Dogs In Canada Christmas Number

CHRISTMAS DAY is still several weeks away but we are already busy in making preparations for a Christmas Number that we hope will surpass all our previous efforts.

HERE then is a grand opportunity for the Canadian dog world to show its strength at this critical stage in the history of mankind.

REMEMBER that DOGS IN CANADA reaches the entire Canadian fancy (and far beyond). Remember also that Canadians are buying dogs today in greater number than for many years past.

IN THIS, the fourth year of the second World War, we are most anxious that our Christmas Number shall reflect the determination of Canadian Dogdom to "Carry On!"

SO THAT we may gauge to a reasonable degree the extent to which YOU propose to support this particular issue, may we ask for your reservations as early as possible. In this way we can determine the amount of suitable reading matter necessary to lend a proper balance to the whole book when it is finally printed.

THERE will be no increase in advertising rates for our Christmas Number, and kennels desirous of being reviewed may refer to the scale of rates appearing elsewhere in this issue. Quotations will gladly be furnished on advertisements or reviews taking in more than one page.

MANY complimentary messages have been received regarding the change of policy but we feel certain that a superior Christmas Number will accomplish much to re-establish DOGS IN CANADA.

AS A SPECIAL OFFER, fanciers not having stock for sale or to offer at stud may wish all their fellow-fanciers the "Season's Greetings" in a one-inch single column space at a charge of $1.00. This provides sufficient space for your kennel name, your name, your breed(s) and address.

SEND US copy and cuts (or photographs). Space will be allocated without favor as the reservations are made. Half-tone cuts will be prepared by us and sold to our advertisers at schedule cost.

Editorial

FIFTY-FOUR YEARS ago a group of Canadian dog lovers founded The Canadian Kennel Club.

The objects for which the Club was formed that many years ago are very much the same today and the sporting spirit which envisioned an organization nation-wide in scope has developed into an organization of influence and financial standing that we rather imagine its founders little anticipated.

How has this come about? The reasons are many and varied, but this is not a singular example, for other sports, too, have developed along progressive lines when those engaged in that sport had the foresight to lay the foundation of a governing body whose guiding principles were based on a common-sense application of such rules and regulations as were deemed necessary to enact to properly govern the sport. Businesslike methods and fairness toward all by those in whose hands is placed the responsibility for directing the activities of the governing body; strict observance of all rules and regulations by those engaged in any way in the sport; constant realization that conduct can be within the meaning of the law and the rules and yet be morally undesirable; and, to an ever increasing degree, the proper club or organization "spirit"—these, and possibly others, are every-day essentials if any given sport is to maintain a position of integrity and influence in a community or nation. Without them progress and success is impossible.

"Esprit", the French word for "spirit", developed into an expression of international usage—"esprit de corps"—which, according to Webster, implies sympathy, enthusiasm, devotion, and jealous regard for honor of the body as a whole. In the light of present events the phrase aptly describes the men in our fighting forces who, collectively, have a singleness of purpose, a determination to achieve that purpose and an "all for one, one for all" attitude toward each other.

In a letter to the Editor, Mr. G. M. Howard, owner of the Merlin Kennels at Quebec City, writes: "I've always been of the opinion that we do not employ the 'club' spirit enough, at least in those parts of Canada where I have travelled. I've called on members of the C.K.C. (and many times was totally unknown to them), introduced myself as a fellow

DOGS and FISHING

OUR frontispiece this month depicts two Labrador Retrievers fishing in a stream located about fifteen minutes from down-town Vancouver. The two dogs in question are the male, Ch. Capilano Clipper, bred by J. K. Clarke of Vancouver, and owned by Harry Kolthammer, and the female near Ch. Capilano Girl, bred and owned by Mrs. Agnes Kolthammer. The latter was best in show at Victoria last Fall under Judge Walter H. Reeves. Fresh salmon are to be caught in abundance in the creek shown, and these dogs retrieve ducks from the open sea regardless of the breakers.

A short time ago, Mr. Reeves very kindly loaned your editor bound volumes of the "Illustrated Kennel News" of the years 1902 to 1914, and from these we have been able to glean two readers dealing with dogs—and their ability to assist in fishing. Because of their interest we are taking the opportunity of reproducing them for your reading pleasure:

"Canine intelligence has been the subject of many and varied flattering testimonials, but it has remained for Mr. Sydney Holland, the popular chairman of the London Hospital, to enlist a dog's services on behalf of the fisherman, by converting his beautiful Labrador Retriever Shadrach into what he neatly calls his "new patent gaff".

The "Onlooker" says: The idea first occurred to him after seeing a picture of a dog landing a trout for his master, and, without much difficulty, he succeeded in training Shadrach to emulate this feat in a trout stream. But it was not until the autumn of last year that he trained the dog to the lordlier sport of salmon on a Scottish river, and with marked success.

"Directly a fish is hooked," writes Mr. Holland, "Shadrach sits close to the water's edge, waiting for orders—motionless, but every sense alert, every muscle taut—the picture of strained, tense attention. I used to play the fish until it was pretty well tired out, and then as soon as I gave the word, he would swim out for it. His approach usually seemed to give the fish a fresh lease of life, and the struggle that ensued was very pretty to watch, because Shadrach very often had to dive for his prey. The fisherman's part on the bank in the meantime was, of course, not confined to that of idle spectator, because, while Shadrach was attending to business, he had to be very careful that the line did not foul the dog.

"After Shadrach had secured the fish, he always made straight for the shore with the fish in his mouth, and an eight and a half-pound fish he landed without a hitch; and it is, by the way, no easy feat for a dog to lift an eight and a half-pounder out of the water on to a steep and difficult landing. But my 'new patent gaff' has certainly a good many points in its favour, because a dog with a soft mouth will hardly mark a fish at all, unless it struggles severely, and even in that case not more than the gaff used in the ordinary way would.

"Shadrach's accomplishment made him a very popular companion with ladies, who often find playing a lively salmon rather tiring work, and Shadrach was always ready to come to their assistance as soon as they had had enough of it.

"Shadrach always makes a point of holding the fish about the middle of the body, so that the balance is very nicely adjusted."

"There seems, as a matter of fact, no particular reason why a taste for fishing should not be cultivated in a dog. Some years ago there was a dog at the sea-weir at Llandillo-Rhos, if memory serves, a mongrel Newfoundland, belonging to the weir-keeper, who, if less highly trained, may be regarded in some respects as a forerunner of Shadrach's accomplishment, and thereby achieved some local celebrity. The weir, composed of wattled hurdles on a rocky headland running out into the sea, not far from the Little Orme, was filled by the tide. As, during the ebb, the water drained off, fish of all sorts were, of course, trapped in the weir, and some fine catches of herrings, codlings, sea trout, and other fish, not to mention bucketsful of whitebait, were often made. At a word from his master the dog would plunge into the weir and return with a sizeable fish, which he would immediately bring to his master."

