NOTES AND COMMENTS

Mr. J. P. Norman's letter seems to add fuel to the Ccast fire. If what he gives as the action of the P.A.C. is endorsed by the American Kennel Club, then Canadian exhibitors will surely be between the devil and the deep sea. But we feel sure the A.K.C. will not endorse such drastic measures as far as the C.K.C. is concerned; things are not working that way. Play dog!

As briefly announced in last issue of Gazette, Sherbrooke Show will be held on August 31st, September 1st and 2nd next. Dr. H. Clay Glover will take all breeds, and leaving Sherbrooke, will come on to Toronto to officiate in the Setter and Pointer classes.

A large list of specials will be put up for competition, as well as the regular premiums, and the management send us the following information regarding them:

As several individuals as well as specialty clubs have not yet been heard from, further specials will be announced through the press from time to time.

Geo. R. Smith, M.P.P., offers a silver cup for best and largest exhibit by any one exhibitor, to be won twice by any one exhibitor before becoming his property. Winners 1902, Messrs Learmont and Walters; 1903, F. and A. Stuart.

The Eastern Townships Kennel Club offers a silver cup for best dog, any breed, exhibited by a member of E.T. K.C. in good standing.

The Standard Collie Kennels offer silver cup for best Collie sired by Bob Son of Battle or Een Davis.

W. M. Tomlinson, Esq., offers silver cup for best dog, any kind, entered and shown in the ring by a lady, local only.

John J. Kent, Esq., offers challenge cup for best Collie in show; cup to be won three times before becoming absolute property. Winner 1903, Jas. Ainslie, Outremont.

Dr. F. H. Bradley offers silver cup for best Boston Terrier in show.

The Canadian Fox Terrier Club offers the following specials, open to members in good standing only, F. W. Jacobi, Toronto, Secretary: Best American bred dog, smooth haired, $2; best American bred bitch, smooth haired, $2; best American bred dog, wire haired, $2; best American bred bitch, wire haired, $2; best American bred puppy dog or bitch, $2; best American bred smooth or wire haired, $2.

The Canadian Kennel Club offers the following medals: For best St. Bernard, silver medal; for best Setter (English, Irish or Gordon), silver medal; for best Cocker Spaniel, any color, silver medal; for best Boston Terrier, bronze medal; for best Bulldog, bronze medal; for best Irish Terrier, bronze medal.

D. F. Laurie, Esq., offers a silver cup for best specimen in Terrier classes to be won twice by same dog. Winner 1901, A. Allan; 1902, Donnington Kennels; 1903, C. D. Carriere.

Montreal Collie Club offers the following specials: First silver medal for best Collie dog in show owned by a member of the Montreal Collie Club; second silver medal for best Collie bitch in show owned by a member of the Montreal Collie Club.

Dr. A. W. Tracy offers silver cup for best Cocker Spaniel in show.

John O. Duncan, Esq., offers silver cup for best Setter in show.

J. Rosenbloom, Esq., offers silver cup for best Fox Terrier in show, rough or smooth (local).

Many others are to follow.

As several of the cups have already been won once or twice, it is to be expected that a keen rivalry will result for the coveted "won out" award. Mr. H. M. Piercy will act as superintendent, and prize lists and all desired information may be had from the manager, Mr. W. M. Tomlinson, Sherbrooke, P.Q.

* * *

Mr. F. Habart's Foxhound, Laura Se-cord, whelped on July 11th six puppies to his Sport, a trio of either sex. By the way, where is the Foxhound Club that caught scent so auspiciously? Gone to join the Canadian Sporting Spaniel Club?

* * *

Mr. W. C. Browne is a Bulldog enthusiast of standing who has recently arrived in Toronto from Birmingham. Mr. Browne did not come dogless, and his house chum Excelsior accompanied him, and will be shown for the first time at Toronto. Excelsior is a 55 lb. light brindle of much quality, a very sound, active dog, with a wide front, good head and face, and carries plenty of bone. He has a face well broken up, with plenty of lay back. He will be offered at stud here, and where size, quality and stamina are so much wanted, he will be helpful. No dog is without a fault, and his is a minor one, in ear. His portrait we present on another page.

Excelsior is registered with the English Kennel Club, and is by Prince Stockwell, who is by Stockwell by Don Pedro by Sahib, out of Brewery Judy, by Brewery Carbine, by Cyclops. On the dam's side Prince Stockwell goes back to Stockwell Pilot and Brewery Judy to Kentish Wonder, Rustic Sovereign, etc. This is blood that we have little of here and should be useful for an outcross.

Mr. Browne still retains an interest in English Bull circles, where he yet has five good brood bitches that may follow him to Canada. These bitches have all bred, and Mr. Browne says this is something that all Bull bitches won't do. He but emphasizes the fact that show bitches are not the ones to breed from.

* * *

Triceps, who won at Birmingham, Aston, etc., and had thirty-two specials to his credit, was owned by Mr. Browne at the time of his death. He was good enough to beat Persimmon, Lady Cambermere and other cracks.

We understand a list of judges has been submitted to the "World's Fair Dog Show" by the advisory committee (the "Hon.," etc.), but we know that all the members of the committee, and it is not a large one, have not even seen the "list." Why?

* * *

The Toronto management seem to have struck a happy idea in offering a prize of a silver cup for the best kennel of four dogs entered and shown by a lady. There must be some gallant on the committee, as last year they had ladies' parlors set aside especially for what the American humorist terms "the fair sex," and this year this will be added to by an exercising ring for the exclusive use of dogs owned by lady exhibitors.

The building itself will be thoroughly whitewashed and disinfected, and be given a new coat of paint inside and outside, making it much more attractive.

