the best of my ability. I at once supplied him with suitable nourishment, consisting of eggs, milk and sherry, in small quantities, and as the result of the nursing he seemed to feel quite comfortable. Then, in order that the dog might be especially cared for and receive the very best attention, I concluded that before taking any steps in showing him, to entrust him to the care of a very experienced and capable gentleman who thoroughly understands the care of dogs under this condition, a gentleman whom I was certain you knew and to whom I was quite certain the entrusting of this dog under the conditions, would meet with your unqualified approval, namely, Mr. B. F. Lewis, of Lansdown, Penn.

I stayed with the dog until one o'clock Sunday morning, and also arranged for him to receive his nourishment during the night, by the watchman, and then Mr. Lewis was to take charge of him in the morning, taking him to his kennels, before bringing him to New York, where I had concluded, upon your suggestion, to show him.

I concluded not to write to you concerning the condition of the dog because I did not wish to have you unnecessarily alarmed as I had every reason to hope and believe that within a few days he would be all right. It was therefore with great surprise and much regret that yesterday afternoon, at the very time I received your letter, I received a telegram from Mr. Lewis announcing the death of the dog. It is needless to say that I regret the circumstance very much. It is one of those things that will occasionally happen to owners and shippers of dogs. Of course I desire to again repeat that I did everything possible to care for and properly provide for the dog in the condition in which he was found. From the moment the dog came into my hands until his death he was suitably and properly cared for. Of this it is needless to give you my assurance. I would suggest that you at once communicate with the management of the dog show at Philadelphia to ascertain how and why it was that this dog was allowed to remain undelivered.

Allow me to again express my extreme regrets at the unfortunate circumstance, for I really feel very much worse about it than if it had been one of my own, in fact all of the dogs that I had exhibited, for I assure you that it has been my aim and principle throughout my entire dealings, to faithfully and honestly look after the interests of every one who has ever entrusted me with any business or friendly relationship. Very truly yours,

Frank F. Dole.

P.S.—If I can be of any further service to you in this matter, with respect to any information that you desire to have, call upon me at once and I will cheerfully furnish the same.

F. F. D.

We had this correspondence in type for last issue but at the last moment withheld it at the request of Mr. Pickering, who desired to make further investigation. He now writes us under date of December 30th, enclosing a letter from Mr. Viti, who states his willingness to assist in any way in his power.—Ed.

Notes for Novices.

Probably the commonest of all blood medicines is sulphur, which ought to be given either made up into pills or gelatine capsules, or else in the form of the crude powdered sulphur, known as "flowers." An ignorant public opinion has come to believe that to place a lump of sulphur in the dog's drinking water will have a good effect; one might as well put a stone in the water, for the sulphur in that form is quite insoluble, and, except for the small quantity which becomes detached from the lump, and floating about in the water, is swallowed by the dog, it does not produce any effect whatever, except that it gives some sort of satisfaction to the mind of the genius who prescribed the remedy. On the whole, we think, perhaps the best form of sulphur is that known as "milk" of sulphur, which is prepared by a process of solution and precipitation, which results in a product of very fine floury appearance, which is supposed to be rather more active in its effects than the ordinary crude flowers of sulphur. Another most excellent blood medicine is to be found in sulphide of calcium, which most good pharmacists keep prepared in pill form. A dose varies from a sixteenth of a grain for a very tiny pet dog up to two or three grains for a mastiff, administered once or twice daily. Sulphide of calcium is, as its name implies, a combination of sulphur with calcium or lime, and small doses of it are reputed to have an excellent effect in clearing the blood, both of man and of animals.

But we are getting a little away from the point from which we set out, which was the treatment of dogs suffering with scurfy skins. In any case no harm can be done by giving a dog so suffering a little blood medicine, and, therefore, sulphate of iron or sulphide of calcium, or any of the dozen other things, such as Bland's pills or sulphur, or what not, can be administered as a preliminary. (We are purposely omitting any reference to the use of arsenic, because these cases, as a rule, can be cured without it.) Coming to the question of what to use externally, it is obvious that we want something that will make the skin soft and keep it, as one might say, oily, instead of its being dry, for it is a dryness in the skin that gives rise to the scurf, and if the skin can be kept soft scurfy condition is more likely to disappear. Now, the use of certain applications, such as soft soap, and carbolic acid soap and carbonate of potash, and things of that description, which are used for washing dogs, tends to injure the roots of the hair, and makes the skin dry and irritable. On the other hand, if we use a nice, mild application free from anything of a chemical nature, such an application, for instance, as pure olive oil, we shall be working in quite the opposite direction, and shall probably succeed in getting the skin, by the use of such an article as that, in a state of softness, and the hair, in consequence, well nourished. Some cases of scurfiness in the skin are beneficially acted upon by oleate or zinc ointment, which, we may remark, is very useful (apart from the present topic) as an application to dogs that have been burnt or scalded, as it seems to heal the skin beautifully, and may for this reason be applied advantageously after the use of caron oil, which is generally applied as a first dressing in cases of burning or scalding.