And still another mode of "dog fishing" as related in the Illustrated Kennel News:

Many curious methods of catching fish are in vogue, but it will be news to many people to learn that there is at least one place in England where fish are regularly hunted with dogs, and hunted on dry land, not in the water. This is on the shore at the seaward end of the Quantock Hills, where the beach consists of muddy sands broken up by seaweed-covered rocks. Under certain conditions the sea retreats even further than usual, leaving great stretches of the shore exposed. Under the lee of many of the rocks there are little pools, in which great congers lurk until the sea returns. This is the time for hunting them. Clad in old clothes and good, stout boots, the hunters proceed to shore, carrying six-foot ash saplings, pointed at the end, and a roughly-shaped iron pole, called a "glad-hook".

A Terrier or Spaniel trained to the work accompanies the sportsmen. Down the shore the party of "fish-hunters" proceed, the dogs nosing at all the pools and digging under the rocks. When a favorable place is reached, the poles are brought into play, lifting up the rocks so that the dogs can get under them and drive out any congers that are lurking there. When disturbed, the ugly-looking fish makes a bee-line for shore, lashing its tail and snapping its powerful jaws. Those taking part in the sport for the first time get quite alarmed when a huge conger apparently makes straight for them, eager to take a succulent piece out of their legs; but the dogs soon make a dart for it, and the poles and iron are brought down on it until a well-directed blow stretches it out dead. It is quite an exciting sport while it lasts, for in the hurry to capture the fish one of the party may get the blow, and now and again the Terrier utters an agonizing yelp as a too eager fisherman misses the conger and whacks him on the back. The novice soon learns why old clothes are worn, for the mud flies about everywhere as the sticks are slammed into the sand, and occasionally one of the sportsmen trips over a rock or slips on the mud. It is very seldom that no fish are captured, and sometimes some regular monsters are caught, these big 'uns naturally providing the best and most exciting sport.

Writing in the October issue of The American Kennel Gazette, "Canis" provides some very interesting information concerning the Portuguese Water Dog, without which the fishermen of Portugal would be at a great disadvantage. The Author writes:

"His is a strange duty, and his appearance is almost as weird. His tail is clipped close, yet the tip which is invariably curled over his back wears a long tuft like that of a male lion. In fact, the complete dog is leonine in semblance and spirit, for he brooks no nonsense from those other than his owners. He is best left alone by the non-fisherfolk, because he has, for centuries, been accustomed to the rough environment of the fish hunters, and in consequence intensely dislikes the 'cod-dling' of people employed in less hardy vocations.

"For thousands of years the Portuguese Water Dog, or Cao d'Agua as the native name goes, has been the ally of the native fisherman, and at one time was common to the complete length of the Portuguese coast.

"Hard-working fisherfolk utilize him in several ways. Should one of their nets break, the dog will jump overboard, and, swimming strongly, will quickly retrieve the broken part. If a fish worth 'saving' happens successfully to slip the net or hook, the dog, voluntarily dives for it, seldom missing his piscine quarry.

"Like all fishermen, the Portuguese have their means of communicating by signalling, but under circumstances where the means usually employed are not satisfactory, they attach their messages to dogs of the Cao d'Agua breed and these canine couriers make the necessary contacts from one craft to another, or from the boat to the mainland.

"It is no wonder that the Portuguese highly value this breed that they have been training for generations."

Indicative of the support which the Guelph Kennel Club received for its show, reported in the last issue of Dogs in Canada, is the statement released by the Club which indicates that the Guelph Mercury British Distress Fund, in aid of which the show was held, benefitted to the extent of $657.37. This is just one more instance of the way dog shows and doggy people are helping worthy causes.

Then, too, the Fort Garry Kennel Club held a most successful show at Winnipeg on September 11th and 12th, and as a result the Ladies' Auxiliary of the R.C.A.S.C. benefitted to the extent of over $400.00.

A UNIQUE ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN

A unique advertising campaign, unique due to the fact that a manufacturer is spending his money, not to directly promote the sale of his product, but to promote the sale of well-bred, registered dogs, is now in its second year. Realizing a definite need, also an opportunity of bringing dog buyers and dog breeders together, Ross Miller of Napanee, manufacturers of the well-known Ross-Miller Dog Foods, last year initiated a Buy-a-Dog advertising campaign. So successful did this 1941 campaign prove that in 1942 it was continued and extended.

Large space, attractive human interest, dog-and-child-picture advertisements appear in the rotogravure section of the Toronto Star Weekly. This publication with its circulation of more than 600,000 readers in all parts of Canada, gives the campaign the widest of coverage and concentration. Advertisements invite the reader to write to Ross Miller for the names of reliable breeders of the breed of dog in which the reader is interested. These names are supplied from the Ross-Miller Directory of Breeders which list the names and addresses, breeds and other pertinent information of Canadian Breeders and was compiled through the co-operation of the Breeders themselves.

Hundreds of inquiries for dogs have been received from all over Canada and as evidence of the success of the Ross-Miller Buy-a-Dog Campaign in bringing Buyer and Seller together, it may be reported that in a little more than one week in the month of April, reports of sales of dogs from R-M inquiries were received from Vincent A. Moar of Chatham, N.B.; Bob Schelling, Fort Erie, Ont.; Mrs. Lillian Fox, Edmonton, Alta.; Mrs. D. P. Melanson, Digby, N.S.

Having the welfare of the dog breeding industry in mind, Canadian breeders should heartily support a good will effort and campaign of this kind. Any member of the Canadian Kennel Club may have his kennel included free of charge, in the R-M Directory of Breeders, simply by writing Ross-Miller Bisquit Co. Limited, Napanee, giving the necessary information.

★ DON'TS

The January issue of The Canine Review, published in Calcutta, India, is to hand and its Editor, W. E. Barlow, has prepared a list of "Don'ts" for Exhibitors, Novices and Judges. Mr. Barlow's Don'ts for Exhibitors are interesting. Here they are:

Don't

Don't go to a show thinking you've got the best dog in the world — if you do you will come to earth with a bump.

Don't arrive late at a show. Late arrivals cause confusion and annoy the other exhibitors.

Don't forget to find out where your ring is situated and the order and time of judging.

Don't go gadding about near judging time and depend on the steward letting you know when it is time to enter the ring — if you do, you may miss the bus.