The class for the Sheep Dog trials—particulars elsewhere—seems to have filled a long-felt want, judging from the number of enquirers for the special circular regarding these trials, and many owners from the United States and Canada have already signified their intention of sending competitors.

Enquiries for premium lists are unprecedented in the history of the Bench Show, and the prospects were never so bright as they are at present for a much larger entry than the association has ever had.

Entries mailed at any hour on August 15th will be received.

From Col. Mills we received the following communication. There is a good deal of Barnumism about it, but such as it is we give it. Several possible exhibitors have asked us what the classification means. We don't know. Better consult the committee. They may be able to throw some light on it.

"A leading feature of the World's Fair Kennel Show at St. Louis, October 25 to 28, is that it will be the first dog show to have a distinct international character. The most important element in this show will be the prominence given to the breeding of dogs by the Universal Exposition, which is the first fair to provide classes for the breeder of dogs of record and permit all to enter in the open class on the same basis as adopted for all other kinds of live stock. The full recognition of the Kennel Show of the World's Fair by home and foreign clubs is assured by a notification to Colonel Charles F. Mills, chief of the Department of Live Stock, by Mr. H. B. Donovan, secretary of the Canadian Kennel Club, that "the Canadian Kennel Club has already agreed to accept the wins at your fair and to have them published in the annual Stud Book." Similar action is assured by other National Kennel Clubs. The Exposition management has made a special effort to have the Kennel Show worthy in all its features of the greatest international exposition ever held. The American Kennel Club and the National Dog Fanciers' Associations of other countries are heartily co-operating with the Exposition in the conduct of the show, and all fully realize the importance of giving due and equal prominence to the registration of dogs from all countries. To make this possible the following rules, with the approval of home and foreign kennel clubs, were adopted by the Exposition management for the conduct of the World's Fair Kennel Show:

"Application for the entry of dogs of the recognized breeds of record owned in the United States must be accompanied by a certificate on the prescribed form of the Exposition, showing registration in the Stud Book of the American Kennel Club, and otherwise conform to the rules governing entries.

"Application for the entry of dogs of the recognized breeds of record not owned in the United States must be accompanied by a certificate on the prescribed form of the Exposition showing registration, signed by the secretary of the Kennel Club or Association publishing the respective Stud Books, and such certificate must be attested by the chairman of the National World's Fair Commission representing the country from which such dogs come to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, if these exhibitions are made under the auspices of such foreign government."

Entries for the Universal Exposition

Kennel Show will close September 10, but at this early date applications for entry have been received by Chief Mills from Canada, United States and Mexico. Advices have reached the Exposition of a large entry of dogs bred in Great Britain and other foreign countries. The interest in the Kennel Show has already assumed international proportions, which confirms the expectation of the Exposition management, for a dog show upon a World's Fair scale, with number and quality that will put this industry upon a much higher plane than its most ardent champions anticipated.

The classification for the World's Fair Kennel Show, with rules and regulations for entry and provisions for care and exhibition of dogs, has been issued, and will be sent upon request by Colonel Charles F. Mills, chief of the Department of Live Stock, World's Fair, St. Louis, U.S.A. It contains classes for the display of 73 breeds of dogs, and the total prize money, including specials for dogs and cats, aggregating $15,289.00. There will be no entry fee or expense to exhibitors of dogs other than $2.50 per dog to cover the expense of benching, receiving, feed, care and showing. The best of attention is assured for the dogs exhibited at the World's Fair by the committee appointed by the dog fanciers of Canada and the United States to look after this matter, which consists of Hon. August Belmont, president of the American Kennel Club; Mr. John G. Kent, president Canadian Kennel Club, and Mr. Marcel A. Viti, secretary Philadelphia Kennel Show."

As far as we can learn, the committee might as well be dead for all they know of the show or for any part they have in its management. Better come out and say something that we can all understand. Dog men are not mind readers, whatever dogs may be.

* * *

Mr. E. T. Campbell, Toronto, has got the rather unusual Fox Terrier litter of seven dogs by Johnny Canuck ex Princess Teck.

Messrs. F. & A. Stuart have sold Lord Harry—Dolly Grey puppies to the following: Bitch to Mr. Thos. Jones, Montreal; a dog to Mrs. W. M. Ogilvie, Ottawa; and a dog to Mr. H. Cambley, Montreal.

We have it on the best authority that Mr. A. P. Vredenburg will desert New York for a sufficiently long time to superintend the World's Fair Dog Show at St. Louis. Applications for judging appointments, enquires as to enlightenment on classification, etc., etc., should, we presume, now go to Mr. Vredenburg, and not to the committee. We think we are safe in saying that this will be Mr. Vredenburg's first attempt at superintending a dog show.

Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto.—Bench Show, September 5th to 9th.

Everything points to a most successful show and the largest entry in the history of this department of Canada's Great Exhibition. Many of our readers have never attended this show, and to these we would heartily recommend a visit there this year, for with the large amount of money that is spent in special attractions (the management are bringing out specially for this Exhibition the world-renowned Black Watch Band, 42nd Highlanders), one can form an idea of the amount of money that the association spends to enable people to enjoy themselves while on the Exhibition grounds. It is admitted by all show managers that Toronto Exhibition is the largest annual exhibition in America. The display of live stock, taken as a whole, has possibly never been equalled by any World's Fair, and the great attraction in this department is that all the stock can be seen at the same time.

One of the principal features is the Bench Show, which interests our readers most, and in this department alone Toronto stands as one of the leading lights in kenneldom. The increase in entries for the past year or so has been simply phenomenal, and the committee are making herculean efforts to have the shows of the past sink into insignificance in comparison to the entry they are laboring to secure this year.