It is impossible to lay too much emphasis upon the value of grooming as an aid to the preservation of the skin. If dog owners would do less in the way of washing and more in the way of brushing, they would not have nearly so much trouble as many of them do have with the skins of their dogs. Every dog, be he long-haired or smooth-haired, ought to be groomed at least once a day, and then the grooming process should consist principally in brushing the hair the wrong way, because you cannot by any other means, especially in the case of a long-haired dog, get through the coat right down to the skin. We might almost say that it is not the hair, but the skin, of a dog that needs to be groomed. Then again, there can be no doubt whatever that worms are a frequent cause of scurfy skin in dogs, acting, of course, as they do, through the digestive organs upon the blood, and through the blood upon the skin. No dog can keep a healthy skin, free from irritation and free from scurf, if he is troubled with worms, and it may be laid down as a general principle that the first dose of medicine given to a dog suffering from any affection of the skin should be a dose of something calculated to free him from worms, for even if he should not be suffering in that way a physic will do him no harm. It will be necessary, also, to attend carefully to the diet, because many of these cases are really caused by surfeit, and dogs which are surfeited with food are always liable to show its effect on their skins.

There is a great diversity of opinion as to the proper method of feeding dogs which are suffering from skin ailments. Some authorities recommend raw meat, whilst others say that all meat should be cooked, and again another section of experienced fanciers declares that no meat at all should be given. As a matter of fact, we think a very great deal depends upon the breed of the dog, and therefore the diet must be regulated according to the judgment and experience of the owner, who knows best what suits his particular variety. We therefore cannot lay down any hard and fast lines which can be applied to every breed of dogs, but there is one principle which admits of no doubt, and that is that a varied diet is the best diet for a dog, whether in health or out of health. Constant feeding on the same foods or on the same classes of foods is not to be recommended. Let the dog have as much variety as possible, but not an excessive allowance of any one kind of food. If you discontinue meats and give biscuits, you very soon commit the error of giving too much starchy matter, and the only safe principle to go upon is to give a fair mixture of meat, of biscuits or hound meal, and of vegetables, and not to overlook the advantage of fish now and again—in effect, to work upon the principle of variety, which ensures the animal getting all that nature intended he should have.”

We are frequently being asked about the treatment of decayed teeth in dogs, and it may be of use if we give a few suggestions dealing with this question of dogs' teeth again, although we have on several previous occasions dealt to some extent with the matter. There are several reasons why a dog's teeth may go wrong: unsuitable feeding is one of the commonest causes, and takes effect especially in the case of pet dogs kept indoors and pampered with all sorts of sweet, toothsome morsels. This is mistaken kindness, as we have pointed out over and over again, and if people will be so unwise as to give their dogs any other than coarse, plain food, they must expect the penalty to be enforced, and the penalty sooner or later will be decayed teeth and offensive breath, as a result. Another cause of decayed teeth is indigestion, brought about not so much by dainty food as by an excess of soft food. This, of course, applies to dogs which are kept out of doors, and are not petted and pampered in any way, but yet are fed chiefly on soft food, the result of which is to impair their digestion and to cause flatulency and acidity in the stomach which tend to spoil the teeth. The digestive powers of a dog are very keen, and are capable of great effort—a dog can even digest bones that are quite hard, and we must look upon his digestive power much as we should look upon the power of a machine, which, if it is not exercised, will not maintain its efficiency, but will rust and lose its power of work. If a strong, healthy dog, possessing this excellent digestive power, is fed on soft food, which makes no demand for the exercise of the digestive functions, what will happen is that they will languish, as would the muscles of an athlete if he allowed himself to get out of practice. However, we must see to it that plenty of hard, dry biscuit, or good bones are provided for every dog.

There is a third reason for unsound teeth, and that is to be found in a weakly state of the constitution, and chiefly applies to dogs of the more delicate breeds, especially those which have been to a greater or lesser extent inbred. In such cases as these the teeth will usually go at an earlier age, in some cases even about the third year, and upwards, and nothing really can be done in the way of filling, which is possible in ordinary cases, because the substance of the teeth is not of the quality of hardness which is to be found in the teeth of a dog in perfect health. Such weakly specimens of the canine race can only be treated by tonic medicine, such as phosphate of iron, and by careful dieting, too, a great deal can be done. It is easy to see how fatal would be pampering in the case of a weakly dog; the only hope of keeping such an animal in a healthy state, so far as his teeth are concerned, for a longer period than might otherwise be possible, lies in careful medicinal and dietary treatment. A very great deal can be done for weakly, unhealthy dogs, belonging to the class we have described, by regularly giving them a meal of good, stale brown bread, either dry or soaked with a little gravy; this brown bread has a medicinal effect upon their bowels, which keeps them clear of impurities, and thus tends to prevent and to cure any symptoms of indigestion, besides being very wholesome and nutritious, containing, as brown bread does, in a larger degree by far than white bread, the elements which are essential for building up the muscular system. If people only knew the value of brown bread as a food for dogs there would be a great deal more of it used. By brown bread we mean bread which is prepared from flour which has been made by grinding up wheat undressed — just the whole English wheat ground so that the flour contains husk and bran, and everything else that is to be found in the grain itself.