The Helping Hand!

Elsewhere in this issue there appears a full-page advertisement calling attention to our plans for the Christmas Number of Dogs in Canada. This advertisement appeared in our October issue and while we anticipate that all our members will, in some way or another, find it possible to support the Christmas issue we hardly expected the following letter that speaks for itself:

17/10/42.

To the Editor
Dogs in Canada.

Dear Mr. Brown:

In accordance with your advertisement in the October issue I have canvassed all Quebec City breeders with the result that I have secured order for one inch space for 100 per cent of our membership. We are just giving you a rough idea of what we require and I enclose my personal cheque for $5.00 to cover the order.

By the way I had a very pleasant time calling on fellow members, introducing myself, etc. Saw a grand pair of Scotties, daughters of "Champion Desril Rock" at Greyfriars Kennels; two swell Dachshunds at Marc Grandbois' residence, and a model layout at Bergerville Kennels—individual runs for each and every; Boston and lots of spare kennel space. The Bostons were real typey and I could have enjoyed a week-end talking dogs with George Beach, the owner. In passing along some Quebec news I must express the opinion that local breeders are very lucky in having such an able veterinarian, as Dr. E. M. Trenouth, it always gives me more confidence to deal with a "vet" who is a dog breeder in his own right.

By the way when I was in Montreal early this month I found my old friend Bert Collins of "Wynot Kennels" on the sick list, a very serious accident at work sent Bert down to The Royal Victoria Hospital. Am very pleased, however, to say that his wife informed me this week that he is off the "danger list" now.

It was no trouble at all to follow out my little program in Quebec City, and if at any time in the future you feel that I can be of assistance, call on me.

Yours sincerely,

G. M. Howard.

Merlin Kennels,
1280 St. Foy Rd.,
Quebec, P.Q.

Without any specific request from the Editor, Mr. Howard canvassed the other members in Quebec City with the result that the Christmas Number will carry Christmas Greetings from all five members in Quebec City.

Don't speak to the judge unless he speaks to you.

Don't forget that it is bad form if you have a well-known dog or a champion to call it by its name in the ring; your fellow exhibitors will think you a rotten sport and in nine cases out of ten the judge will be prejudiced against you.

Don't grouse at the judge's awards. If you don't like them, keep your dog at home the next time this judge officiates.

Don't forget to give consideration to the rights of other exhibitors

Don't forget to see that your dog has water and is taken off his bench once or twice.

Don't tear up your cards in the ring if you think the judge should have put you higher.

Don't forget that it's the ups and downs of showing which make it such a glorious uncertainty and if you go under one judge you may win under the next.

Don't forget to be cheerful whatever the judge's decision — remember it will be all the same a hundred years hence.

Don't stand outside the ring whistling and shouting to your dog whilst someone else handles it for you.

Don't carry your red ticket or ribbons into the ring in subsequent classes.

★ B.C. GUN DOG CLUB FIELD TRIALS

A LICENSED trial for Retrievers was held by the B.C. Gun Dog Club Inc., at Wood's Island, B.C., on Sunday, September 13th. Judges were Messrs. W. N. Egerton, O. S. Harrison and J. Pendergrasse, all of Vancouver. The Puppy Stake, with four entries, was headed by the female Labrador, Susequay, owned and handled by S. Wragg. In second place was Westhaven Golden Rod, a male Labrador, owned by W. Higby and handled by J. Smyth. Third went to the male Chesapeake, Cariboo Mike, owned and handled by O. Krog.

In the Novice Stake six were entered and here 1st place went to the winner of the Puppy Stake, Susequay. Second and third place went to Cariboo Mike and Westhaven Golden Rod respectively, also winners in the Puppy Stake.

With seven entries in the Open All Age Stake, the Labrador female, Bracken of Tibertown, owned by B. Blair and handled by K. Coughlan, was tops. Incidentally this dog won the All Age Stake at the same Club's fall trials the previous year and she is, therefore, now a Field Champion. Second place in the All Age also went to a Labrador female—Westhaven Pride, owned and handled by J. Smyth. Cariboo Mike, winner in both Novice and Puppy Stakes, was 3rd.

One week later the B.C. Gun Dog Club held its annual trial for Spaniels at Lulu Island, B.C., with Messrs B. L. Blair and Don Kneale officiating as judges. There nine entries in the All Age Stakes and here the Springer Spaniel, Keith's Lady, owned and handled by K. Coughlan won supreme honours. In second place was the male Springer, Crevamoy Bill, owned and handled by J. Smyth. Third was another male Springer, Bing, owned and handled by J. Dixon.

DOBERMAN PINSCHERS

Pups You'll Be Proud to Own and Show

I'm anxious to place some real Doberman in the hands of fanciers genuinely interested in the breed, who want dogs of top quality and ideal temperament and who will show them when they mature. Let's look at the records! I've had top winners in both American and Canadian shows from every litter bred so far, including several Best of Breeds and Group placements and a Best-in-Show.

"D" litter from Arista of Pontchartrain—Winners at both Hamilton and the Canine Breeders' Shows.

"E" litter from Judy of Navigator—9 points—dam of the sensational youngster Renco von Mannerheim, Best of Breed and second in the group twice this year.

These are no chance bred ones—but have the blood of the top producing sires and dams in America CLOSE-UP. IT COSTS NO MORE to feed and raise a good one.

WHEN SHE WAS SWEET SIXTEEN

By
JAMES D. STRACHAN

But that was a long time ago, a very long time ago. She was a brunette, and her luminous eyes of sky blue gave her an angelic appearance that held an appeal for many, but particularly for your scribe. It was a Friday evening in late July that we foregathered accidentally by appointment as so many young people are wont to do, and arm in arm we walked along Bellhaven Terrace at a brisk pace, indicative of our not having a care in the world as long as we had each other. Her hair hung down beyond her hips in a plait as thick as a man's arm. On and on we walked and by and by we came to an old disused coal mine, and readers from the Motherland will recall those ugly blots on the otherwise lovely landscape, which were "dirt bings" and old disused coal shafts. Out of the shaft opening coursed endless tonnage of coal—for a time, but in due course the limit would be reached, the mine dismantled, and a fence of railway ties put up around the shaft. Alas! Human life was rather cheap in those days, and for the tormented or depressed there were many easy ways of ending it, and the old mine shaft induced many to its shrine.