The classification, as already noticed in our columns, is a most liberal one, and one that very few breeders can take any exception to. While always glad to see the professionals, the show is not a handler's show; it is more of a "breeder's" display of dogs.

At the request of some of the principal breeders who have found no fault with the list as a whole, the committee have, after much deliberation, decided to add the following classes:

In Chesapeake Bay Dogs, the classes will be divided, making Class 71 read: "Open dogs," and Class 71A, "Open bitches."

In Poodles the sex will also be divided, making an additional class of 122A for open bitches. Class 174A has been added for Boston Terrier puppies.

In the class for Pugs, 222A should read "Limit dogs and litches." Class 223, "Open dogs," and Class 223A, "Open bitches." The idea of the committee being that Pugs have been for a number of years apparently neglected by the majority of the associations, and at the request of several, have decided to open up these classes in the way mentioned above.

A class has also been provided for Toy Poodles in 238A, open dogs and bitches.

Airedales will have several classes added as follows: One for novice dogs and bitches, one for limit dogs, one for open dogs, one for limit bitches, one for open bitches, and also one for American-bred dogs and bitches.

It is needless to say that a winners class will also be provided for by these classes where the sexes have been divided.

In addition to the large number of special prizes already announced in the prize list, the following have been added: Club medal for the best Pointer dog and club medal for the best Pointer bitch owned by member of Pointer Club of America. In Newfoundlands, the Montreal Canine Association offers a medal for the best in the show, and the Canadian National Exhibition offers bronze medal for the best brace; cup for the best kennel of four owned in Canada, and $10 for the best kennel of four, provided two or more teams compete. In French Bulldogs, the Montreal Canine Association offers a medal for the best specimen in the show.

J. Allison, Esq., offers a cup for the best Old English Sheepdog in the novice class, and Mr. H. S. Watts a cup for the best Old English Sheepdog.

This is the last notice that will reach our readers previous to the closing of entries, and we would urge them to be as liberal as they possibly can with their entries to assist the Canadian fanciers in making this a record breaker.

As last year, the chairman will show his dogs for exhibition purposes only.

NERVOUSNESS AND TIMIDITY.

As the autumn shows are almost upon us again, one naturally is in a quandary as to what he will show. Quite frequently an otherwise good specimen is hopelessly handicapped by street fright or nervousness, which, indeed, often culminates in a fit. It is not only useless, but cruel, to expose these unfortunate canines to the strain of a dog show. Brain trouble in dogs is much commoner than we imagine. In human beings one often looks askance at the marrying of first cousins, as mental degeneracy is so often found in the children of such unions. In dogs we find in pedigrees cross after cross of the same blood, which naturally in time predisposes to deterioration of the nervous system, including cerebral impairment. Now, the point is, how to remedy this. If a dog with such an ailment is to be exhibited, and undergoes severe nervous excitement, the next step is distemper, chorea and kindred ills. I have found the following most useful in cases of the aforementioned:

Bromide of Potassium, two drachms; Tincture Lavender Comp., one ounce; water up to six ounces. Sig.—A dessert-spoonful in an equal quantity of water before going out for a walk or before shipping to a show. Three times a day at the show.

Half the quantity can be given to a toy dog or twice the quantity to a very large one. This will tend to keep the cross after cross of the same blood, which enhance his chance of winning a prize. I am sure many cases of distemper can be avoided by this simple remedy.

Resolution.

"Whereas, it has come to the knowledge of this committee that the organization known as the Western Kennel League has seen fit to incorporate into its constitution and rules a clause disqualifying all persons who may exhibit dogs at shows held west of the 110th degree of longitude, under the rules of the American Kennel Club, and whereas such a clause proves that the organization has been formed and exists in a spirit of undisguised hostility to the American Kennel Club;

"And whereas, such action is prejudicial to the best interests of dogs and dog shows; therefore be it

"Resolved, that from and after this date, any person or persons acting in any official capacity, paid or unpaid, including that of judge, secretary, superintendent, steward or clerk of a show, or as an officer or member of a bench show committee of a club holding a show west of the 110th degree of longitude under the rules of the Western Kennel League, or under any rules other than those of the American Kennel Club, shall be and hereby are disqualified and debarred from all privileges of the American Kennel Club."

TALKS TO DOG OWNERS.

The Canine Hobbledohoy.

There is probably not a more disappointing, aggravating living thing on the face of the earth than a growing puppy. Irrespective of the trouble he gives and the anxiety he causes during his early youth, the growing puppy possesses a natural gift for altering his appearance from time to time in such a manner as to bring most owners to the verge of despair. It is a most difficult task to set an experienced breeder to ask him to judge a puppy, as a month or six weeks may cause the greatest change in a young dog, so that the pick of the litter may prove to be the wastrel after all, and the despised one develop into a champion. A good many experienced men entertain the opinion that puppies as a rule return to their six weeks old form; and that, therefore, no matter how ugly he may be whilst he is growing into a dog, the pick of the litter at that age will prove the best adult. This idea may, and, in fact, very likely does, hold good in many cases, but there are exceptions to every rule, and it is no doubt the wisest plan for the beginner to seek the counsel of some experienced friend if he decides to dispose of any of the immature members of his kennel.

Faulty Ears.

After the teething troubles, which have been referred to already, are over, the carriage of his puppies' ears perhaps causes more anxiety to the owner than anything else; and, truth to say, these appendages of a canine hobbledohoy are often very ugly indeed. They may be carried in just exactly the contrary position to that desired, or they may appear as big as those of an African elephant, but still the worst cases often come all right in the end, though, unfortunately, not always. If their only fault is their size, it will by no means unfrequently be found that the puppy grows to them, which means that the skull increases in bulk whilst the ears alter very little, so that in due course of events they are quite proportionate to the size of his head.