So we have really three causes of bad teeth in dogs, i.e., pampering in the case of pet dogs, unwise feeding in the case of outdoor dogs, and hereditary weakness in other cases. Of course, we are not taking into account the subject of accidents to the teeth. Now and again a dog's tooth becomes broken or injured, or dislodged in some way or other, and then, of course, it is a case for a veterinary surgeon to attend to. Sometimes also a dog may get a small splinter of bone wedged between his teeth, which will set up inflammation of the gums, and a great deal of pain will ensue; this will usually be discovered because the dog will be continuously pawing his mouth, trying to dislodge the troublesome particle. An examination of the mouth should then be made, and probably the offending splinter can be removed. As regards the treatment of teeth that are actually decayed we always recommend that an examination of every dog's mouth be made from time to time, so that the condition of the teeth be noted, and if there be any that show signs of decay they should be dealt with by a veterinary surgeon. It is far better to have any decayed teeth extracted because one decayed tooth in a dog's mouth is quite likely to start caries amongst the other teeth, apart from the possibility that it is causing the dog considerable pain. Let us repeat, then, that one of the principal needs in order to keep dog's teeth sound will be a supply of hard bones and hard, dry biscuit which operate in two different ways—first, by keeping up the keenness, if we may so call it, of the digestive function, and secondly by acting as a sort of mechanical cleanser to the teeth. It is surprising how excellent an effect some bone or some hard, dry biscuit has as a tooth cleanser, biscuit especially, for, as the dog crunches it up, the hard particles of the biscuit work their way through the interstices of the teeth and cleanse the animal's mouth thoroughly. Of course, the best plan is to give the dog hard food like this before his ordinary meal, when he is hungry, so that he will crunch it up straight away.

Now a few words as to the way in which the teeth of aged dogs, which always become more or less offensive, and the teeth of delicate dogs, of the class mentioned above, can be kept in order by the use of a lotion. Many readers recommend a wash, made of borax, but in our opinion that is rather too strong and has a tendency to destroy the enamel of the teeth, or at least what is left of it. We think a better mouth wash can be prepared by dissolving about one drachm of powdered alum in half a pint of water. This is especially useful when there is any soreness of the gums, which is often the case when a dog has a decayed tooth that has gone unnoticed and has caused irritation on the opposite side of the mouth. Another excellent thing is a small quantity of carbonate of soda, dissolved in water in about the same proportion as the solution of alum mentioned above. This counteracts any acidity that may be present. Then, in the case of a dog which has unpleasant breath, this ought to disappear with the removal of any decayed tooth, and with careful dieting, aided by an occasional dose of aperient liver pills; but if the unpleasantness still continues a very weak solution of permanganate of potassium will be found useful, or perhaps better still, some solution of chlorinated soda may be used on a sponge to wipe out the mouth now and again. But, in conclusion, we ought to point out that it is quite useless to attempt to cure troubles with the teeth until any old stumps or unsound teeth be extracted, and the proper person to do this is a veterinary surgeon, as he has at hand the necessary appliances, and should do it far more expeditiously and painlessly than would be possible by any amateur; the more resolutely and promptly matters connected with the teeth of dogs are carried out the greater chance there is of keeping the animals in health and condition, without any of the unpleasantness which is so often experienced (especially with dogs kept in the house) when their teeth are in a bad state. Let us again emphasize the necessity for letting every dog have from time to time, as suggested above, a good round meal of brown bread, or of biscuits made from whole wheat-meal, which are prepared by some of the leading firms who advertise that class of food.

INTERNATIONAL FIELD TRIAL CLUB'S ANNUAL MEETING.

At the annual meeting of the International Field Trial Club, held at St. Joachim, Ont., the following officers were elected: President, L. H. Smith, Strathroy; first vice-president, T. C. Stegman, Chatham; second vice-president, F. E. Marcon, Windsor; honorary secretary-treasurer, W. B. Wells, Chatham, Ont.; executive committee, Montague Smith, Forest; J. B. Dale, Petrolea; J. D. Patterson, Woodstock; George Kime, Mitchell's Bay; A. Wells, Chatham; George Dale, Petrolea; W. D. Tristem, Chatham; Dr. Totten, Forest; J. G. Armstrong, Detroit, Mich., and H. Marshall Graydon, London, Ont.

L. H. Smith, Montague Smith and J. B. Dale were appointed a committee to arrange about grounds for the next trials.

The treasurer reported a balance on hand of one hundred and twenty-five dollars, with all debts paid.

The move from Mitchell's Bay across the lake to St. Joachim was found more convenient and the grounds were good to test northern dogs on, being composed of large wheat stubble and corn fields, with patches of brush land. Birds were, on account of the dry weather, hard to find, but there were quite a lot of birds on the grounds, nevertheless, as one brace of dogs found seven beavies within half a mile of the hotel the day after the trials. Mine Host Nick Chauvin took good care of the crowd at his snug little inn in the centre of the grounds, from which one can step out north, south, east or west and be at once on good quail ground. St. Joachim is a French-Canadian settlement and the home of the numerous Chauvin family. Uncle