As Sal and I passed the old shaft, I imagined I heard a sound which could only come from that locality. On referring the matter to my companion I failed to find any corroboration, and so we kept right on walking, but I had been impressed sufficiently to warrant insistence on getting into reverse, and going back to the old shaft, and sitting down on the little earth bank which surrounded it. In those days my Mother used to say, "My Jimmie has an ear that would hear the grass grow", and that may have been very true at one time, but not so very true today. Anyway, the sound came again, but still Sal did not hear it. Again it came, and again, this time a definite, plaintive moan, and Sal heard it.

From whence or from what emanated the sound that filled us with so much excitement? Someone, or something must be down there, and still alive. The "cleedin'" had been left in the shaft I knew, that is the timbering around the shaft to keep the guides, or slides, in place, so that the cages would travel truly up and down with their loads of men or of coal. Every four feet a timber went around the square of the shaft, and so I decided that a descent was not impossible, and at once intimated my intention to try. It was quite an experience to resist the pleading of those blue eyes from which tears literally flowed. But I was always more or less impulsive, and always ready for a dare. Soon I had divested myself of hat, coat and vest. Soon I had clambered over the fence. Soon I was on my way to—God only knew what. Down and down I sped until the opening showing the evening sky was but a pin point for size. Still down I went, and by and by my foot touched water, and I knew I had reached the "sump"—bottom. Taking a good hold on the slide with the crook of my trusty right arm, I groped down with my left hand. A pair of terrifying green eyes showed up, like lanterns, as a tongue licked my hand. To this day I have never been able to describe my feelings at that moment, and I am now sure that I will never be able to do so. My heart was up in my mouth when I realized that I had a dog by the collar. In the inky darkness I realized that the dog was a large one, but as he was only skin and bone, he was rather light as I took up his entire weight. I manoeuvred his forelegs round my neck with the minimum of trouble or exertion. To tie them together with a handkerchief was a job for a nigger rather than a lover. Anyway, he was soon tied, and I set out on the return journey with my heart bursting with indignation, suspense, and excitement. At the fourth rung up, the handkerchief slipped, and back to the "sump" went my precious burden. Down again I went, and believe it or not, my skeleton companion was distrustful of me, and it was with much distraction that I awaited his decision to trust me a second time. When I had him in place again, I found that the handkerchief was lost, but my necktie, a MacKenzie tartan affair, was woollen, long and strong, and this time I really did a good job of tying his legs around my neck.

Up we went together, four feet at a time. I was soaked through and through. The timbers appeared to be twice as slimy when ascending as they were when descending. The dog's weight, a feathery impost at the start, now threatened to shut off my breathing at times. And as I moved his weight from time to time I was conscious that much of my strength was spent. After what seemed to be an eternity, I could see the sky again, and I could hear the mumbling of many voices. My distracted little Sarah had the whole neighbourhood alarmed and on hand. As I finally reached terra firma again, there were many kindly souls on hand to offer praise and encouragement, many offers of a wash and some clean clothes, and everybody wanted the dog, but the strange thing was that the dog wanted nobody, not even me. That is something of a problem that I have never been able to solve. But it must be remembered that it was only his body and spirit that kept him together at the most. Mr. Hobbs, the editor of my home-town paper claimed him, and in after years he became not only a handsome dog, but he was a pure-bred Newfoundland to boot. Why anyone should have wanted to end his life by throwing him down a coal mine shaft I'll never know. One thing I do know, and that is this, that that particular experience had a sobering effect on two young lives that always shuddered at the very thought of it.

The Sal in this story is none other than "My Old Sal", who passed to her reward on October 27th, 1938. She was always proud of my doggy affiliations, always rejoiced when my dogs won at the shows. In her late years she entertained such celebrities of dogdom as Albert Payson Terhune, Dr. John De Mund, Charles T. Inglee, Ralph Stewart, Freeman Lloyd, and etc. The Directors coming to the annual meetings of the Canadian Kennel Club were her special concern, and amongst them she had many favorites, chief of these were George Kynoch, Archie Semple, Alec McCloy, Charlie Sullivan, Bill Pym, Dr. J. T. Cooper, and etc., etc.

On my return from England in 1935, I was told on the way home that she had been operated on for cancer, and that she had refused to consent to the operation until everyone in the family had sworn to keep the information from me so that my holiday would not be marred by the circumstance, but she had been brought home that very morning. When we met at her bedside she said: "H'lo Jim. Did you have a nice time? Where did you go? Whom did you see? My you're looking swell. Your holiday has done you a world of good. I'm glad to see you." I told Sal many things before I slept that night, and did not forget my visit to the old coal shaft, the spot that had welded us together closer than any vows had ever done.

The Cocker Spaniel

TODAY vs. "YESTERDAY"

By BILL CARSON, De Winton, Alta.

While data on the early Cocker is interesting, it is at times very difficult to procure. A series of articles in Dogs in Canada some time ago furnished considerable information on the foundation bloodlines of the early American Cocker, from the days of Ch. Obo II to date. It was of great value to the Cocker fanciers and something quite beyond the reach of the vast majority of us if left to our own resources.

In gathering up articles and reminiscences similar to the above mentioned, it provides us with a clearer picture of the evolution of our little sporting dog. On looking over many of those articles, we find that many believe the Cocker originated in Spain, hence the name Spaniel, however, it is not definite. But it does appear that the name Cocker had a very definite meaning for the dog was almost solely used for hunting woodcock in the days prior to immigrating to America. From what information we can gather on those early days of Cockerdom, we find it was essential that the Cocker be a very low set, tough and hardy little dog with an instinct and determination to hunt. He was used to flush and retrieve woodcock from the matted briars in England.

To be able to visualize the type of Cocker of those days it is necessary for us to go back to the days of Ch. Obo II in 1882, as we have limited information on the conformation of the breed prior to that date. The recorded data and photos of Ch. Obo II present a very queer looking little fellow in comparison to our modern Cocker.

Let us take his recorded measurements, photos, weight and other available data and picture in our mind his type and conformation. It is recorded that he was 10½ inches high at the withers, 29 inches from the tip of the muzzle to the butt of the tail or stern and weighed 22 pounds. His photos show him to be more or less thick or square headed with a short, thick pig-like neck, low set and heavily built. Let us piece these measurements together with some of our other modern breeds.

I quite recently place a rule alongside of a modern Pekingese champion. This little champion was many times Best of Breed as well as many times Best Toy. I feel safe in saying that this Peke was about an average in height. He stood 9½ inches at the withers, or within an inch of the recorded height of our early dogs, Ch. Obo II, etc. That would place the early Cocker and the modern Peke at almost the same height. I have also placed a rule on several of our more modern Cockers who have inherited the more or less square head and short thick neck of their ancestors only to find that the average length of such heads and necks were about 10 inches from muzzle to withers. So deducting the 10 inches from the 29 inches over all length of Ch. Obo II we would have about 19 inches from withers to stern on a Cocker that stood 10½ inches high. In other words his length of back was almost double his height. While I know little of the standard of the Dachshund, I would conclude that the length of back of the modern Dachshund and the early Cockers, for example Ch. Obo II, would compare very closely.