In the case of faulty carriage of ears there is a whole peck of trouble before the owner of the puppy, but this does not mean to imply that every puppy which carries his ears badly at any part of his age up to nine or ten months old is going to do so all his life. Still, it is always pleasanter to have no trouble of the kind, whilst there is consolation in the reflection that many bad ears are amenable to proper treatment if their culture is taken in time—that is, before the gristle hardens. In some cases mere manipulation by the fingers in the way of bending the ears into the desired shape, pressing the folds firmly but gently, and then holding them in the position required for several minutes at a time, may accomplish much. It is a tedious task, though, and has to be repeated pretty often during the day, and for a good many days at a stretch, if it is to effect a permanent result; and therefore there is not much time left to the attendant upon a number of puppies to devote a proper amount of attention to the ears of each one.

Some people have been guilty of the reprehensible practice of cutting or pricking through the roots of the ears, or applying a hot iron to other parts of these delicate organ, in order to affect their carriage; but in addition to the improbability of such operations accomplishing much good, and the unnecessary cruelty of them, the fact remains that such tampering with the ears is illegal, and its detection would involve disqualification upon the dog. Then, too, the owners of some breeds in which long ears are supposed to be the correct thing have been known to pull the ears of their whelps so viciously that the roots have been destroyed, with the result that the animal cannot move his ears.

The most common form of improving faulty carriage of the ears is to fix a strong plaster at the back of them, before the cartilage has hardened, of course, by this means keeping the ears in the correct position for some time. This practice is, of course, an extension of the finger manipulation method referred to above, but there is this distinction between the two, that the one is permissible according to the rules of the dog show world, whilst the other is not. Consequently, the owner who affixes plasters to the ears of his dog must be prepared to endure the penalties of detection if he is caught, which, to speak from observation, he very rarely is.

Speaking generally, and subject to the proviso that there are exceptions to every rule, there is no reason for an owner to become really uneasy about the carriage of a puppy's ears until the animal has turned eight or nine months old. After that age, if the fault continues, there are grounds for fear, and when the year is passed it is just as well to become reconciled to anything. Some dogs, moreover, possess a trick of carrying their ears quite correctly at one time and all wrong at another. This is, of course, most exasperating to their owners, but there is comfort in the knowledge that it is quite within the limits of possibility for the right carriage to be in evidence when required, and under any circumstances it is better to have matters sometimes right than always wrong.

Exercise for Growing Dogs.

It is absolutely necessary that young dogs should be provided with plenty of exercise, which, by the way, is a pleasure that should be denied no animal, but in the case of a growing puppy it is essential to its development. Half the cases of malformed limbs and joints one sees are the result of improper rearing, into which the neglect of a sufficiency of exercise enters very largely. If kept three or four or more together in a spacious yard or paddock, the puppies will usually enjoy enough romping to keep them in good health; but as soon as they are old enough they should be taken out on the roads, so as to see the world and overcome the shyness which is natural to all young things. Walks on the roads, moreover, tend to harden the soles of the feet and to assist the development of muscle, whilst this form of exercise necessitates the exercise of discipline over the puppies, and as it is always easier to teach a young animal the way it should go than an old one, both the owner and his dogs gain an advantage.

Collars, Slips and Chains.

Although there is no necessity for doing so, it is a good thing to accustom a puppy to the feel of a collar round his neck before he arrives at full age. This will save trouble some day, and the collar need not be left on for more than a couple of days or so at a time, and then it can be transferred to another member of the litter, so that all receive their lesson in turn. Still more necessary is it to teach the youngsters to lead, as no sooner does a puppy which has been accustomed to enjoy the delights of full liberty feel the restraint round its neck, than he forgets any approach to good manners that he may happen to possess. As a rule he commences by a series of mad plunges in any direction but that which he ought to take, and then he will as often as not lie down and create a scene in the street. It is best, therefore, to commence by putting a collar and chain on the dog, and then tying him up for an hour or two a day, so as to teach him that he cannot get away if he wants to. At first he will probably hang back at the full length of the chain and sulk, but reflection will bring reason, and after a few lessons the puppy will fully realize that resistance is of no use to him. Then is the time to teach him to lead, and for this purpose a leather slip may be fixed to the collar and the dog be encouraged to follow his master, who holds the end in his hand. If he tugs and tries to get away, patience and not a thrashing should be adopted to secure the end in view, and when the pupil begins to show signs of an inclination to do what is wanted of him, a piece of meat or biscuit may be given him as a reward. Anyhow, a whip ought never to be used in the case of an obstinate or timid dog, but the puppies will very rarely be the latter if they have been allowed to see a little of the world as advised above.—English Stock-Keeper.

Ottawa Show.

Just as we go to press, we learn from Mr. Geo. Aird, secretary-treasurer of the Ottawa Kennel Club, that everything is in good order for a record show in the Capital of the Dominion. He says:

The Central Canada Exhibition Association have placed at our disposal a large, commodious and well ventilated building, in which we will be able to take care of a goodly number of dogs.

Mr. A. A. Armstrong, I might almost say of international reputation, has again been prevailed upon to assume the position of superintendent, and it goes without saying that both exhibitors and their dogs will receive nothing but the best attention.

The list of specials this year as advertised in the class lists is already larger and more varied than that of last year. Since the class lists went to press the list of special prizes has been almost doubled; a full list will appear in the catalogue.

The Ottawa Kennel Club are this year offering $20 cash as a first prize and $10 cash as a second prize to handlers or agents exhibiting the largest number of dogs. This is for outsiders; neither local men nor the executive are eligible to compete.

Besides the "Inaugural Cup" and the "Ottawa Cup," we have at least three more trophies which have been donated to us as annual events.

The class list has been enlarged in several respects, notably the Collie classes, which have been duplicated to include American bred, and in nearly all cases where the O.K.C. gave bronze medals and ribbons as first and second prizes last year, they have decided to offer silver medals and bronze medals as first and second prizes.

This is good news, and doubtless will be appreciated and reciprocated, too.

Cocker Pedigrees.—As instructed, your secretary placed this matter in the hands of Mr. H. Parker Thomas, who visited Kingston in connection therewith, and who reports as follows:

Belleville, Ont., July 16th, 1904.

H. B. Donovan, Esq., Secretary C. K. C., Toronto:

Dear Sir,—I spent yesterday in Kingston. Re Reg. No. 5567, this pedigree is correct, and as far as I can find, not the slightest cause for suspicion. Report attached thereto.

Re Reg. No. 7182, there is nothing to substantiate this, as far as I could find, and I consider it should be cancelled. There seems to be in Kingston, among a certain number of so-called dog fanciers, an utter disregard of dates, honesty in modes of obtaining services and writing of pedigrees, which must be brought up with a sharp turn. This could be remedied to a large extent if buyers would exercise a little care and obtain breeders' certificates or some other evidence, and not accept anything offered.

If there is anything further required by you, kindly advise. Yours truly, about it. When letter was produced to him, he admitted it, and then said he didn't know what was in it or anything about it—just signed it because "Billy Twigg" asked him to. Said he did not write the pedigree attached, but it was correct.

Called on Mr. Hall, owner of Robin, who knew all circumstances, bred the bitch, bought the pup from Fields, and gave same to Mr. Robertson, who sold to Price, and pedigree is correct.

This dog, Price's Don, is now dead, as are all the pups from the only litter bred from him.

Kingston, Feb. 27, 1904.

H. B. Donovan, Esq., Secretary-Treasurer C.K.C., Toronto, Ont.:

Dear Sir,—This is to certify I did not write any pedigree on red dog registered as Price's Don, C.K.C.S.B. 5567; further, said dog was not bred as pedigree read. (Signed) Arthur E. Fields.

Re Twigg's Red Bobs, No. 7182.

Kingston, July 16th, 1904.

Mr. T. McK. Robertson says a black bitch was brought to his kennel to be bred from, and was turned over to his kennel man at the time. The latter reported to him at a later date that bitch had a litter, but the date of whelping was four weeks astray of the proper time from date of bitch being at kennel. Neither owner or kennel man saw the bitch bred, nor could I find anyone who did. Mr. Robertson got no remuneration for any service on ground that pups were not from his dog. The owner of bitch is an illiterate man who keeps no records of his dogs so far as I can learn.

There was an entire absence of any evidence whatever to show that bitch was ever bred to Erastus, and what few circumstances could be ferreted out all pointed the other way, as the present owner admits.

Coming to the dam, the owner of this bitch, a Mr. Arneil, claims to have owned a bitch he called Minnie (what little I could learn of her was doubtful), and he claims he stole a service of a dog owned by Miss Macdonald, which he thought to be Jerry, and that this bitch, Black Daisy, was a pup of the resulting litter. That is all I could find to connect Jerry with this pedigree.

On the other hand, both Mr. and Miss Macdonald assert positively that this man never, to their knowledge, had the use of any dog of theirs, nor do they think he could get same without their knowledge. Here again the parties who stole, or say they stole, the service are not in a position to identify the dog.

"This is the substance of a large number of interviews, and if you require the details I will advise you fully.

There is nothing to do but recommend cancelling Reg. No. 7182, though I cannot recommend any action being taken against his owner, as there is nothing in the way of evidence to show that he had any knowledge of the truth or otherwise.

I informed Mr. Twigg that the whole matter had been placed in the hands of Mr. Thomas to report on, and he writes as follows:

Kingston, July 13th, 1904.

H. B. Donovan, Esq., Secretary-Treasurer C.K.C., Toronto, Ont.:

Dear Sir,—Your favor of the 9th to hand. Contents noted with pleasure, as any decision Mr. H. P. Thomas comes to I will take as a fair, well-meant one, as I believe him to be a gentleman, and only wish all dog breeders were the same. As this matter could have been settled in Kingston without the C.K.C. having to bother with same, believing now, as I did from the first, it was a case of pure spite.

Thanking you for the trouble you have taken in matter, I will buckle in and push C.K.C. matters whenever possible in Kingston. Yours truly,

W. A. Twigg.

C.K.C.—W.K.L.—As instructed at last executive meeting, your secretary communicated with Mr. Norman J. Stewart, secretary of the Western Kennel League, asking him if the obnoxious rule referred to shows held under Canadian Kennel Club rules. Appended is his answer:

San Jose, Cal., July 24th, 1904.

H. B. Donovan, Esq., Secretary Canadian Kennel Club, Toronto:

Dear Sir,—Your favor of July 9th received; the duplicate sent to Seattle has not reached me yet.

Regarding the new rule disqualifying exhibitors showing at shows on the coast held under other rules than those of the W.K.L., the rule was of course aimed at the A.K.C., but has proved so unpopular to the northern clubs that I anticipate it will very shortly be rescinded. I will advise you just as soon as this is done.

Our new rules are now in the printer's hands, and as soon as they are ready I will see that a copy is sent you.