To us of sixty years later a Cocker of that type and conformation would seem almost incredible. His heavy body and short legs greatly offset his length in appearance. Ch. Black Prince of 1881, Ch. Cherry Boy of 1887, and others of the '80's all present the same appearance in their photos.

From what we can gather from the conformation and type of the Cocker of 1882, it is very clear that the men responsible for setting up our present standard in that very same year, were men of great courage and foresight to undertake a job of that size particularly when we realize how far from the standard were the Cockers of those early days.

We all realize that a vast change in conformation was necessary when the little briar running dog immigrated to this continent with its wide open spaces and vast range, if he was to retain his usefulness as a sporting dog. He required the stamina that he inherited down through the centuries but he also required a far greater speed to cover the far larger range.

It is claimed by many that our present standard was patterned after the then popular standard bred horse. While there is no available data to prove those contentions, there is much in the Cocker standard that resembles that of the road horse of those days.

With us in these days of the self starter and the high compression chamber, it is very difficult to interpret the standard as it was originally intended, thus the many divergencies of opinion with regard to the standard. However, with the fast becoming popular Cocker field trials, these differences of opinion will eventually be ironed out and replaced by a more uniform theory. Then, no doubt, our little Cocker will again become as popular in his sphere as a sporting dog as he was in his native land, flushing and retrieving woodcock from the matted briar.

THERE'S A DIFFERENCE

Have you ever noticed that when the other fellow is set in his way, he's obstinate; when you are, it is just firmness? When the other fellow doesn't like your friends, he's prejudiced; when you don't like him, you are simply showing that you are a good judge of human nature? When the other fellow tries to treat some one especially well, he's toadying; when you try the same game, you are using tact? When the other fellow picks flaws in things, he's cranky; when you do you are discriminating? When the other fellow says what he thinks, he's spiteful; when you do, you are frank?—Winchester Press.

IN THE NOVEMBER ISSUE

NOT INFREQUENTLY publications having a background extending over one-half century or more will refer to the material which appeared in the issue corresponding to the current issue say fifty years ago. While The Canadian Kennel Club has had an official organ since the beginning of the Club in 1888, this has not always been the Club's property for the Canadian Kennel Gazette, later changed to Kennel and Bench and now Dogs in Canada, was owned and edited for many years by H. B. Donovan, Secretary of the Club, from September 1891 to August 1912.

Fortunately we have a complete file of the official organ as published down through the years and believing it would be of interest to our readers the following paragraphs were taken from the November issues of the official organ for the years 1892, 1902, 1912, 1922, 1932.

At the annual meeting of The Canadian Kennel Club held on September 13th, 1892, the Secretary's report indicated the cash receipts for the year ended August 31st, 1892, of $600.41 as against operating expenses $417.81. The Secretary's "salary" in that year was $100.00. At this meeting the Secretary's salary was raised to $200.00.

Frank F. Dole's Bull bitch, Lady Venus, who won first at Kingston was found dead in her box on arrival at the Ottawa show. It was supposed that suffocation was the cause of death.

Entries at the Toronto dog show held in conjunction with the Toronto Industrial Exhibition, now the Canadian National Exhibition, were 733. C. H. Stone was Superintendent of the show.

Entries for the Kingston show were 240. In the list of judges was Dr. Wesley Mills, of McGill University, and at that time, President of The Canadian Kennel Club.

A circular was issued by the Canadian Fox Terrier Club, a new organization then beginning, setting forth the advantages and aims of the new Club and calling for nominations for membership.

The Ottawa show had 192 entries. Advertisers in this issue included Spratts; an advertisement featuring the book, "The Dog in Health and in Disease", by Dr. Wesley Mills; George Douglas offering at stud his outstanding Cocker, Ch. Black Duke and Ch. Black Dufferin; George Bell offering at stud Cocker, Field Spaniels and Pugs, among the former being Ch. Fascination and Ch. King of Obos; The Toronto Kennel Club; and an advertisement featuring Volume No. 1 of The Canadian Kennel Club Stud Book just off the press.

"The Montreal Canine Association, of which Mr. Ogilvie is President, has during the past season, done most effective work in ridding Montreal Streets of vagrant curs. About four hundred have been provided for, and the work is to be enlarged, so that a dogs' home on modern lines will result. Several large sums have been promised the M.C.A. by friends who have appreciated the labor entailed during the summer".

"Messrs. R. H. and T. H. Trimble, Toronto, are the latest converts to Bulldogdom. We hear they have purchased and are importing a particularly good eleven-months-old daughter of Ivel Monarch, and expect her to arrive from the 'other side' this month."

A. A. Macdonald, who at that time owned the Aldon Kennels of Smooth Fox Terriers, a kennel name by the way now the property of his daughter, Mrs. Kenneth D. Marlatt of Airedale fame, "disposed of a very grand bitch he brought out to Toronto to a Chicago fancier for the very substantial sum of $500.00".

The Hamilton Kennel Club, not being able to secure a suitable building, decided to postpone its fall show until the following spring. (History repeats itself).

The St. Thomas Kennel Club held its second annual show with an entry of 350 dogs. Among the judges was Dr. H. Clay Glover whose name is known all over this continent today for remedies dog owners have come to regard as a standby.

Advertisers in this issue included A. A. Macdonald; The Dog Fancier; Tipperary Kennels of Babcock & Kerr; Terra Cotta Kennels of John G. Kent, K.C., later President of The Canadian Kennel Club; Norfolk Kennels of George Gooderham, who did so much to put the name of Canada to the front in the Fox Terrier world; Dr. C. Y. Ford; F. W. Jacobi, who later was to become the Superintendent of the Canadian National Exhibition show; W. P. Fraser, Secretary of the Ontario Jockey Club for many years, and of course Spratts.

"Mr. George W. Bailey, of the Clapton Kennels, Ottawa, has purchased from Mr. Walter Sands, Broadway Kennels, Toronto, the Smooth Fox Terrier bitch, Broadway Dollie, the dam of Broadway Double, imported from Mr. Francis Redmond's kennel by Mr. Sands."