Our relations with your club in the past have certainly been of the most amicable and pleasant nature, and I trust that they may continue so. With best wishes for the success of the Canadian Kennel Club, believe me, yours obediently, the avarice or inexcusable mistakes of their owners. Indeed, some people appear to think that their dogs must be made of cast iron to judge from the way they trot the poor brutes about the country and literally wear them out, in order to pick up a few insignificant prizes at unimportant shows.

This sort of thing is not good for the fancy, neither is it conducive to the promotion of sport or the improvement of dogs in general. To commence with, it would be a difficult matter to estimate how many beginners, who might probably have become staunch fanciers, have been driven out of the dog world by the operations of the pot hunter. This is, of course, the very last consideration that the latter would take into account, for the fewer good fanciers there are, the weaker the competition, and so all the better for him; though it may at once be stated, and with emphasis, that there is a great gulf fixed between the exhibitor in a big way and the man who makes it a practice—happily there are not many of them—to hawk first-rate dogs about the country with the view of sweeping the decks at little shows.

The great objection to overshadowing is, however, the fact that it is calculated to wear out the dogs which are the victims of the practice, and thus they are not so valuable for breeding purposes as they would otherwise have been. Consequently, the dog-world suffers, and shows become not what they were intended to be—namely, useful functions, but something very much the reverse from a breeder's point of view.

Weak Judges and Strong Ones.

It may perhaps appear to be using rather forcible language if the opinion is expressed that the weak-kneed judge is a greater calamity to the dog world than even the man whose probity is a matter of the gravest doubt. Happily there are very few men who award prizes who are actually suspected of taking a reward in either money or kind from exhibitors, but there are several who, from weakness of mind, or sheer amiability of disposition, contrive to arrive at decisions which cannot be defended by any other excuse than that they either were afraid to reverse a former decision of their own or some other judge, or else were influenced by a desire to do a friend a good turn. Of course, in the eyes of any rational individual such a defence is absolutely ridiculous, even if it is not regarded as an aggravation of the offence, for no man should be allowed to judge if he does not possess the courage of his opinions; whilst benefiting a friend at the expense of a third party is nothing better after all than defrauding the latter of his just due. The fact, however, remains that many a very notoriously weak-minded man, that hopeless kind of individual who tries to please everybody, contrives to secure quite a large following of exhibitors, who hope to trade upon his mental failings and so support him by their entries. This sort of judge is nothing more nor less than a terror to the students of form, as any hope of consistency in his awards is impossible, for he is influenced solely by the desire of saving his judicial bacon by satisfying the clamors of a bad loser. In short, he is worse for everybody than the judge who won't, if he can help it, reverse a previous award, for, with the latter, exhibitors are able to know pretty well where they are; but with the plastic, cowardly-minded judge who knows, but dare not, uncertainty must always prevail.

Of course, the judge who reverses his own decisions once or twice on the same day cannot be credited with the possession of any knowledge of the breed he sheds the light of his incapacity upon; but there will be found some exhibitors who take tickets in his lottery, and it were, and enter the same dogs in two or three classes in the hope that if the animals do not win a prize in one they may in another. This is quite an excusable gambit on their part, but it is not quite playing the game to trust to the inability of a judge to recognize an animal he has just awarded a prize to; while occasionally it may happen, though rarely, that the familiar excuse that a dog failed to show himself properly upon the occasion of his defeat, may be justified by facts.

The most popular of all judges is no doubt the strong one who understands the breeds he has before him, and who only looks at the end of the chain where the dog is. There are plenty of judges who are credited with judging men and not dogs, and it is not so certain by a long way that they are not far more numerous a body than the really capable men. A judge, moreover, may, in short, be as honest as the day, and as impartial as man can be; he may also be influenced only by the very best of intentions, but he may still make a most terrible mess of his awards, and for the simple reason that he does not know the breed he is judging. It is wonderful to consider the amount of presumption which some men must possess when they accept invitations to judge at dog shows. The motives of the committees who appoint them are more intelligible, as their actions may be influenced—in fact, they very often are, and more's the pity—by the influence of outsiders, either individuals or societies, who desire to see a certain gentleman officiating. There is no need to seek for the motives of those who use what influence they possess to secure the appointment of any judge. They may be actuated by the very highest motives; they may desire to gain something by his incompetence or his prediction in favor of a dog in which they are interested; or they may even be looking forward maliciously to seeing him look foolish. All these and other ideas may inspire them to push a duffer to the front; but the really remarkable thing about it all is the vanity of the individual, who, though his conscience must tell him that he knows nothing about a breed, will cheerfully undertake a task which is entirely beyond his powers.—English Stock-Keeper.

NOTES FOR NOVICES.

A great many cases of paralysis come under notice—more so, we think, than used to be the case. What the explanation of it is we do not know, but there can be no doubt whatever that a very large number of them are really due to chorea, which is very prevalent in some breeds, and occurs as an after result of distemper. Of that we will speak later; but first of all, we may as well write a few lines on the subject of paralysis proper. Paralysis is a nervous affection, consisting in total loss of power to control the muscles in some particular part. Its origin is, of course, in the brain, for all the nerve channels of the body centre in the brain, and when the brain is enfeebled or when it is affected by any sudden mishap, such as a blow on the head or an injured spine, paralysis of the whole or of a part of the body may naturally result. So that now passing on to chorea, it is easy to understand how that the high fever present in distemper, and the various afflictions connected with that dreaded disease, could cause the brain to be so affected that paralysis of one or more limbs may be a natural consequence. It is a curious thing that this form of paralysis is very often one of the symptoms that appear of an attack of distemper. A dog may be perfectly well one day, and the next day may be noticed to be drawing up his hind legs in a curious way. The meaning of it is, that the distemper has been lurking in his system, and has never been properly eradicated, and now it is affecting the brain. The age at which this occurs is generally from twelve to eighteen months; and it has been remarked by some authorities that when a dog gets distemper early in life, as a rule he will escape paralysis, but that dogs which are attacked later, that is to say, when they have become full grown animals, are more liable to develop it. It is also said that skin disease, occurring with distemper, acts as a sort of safeguard against paralysis; and skin disease, however troublesome and tedious it may be to cure, is certainly to be preferred to an attack of paralysis, which, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, never leaves the animal in the perfect condition he enjoyed before he was attacked by it. We may say that the best remedies for chorea are regular exercise of a quiet, non-exciting character; careful dieting on light wholesome food; a regular dose of aperient medicine, and a good tonic, than which nothing is better than Easton's syrup. This is a preparation of iron, quinine and strychnine, and it needs to be given regularly for at least a month, twice or three times a day. The disease is not one that can be cured in a hurry; it needs long-continued, patient treatment, often for many months, before any permanent effect will be produced.

We are often asked to give advice in cases of milk trouble, which, of course, generally occurs when a bitch has lost her puppies; and there is no complaint of our dumb friends that is more deserving of sympathetic treatment than this. Some of these cases arise from loss of puppies by death from some disease or accident; and there are other cases which are the result of sheer cruelty. The man who would take all the puppies away from their mother suddenly, and wilfully run the risk of causing the mother suffering and pain, and perhaps death, deserves to be treated as though he belonged to the wife-beating class, for it is only a question of a different degree of cruelty, and there is no excuse whatever for doing this sort of thing. But we will leave the sentimental aspect, and deal with the surgical and medicinal. The effect of a sudden loss of puppies is, of course, to bring on serious inflammation, and tumors will form, which require very serious surgical treatment. Anyone possessed of the slightest amount of common sense will realize this, and it will be obvious that in any case in which, from circumstances beyond the owner's control, a bitch is deprived of her puppies, it will be absolutely necessary to take artificial means of drawing away the milk, so that inflammation and all its attendant consequences can be avoided. At the same time, steps must be taken to check the formation of milk, if possible, and this can be done by giving brisk aperients, by reducing the diet, and by the use of a suitable ointment. Lanoline has been recommended for this purpose, and probably a combination of that with ointment of belladonna, will be as suitable an application as can be suggested. Any qualified chemist will understand how to make up in the proper form, and of the correct strength, if the purpose for which it is required is clearly explained to him. Should such a misfortune as an abscess occur, it will be necessary to apply hot fomentations and poultices, and this treatment will have to be continued, and probably will need to be followed by the use of the surgeon's knife. Anyway, in such a case as that, it will be much better from every point of view to obtain the services of the nearest veterinary surgeon—or if no veterinary surgeon can be at hand, a case like this is one which can be treated by the ordinary, family medical practitioner, if he cares to attend to it, as no doubt he will be pleased to do, if he be a humane man. After recovery the animal will need a good course of tonics, and probably nothing will be more satisfactory than a mixture of cod liver oil and quinine, which is obtainable in the form of gelatine capsules, and the effect of which will be, not only to tone up the whole system, but also to enable her to put on flesh again, for she is certain to be in a very weak, reduced condition.

Most dog owners have their own ideas as to what constitutes the best medicine for worms. One man will swear by a certain remedy, and another man will swear at it. The fact is, that in dealing with this plague, a little experimenting is necessary; and there is a natural disposition, of course, on the part of every dog owner to place confidence in a remedy which has been tried one or more times, and has proved successful. The same remedy, of course, does not suit every dog, and different breeds seem to need rather different treatment. It is quite true that there are certain remedies, such as extract of male fern and areca nut, which seem to suit almost every dog; yet with regard to the former, there are plenty of dogs that cannot or will not keep it down, however carefully it may be given, or however delicately its unpleasant taste may be outflavored by some attractive addition. Then if we look at santonine—another favorite remedy—this is very effective in many cases, but it is really dangerous in others, for some dogs are very delicate internally, and santonine acts as a powerful irritant. On the whole, there is probably no remedy more satisfactory than the old-fashioned area nut, and it has this special quality to recommend it, that if it does not do any good, it is sure not to do any harm. Speaking of irritating substances brings us to refer to the class of remedies which are generally known as mechanical. These include granulated tin, powdered glass, and powdered sand, all of which, and many other things, are given under the impression that they will make things so unpleasant for the worms that they will evacuate their stronghold. There is, however, very great and serious risk in giving such things, for not only are they quite uncertain in their action upon the pests, but what is more, they have a tendency to lodge in and about the kidneys, and may set up very serious internal inflammation, which will puzzle the veterinary surgeon or any other adviser called in to prescribe. It is far better to rely upon recognized pharmaceutical remedies, particularly those of a vegetable nature, to the exclusion of mineral substances, as far as possible; the vegetable world provides plenty of remedies which can be depended upon to work a suitable effect, and there is no need whatever, therefore, to have recourse to other things, which are as dangerous as they are uncertain.