"The Boston Terrier Club of Montreal is being revived and the officials purpose holding a specialty show probably next February. Mr. John F. Campbell and others are taking an active interest in the Club. One prominent fancier has promised Mr. Campbell $100.00 towards the funds of the show."

"Arrangements were made with the new Secretary (Canadian Kennel Club) whereby he was given $800.00 per annum to cover the cost of stenographer and office rental, an increase of $200.00 per year over the allowance made the previous secretary. The salary $600.00 remains the same. The secretary is to publish an official organ, which with an annual Stud Book not to exceed 100 pages, is to be supplied the Canadian Kennel Club at $1.00 per member. On motion of Mr. Britton it was decided to recommend to the general meeting a revision of Constitution, by-laws and show rules." (C.K.C. Annual General Meeting).

"A rather curious coincidence happened this year. In 1881, Mr. C. H. Mason judged the dog show at London, Ont., Mr. James Mortimer and Mr. H. W. Lacey being present at the show. In 1912 these three gentlemen were again on Canadian soil; Mr. Mason judging at London, Mr. Mortimer at Ottawa and Mr. Lacey at Montreal. After a lapse of thirty-one years this coincidence appears to us to be worth recording."

"Mr. H. W. Lacey had a tedious judging engagement at Montreal, where he had some two hundred and fifty dogs with about nine hundred entries, many of which were repeat after repeat. We think it is time that the local classes were cut out. The repetition of meaningless awards can hardly go on indefinitely and they have little merit."

"We now have the honor of including the esteemed wife of the Prime Minister of Canada in dog loving circles. Mrs. Borden, while in Scotland, was presented with a West Highland Terrier, hailing from and bearing the hall mark of Fort William. We hope that Mrs. Borden may be induced to let us see how good a dog he is."

"Ottawa put up an exceedingly clean, well managed, well benched little show of about 190 dogs."

"The New Brunswick Kennel Club held its annual dog show in St. Andrew's Rink, St. John, N.B., on Sept. 3rd, 4th, 5th, and 6th. This annual fixture is looked upon by the people of the Maritime provinces as the event of the season, with dogs from Canada only, a truly Canadian show. There were only one hundred and sixty dogs entered and each one of them was in its stall at 10 o'clock."

"Lethbridge held its first dog show this year in connection with its fair, and is now on the map to stay, we hope, with this summer show."

"Avondale Ascot, the recently imported Scottish Terrier, is offered at stud by Mr. Arthur Ellison, Mount Hamilton, Ontario. His ad. gives you a good description of him."

"A general meeting of The Canadian Kennel Club was held on Wednesday evening, September 6th, 1922, in the Administration Building of the Canadian National Exhibition, about fifty members attending."

"Hats off to Hamilton." That was the common comment on September 22nd and 23rd, and the honor was well deserved. Here is a club who do not claim to know it all, but their anxiety to work their heads off at what they do know more than overcomes any handicap in that respect."

"Mr. Fred Shawley, the Secretary of the Pomeranian Club of Canada, made his debut as a Toy judge at the Hamilton show."

Two hundred and thirty-five dogs were entered at the New Brunswick Kennel Club dog show, nineteen less being actually benched.

"At the Canadian National Exhibition dog show, seven hundred dogs were benched with almost two thousand entries, the show was always crowded to capacity, despite the fact that the mercury was hitting a dizzy pinnacle

"Mrs. Thomas Worthy's 'Jennie June' went through to Winners in solid colors (Canadian National Exhibition show). She is a nice headed bitch with good front and shoulders, and is the proper size as sound as a bell. She is my idea of a Cocker for a red, and she can hold her own in any company."

"Mr. and Mrs. John W. Bruce are visiting in Europe, their trip taking them to the Geneva Conference, where Mr. Bruce will act in the capacity of adviser to the Labor representative at the Conference. A great honor, this, and one that gives much pleasure to a host of admirers in Toronto and Canada."

"As a result of pronounced and ever-growing interest amongst Canadian fanciers in the Alsatian Shepherd Dog a robust association, known as the Alsatian Shepherd Dog Club has been formed at Toronto. So much did the Indian put into his plea, that the court gave the dog another chance, and the happy owner set out with a smiling face to retrace his steps over the 26 long miles back home.

Training War Dogs

Some time ago the Dog World announced that the War Office had established a training establishment for development of war dogs, and an appeal was made to the public to loan their dogs for the "duration".

The latest information to hand is to the effect thousands of owners responded to the appeal and offered all sorts and sizes of dogs for war service from miniature Toys to giant Great Danes.

After a careful weeding-out process the powers that be narrowed down the field to a few breeds, and in the light of experience gained, have found that for the purposes required the best percentages come from Alsatis, Borders, Collies, Airedales, Lurchers and Cross-breeds.

"Somewhere near London" the training has progressed on excellent lines. Today many dogs are carrying out duties with the troops. Reports of their work is most favorable.

The purposes, it is understood, to which the dogs are put are primarily the following:

(1) Mobile patrol work, i.e., to accompany night patrols in the forward zone; (2) static posts, i.e., a patrol placed in an advanced outpost to give warning to enemy approach to the main body; (3) Inter-communication dog, i.e., messenger dogs, keeping up a constant liaison between two fixed positions.

The work of the dogs is primarily undertaken in the hours of darkness, but occasions arise when they can be of the utmost service in the daytime.

The patrol dogs are trained to detect the slightest movement around them and to work perfectly silently indicating by their deportment the approach of strangers, thus giving the patrol ample time to make their plans, either to attack, move position, or whatever the occasion demands.

By their infinitely superior senses, scenting powers, hearing and vision, dogs are capable of indicating the presence of humans at a distance of 100-200 yards. This represents quite a long period at the rate at which a patrol is capable of moving after dark.

And then some one will still doubt the honesty and strength of the ties that bind a man and his dog so strongly together. Surely some dog lover should have arranged for the Indian's return to the Reserve in comfort."

The "inter-communication" messenger dogs, which are mostly Border Collies, it is learned, keep up a constant service of communication between two prearranged fixed posts, or could be taken by one man with the mobile patrol and returned from their forward position to a previously arranged post in the rear.

Sufficient has been said to indicate the immense value dogs are to the fighting forces. The saving in man power; the silent movements after dark; the alertness on an outpost, which rules out the element of a surprise attack, are all of the utmost value to our men. What is more, all this is fully appreciated by all ranks.

From reports to hand, it is evident that much good work already has been done even in these mechanical days, and in a war of rapid movement.

The Germans have always realized the potential value of the dog's services, and had a highly organized army of dogs ready for immediate action long before war broke out, and the use of them has frequently severely handicapped our commanders in the field. Operational officers have reported on surprise attacks that went wrong entirely due to the enemy patrol dogs, and this, apparently, has had the desired effect of stirring up the powers that be in this country to embrace the work of the dog in the national effort.