Dogs at the extremes of age, that is to say, during puppyhood and again during old age, are often subject to anæmia, which is a condition of bloodlessness, or rather of poorness of the blood, and unless it is cured by suitable remedies, the dog so affected is likely to go into a decline. Anæmia is also a complaint from which bitches suffer during the time that they are rearing puppies. Of course, the cause in their case is simply exhaustion. The remedy for this is, of course, to take away some of the puppies; and indeed a true fancier will always take care that none of his bitches are ever called upon to rear more than quite a small number of puppies, but that the rest are handed over to a foster mother to be brought up. It is poor economy not to provide foster mothers for valuable puppies, because not only do the puppies as a rule grow better under foster mother, but their natural mother is saved from anything in the nature of anæmia or exhaustion. The symptoms of anæmia are utter weakness and feebleness, unsteady gait, no appetite, and incapacity to digest ordinary foods. It is very likely to be followed by lung disease, for consumption affecting the lungs is always more likely to appear in the case of a debilitated constitution. The proper treatment, of course, consists in removing the cause, if the cause be known. In some cases there is a natural disposition to anæmia, which is present as the result of inbreeding, or of some hereditary cause of that kind. In most cases, however, change of food, and if possible a change of air, such as a dog will experience by being sent away into the country to some farmhouse on a bracing hill-top will do good. Then a good tonic is necessary, and probably the best would be a course of Easton's syrup or even of Parrish's chemical food. Either of these will do well, but the former should be recommended, if it is a very bad case. With regard to suitable foods, a little raw, lean meat, regularly, is as good as anything, for that is the most natural food of a dog, and it is comparatively easy of digestion—an important consideration. much milk should be given as the animal will take; dogs as a rule are not loth to drink milk, and the constituents of milk are such as will tend to keep up the tissue growth, which under an incorrect system of feeding is sure to proceed very slowly. Attention must also be given to the need for aperient medicine or otherwise, but that is a matter which can be left to the owner's own judgment. Above all things, give ample exercise in the fresh air, and avoid anything in the nature of indoor confinement.

During the summer weather there is always a considerable demand for disinfectants for use in the kennels and exercise yards. It is surprising what a large number of disinfectants there are on the market at the present time, compared with what existed a few years ago. The progress of bacteriological science, and the discoveries which are constantly being made by chemists in the direction of preventive measures, both human and veterinary, are, of course, the reasons why so many different preparations have made their appearance. In regard to disinfectants for use in the kennel, the important point to consider when choosing one for regular use seems to us to consist in determining whether a particular disinfectant will merely cloak an unpleasant odor by its own worse odor, or whether it will actually destroy the effluvia and germs of contagion which are floating about, when they come in contact with it. Of course, the two greatest disinfectants known are Nature's own disinfectants—air and water. Thorough ventilation of kennels and constant cleansing of them are infinitely better than all the disinfectants imaginable. Chemical preparations should only be regarded as an addition to these great natural disinfectants. It is quite useless to attempt to keep kennels and yards healthy if they are allowed to remain in a dirty, filthy condition, whilst trust is placed in the liberal use of disinfectants. This is the wrong way to go about it altogether. The use of disinfectants is not that they should take the place of ordinary cleanliness, but rather, when ordinary cleanliness has been exercised, then disinfectants should be used to prevent contagion coming from other quarters. Amongst the chemicals most frequently used, chloride of lime is prominent. The best way to use chloride of lime is to make a solution of it in water, and then syringe the places with the solution. The water will have taken all the free chlorine gas from the lime, and the lime will sink to the bottom of the water, and then the liquid may be poured off, and it will certainly deodorize any place where there is an unpleasant odor. Carbolic acid is another favorite disinfectant, and the crude, black form of it can be purchased for a few shillings per gallon, and is very good for ordinary "swilling down" purposes. Care should be taken, however, in the use of carbolic acid to see that it is properly dissolved in the water. Do not use too much, and take care that it is thoroughly well mixed with the water, as in case the acid should be in excess, the chances are that some of it will be floating on the surface, and will burn the skin of any person who may put his hand into it, or with whose skin it comes into contact in any other way.

Colic is one of the summer troubles to which dogs are subject, probably for one of two reasons. Either the animal has obtained some filthy water, which is setting up internal trouble, or he may have taken a draught of cold water when very hot. In fact, there are plenty of causes which set up colic in hot weather. We understand by colic a sudden attack of violent pain. Puppies are very often subject to it, and in their case it is due to the presence of worms. Most dog owners know how at times puppies are attacked in this way, and if relief is not quickly given they will have fits and die. In regard to older dogs, the attacks come on very suddenly, and the animal exhibits all the well-known symptoms of acute pain, the body being doubled up in a semi-circular shape, with the tail between the legs. Colic may also come about as the result of a little internal stoppage, or it may be due to wrong feeding. There are some kinds of food which are apt to ferment internally, particularly sugary substances, which undergo chemical decomposition, and so it is a complaint which may very often affect dogs kept indoors and fed on all sorts of sweet dainties. The best course of treatment is to give a good dose of castor oil first, and follow that by a few drops of sal-volatile, tincture of opium and ether, which can be obtained from the nearest chemist, who will understand how and in what proportions to mix them, if the purpose for which the mixture is required be explained to him. Sometimes the use of an injection is desirable in cases in which it may be supposed that there is a stoppage internally. In a good many cases, the administration of small doses of chlorodyne at intervals of half an hour will have a good effect, but judgment will have to be exercised according as the dog may be suffering from constipation or relaxation. There is no hard and fast line to be drawn, but each case must be dealt with on its merits. On the whole there is nothing like a good dose of castor oil, whatever be the case. It cannot do any harm, for if there be constipation, the castor oil will relieve that; if on the other hand there be relaxation, the castor oil will tend to carry away from the intestines the irritating matter which is the cause of the symptoms. Great care should be taken with regard to puppies during hot weather, lest they have anything in the way of sour food. It is such a common practice to leave part of a meal not eaten in the feeding bowls—and often exposed to the sun, and not