It must, indeed, be gratifying to all dog lovers to know that at last dogs are occupying a position which most dog owners were keenly anxious they should do. It's better late than never. History will probably repeat itself. Many stirring tales of the heroism of our dogs will shortly be told in precisely the same manner as in the last war.

.. .. AT THE SHOWS

THE Maritime show-giving Clubs, ever ready to carry on, found it possible to repeat the Maritime fall circuit this year with five shows in a period of ten days and the measure of support which they earned from fanciers in other provinces and from the United States bodes well for the continuance of this circuit.

The reports of the Bedford Kennel Club show, Pictou County Kennel Club show and the Moncton Kennel Club show appeared in the October issue and elsewhere in this issue may be found the report of the two shows held by the New Brunswick Kennel Club at Saint John.

The outstanding feature from the awards point of view lies in the wins made by that outstanding Afghan Hound, Am. and now Canadian Champion Rudiki of Prides Hill, owned by Mrs. Marion Foster Florsheim and handled by Alf. Loveridge of Toronto, for this dog was Best in Show at four of the five shows forming the circuit, being entered for exhibition only at the fifth where Mr. Loveridge officiated as judge of all breeds. All told Rudiki has been 41 times best of breed, 39 times placed in Hound Group of which 25 were first place and six times Best in Show.

The circuit commenced with the Bedford Kennel Club show at Halifax on August 29th being in aid of Gyro War Charities and Queen's Canadian Fund. The well known all rounder, Alva Rosenberg of Brooklyn, N.Y., judged all breeds. Best in the Sporting Group went to the Labrador Retriever, Ch. Danny Boy, owned by W. P. Moore of Halifax. In the Working Group the Collie, Am. Ch. Saint Adrian Sultanson, owned by James Christie of North Hanover, Mass., was best. The Terrier Group was headed by the Manchester Terrier, Grenadier Flounce, recently imported from the United States by J. E. Burns of Halifax, Secretary-Treasurer of the Bedford Kennel Club. The Japanese Spaniel, Nippon Konomatchi San, owned by H. O. Whitman of Moncton, won the Toy Group with best in the Non-Sporting Group going to Laurie P. Bourgeois' Boston Terrier, Carry On Lady Katinka.

The Pictou County Kennel Club show followed the Halifax show on September 2nd and here R. C. "Ronnie" Vaughan of Saint John officiated as judge of all breeds. In the Sporting Group Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cavanaugh's English Setter, Int. Ch. Sir Boots of Robcavan, handled by Alf. Loveridge, was best. The Collie, Saint Adrian Sultanson, repeated his Halifax win of best in the Working Group. In Terriers, Malabar's Scarlet O'Hara, owned by S. W. Scarpa's Malabar Kennels, was the best, with best in the Toy Group going to the Pekingese, Pekin Inn's Romeo Chink, owned by Mrs. J. Gennoe. Judge Vaughan found the Boston Terrier, Our Wee Sammy, owned by G. T. Kane of St. John, best in the Non-Sporting Group.

The Moncton show followed on September 4th and here Jas. D. Whiteley of Bedford, N.S., functioned as all rounder. He found his best in the Sporting Group in the Cocker Spaniel, Ch. Cashier of Barrie, owned by Garwood Kennels of St. John. In the Working Group Saint Adrian Sultanson was again best. The Bull Terrier, Duke of Belford, owned by Percy Watson of Moncton, was tops in the Terrier Group. The Toy Group found the Japanese Spaniel, Nippon Konomatchi San, repeat his win of Best in Group at Halifax and in the Non-Sporting Group another repeat win was made by the Boston Terrier, Am. Ch. Our Wee Sammy.

The two shows held by the New Brunswick Kennel Club followed on September 7th and 8th, the latter show being sponsored by the Valcartier Chapter, I.O.D.E. At the first show William T. Miller, Sr., of Halifax, was judge of all breeds. The Cocker Spaniel, Ch. Cashier of Barrie, repeated his win of best in the Sporting Group at Moncton, as did the Collie, Am. Ch. Saint Adrian Sultanson. In the Terrier Group, the Wire Fox Terrier, Burlington Sure Lad, owned by W. J. Smith of Halifax, was best, and in the Non-Sporting Group Am. Ch. Our Wee Sammy again repeated as best.

At the second show Judge Mr. Loveridge found his best in the Sporting Group and Best in Show in the Cocker Spaniel, Ch. Cashier of Barrie, a dog bred by R. H. "Dick" Heppleston of Barrie, Ontario. The Working Group was again won by Saint Adrian Sultanson, as was the Terrier Group by Burlington Sure Lad. In the Non-Sporting Group the Boston Terrier, Ch. Kiskiack Song In My Heart, owned by Commander Alfred H. Miles of Norfolk, Va., was best.

As we said before, there were a number of dogs from the other Canadian provinces. These exhibitors included A. C. F. Archambault of Montreal, Alroy K. Butler of Toronto, Mrs. Joan Detmold of Terrebonne, Quebec; Mrs. F. McEachren of West Hill, Ontario; the Malabar Kennels of Point Fortune, Quebec; and Mrs. Joy Osterdahl of Brockville, Ontario, whose outstanding Dachshund, Ch. Cairo of Joyce, appeared on the front cover of our last issue. The American exhibitors included Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cavanaugh of Chicago; James Christie, North Hanover, Mass.; Mrs. Marion Foster Florsheim, Darien, Conn.; Joe Glaser of New York City; Commander Alfred H. Miles of Norfolk, Va.; and W. W. Ottaway, Port Huron, Michigan.

Thanksgiving Day—Maloney Art Galleries, Toronto—marked the time and place of the annual specialty show of the Boston Terrier Club of Toronto. What with gas rationing and the other difficulties engendered by current events the entry of 45 dogs was a decided compliment to this hard working Club and to the Judge, Bob Schelling, owner of the Saints Rest Kennels at Fort Erie, Ontario.

Best in Show was Ch. Regards Wee Model, bred and owned by Miss Faye Fox of Toronto. In the male section Winners went to Am. Ch. High Hat's Ringside Show Boy, owned by Mrs. George A. Allen of Niagara Falls, N.Y., with Reserve going to McGarry's Little Condor owned by C. J. McGarry, of Toronto.

Winners Bitches was Star Bonny owned by Virginia Roberts Shaffer, of Lancaster, N.Y., with Reserve to Little Miss Echo owned by D. H. Parker, of Toronto. Star Bonny was Best of Winners.

Your Editor prevailed upon Judge Mr. Schelling to provide his impressions of the show and we are sure that the sage advice incorporated in his report which follows will be appreciated by all Boston fanciers:

"This year, the general quality of Bostons presented in the ring was higher than I have seen at previous Toronto shows. A few were shown too thin and a few too fat. A very small number seemed out of condition.

"Possibly the most outstanding fault to be seen was the condition of the poor hindquarters. Of course some of this might be hereditary, but on the other hand I do not think that we Boston breeders are giving our dogs enough exercise, and particularly, exercise of the right sort. Free running can sometimes do more harm than good. The finest thing to develop hindquarters is a daily walk on the lead, at a steady pace, and for a goodly distance. Too many of us find such exercise irksome for ourselves, but it would do us as much good as it will do our Bostons. Two of my otherwise best specimens could have gone higher but for hindquarters too weak, or too stiff.

"There were some poor fronts, and in every such case, I noticed particularly that the nails showed signs of neglect. Nothing to ruin a Boston's front feet, like neglecting the nails. Rather than cutting them once a month, they should be filed every week, from the time they are three months of age.

"The Specialty Show always brings out the best in prospective youngsters and there were two this year particularly worthy of note. Mrs. M. Taylor's "Taylor's On Parade" was not only a splendid male pup specimen, but he also was set down in splendid condition and well trained. The other, a female, "Jubilee's Bonnie Girl" owned by Stevens and Richardson, was also a lovely specimen, conditioned and trained to perfection. If she develops just a bit more daylight under her as she grows older, she will be a hard one to beat next spring.

"Both these youngsters put to shame several of the older dogs, whose ring manners showed a deplorable lack of training. If owners would only spend a little time teaching their dogs to stand still or pose, it would be much easier for a judge. It is difficult judging them while they are running in circles or are in the air!

"In my opinion, the best gaited dogs in the show were J. V. Dillon's "Square Shooter" and Robert Craig's "Roberts Biff", closely followed by my Best of Winners, "Star Bonny" owned by Virginia Roberts Shaffer.

"Star Bonny was a very feminine type of female, very "fine" all over, but made the best of herself at all times in the ring. Although I would like to see her with another half-pound on her, she was a much improved female from the other times I have seen her shown.

"For general conformation, I liked Am. Ch. High Hat's Ringside Show Boy, who seemed to be handicapped that day by a slight stiffness in hind-quarters.

"For head and body, I would nominate Mr. Statham's 'Cadet Girl', who seemed to experience a lot of trouble with her hocks. Also for head, Can. Ch. Regards Wee Model owned by Miss Faye Fox must not be overlooked. He is a much improved little dog since the last time I saw him which was a year ago when he went Winners Male at this same show. He has also developed a splendid brisket and spring of rib, which he seemed to need last year.

I do feel that the Club deserves special commendation in their successful efforts to stage such a large show during these trying times. I am sure it required a lot of enthusiasm and a lot of work".

The Boston Terrier Club arranged to donate the proceeds of the sale of catalogues to the Toronto Evening Telegram's War Victims Fund and this fund benefitted to the extent of $25.00, a portion of which was donated by the Club to make up this round sum.

A total of $90.00 was donated in prizes quite apart from trophies and other prizes. Thanksgiving Day could not have been improved upon from the point of view of weather; the gate receipts exceeded those of previous years; judge Mr. Schelling made a fine job of judging the dogs that came before him placing them just as he saw them, all of which added up to a more than successful show, a just reward to a Club that intends to "carry on".

member and had a wonderful reception—this in Toronto, Montreal and many other towns."

The "club spirit" of which Mr. Howard writes is largely a frame of mind induced by a common desire to be co-operative, helpful and friendly to others engaged in the same sport. It has manifested itself on many occasions and in many ways but it can hardly be described as being obvious to everyone who comes in contact with the dog world. It is a spirit which, if wholeheartedly accepted and practised by all our members, would result in our sport entering a plane hitherto undreamed of. The remedy, or rather the required impetus, lies in the hands of our members, and while we can as soon as practicable, consider other methods of increasing and maintaining interest in our preferred hobby, there is no reason why the "club spirit" cannot be considerably increased NOW! Why not do your part WHENEVER and HOWEVER you can!

CANADIAN DOGS WIN IN STATES

Canadian exhibitors and visitors to American shows are as rare as hen's teeth these days so it was pleasant to run across the genial Alf Loveridge at the Ox Ridge Kennel Club show held at Darien, Conn. Alf was handling one of Mrs. G. W. Hyslop's good Cairns, namely Kiltie of Cairndania, a home-bred one just over two years of age. Kiltie is a really smart bitch and was awarded 1st in Limit Bitches.

The following day, the Afghan Hound Club of America held its second annual Match show on the grounds of Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Florsheim when the astounding entry of 116 was obtained from 65 dogs. Again Canada was represented—this time by Kala of Chaman, belonging to Mrs. Viola G. Fielden of Dixie, Ont. Kala is a fine imported black female and was placed in a hot open class of seven. Kala was Best of Breed at the Montreal show last autumn and it was a happy co-incidence that the match show coincided with her visit to Int. Ch. Rudiki of Pride's Hill, the hound who recently made history by winning four straight Bests in Show at Canadian fixtures.

It was a sight for the gods to see the surprise on Alf Loveridge's face—he having stayed over for the show—when he saw the 65 Afghans. "I never knew there were so many in the world" was his comment. American fanciers are very fond of Alf and gave him a warm welcome at both events.

OLD PROVERBS IN OTHER GUISES

"Love me, love my dog," is a very old saying. St. Bernard, who lived nine hundred years ago, said it in Latin—"Qui me amat, amat et canem meum." The French version is "qui aime Bertrand, aime son chien," and the translation of the Spanish form is, "if you love anyone you will like all that belongs to him." The common form occurs in Heywood's collection of proverbs, 16th century.

CARRY ON!

By WALTER H. REEVES

OWING to the shortage of food in many of the European countries most stringent regulations have been placed on the breeding of dogs. The Nazis have commandeered the best of the breeding stock in the countries they have invaded and are using them for war work, so after this war Canadian and American breeders will have to supply breeding stock to the British breeder and also to the other countries. It is, therefore, imperative that Canadian breeders continue breeding and to encourage them to do so we must have competition and our shows must continue. Many important shows such as the Toronto and Vancouver Exhibitions were cancelled because the buildings where the shows were formerly held were being used for the training of the Canadian army. Of late we have heard the remark that shows cannot be held on account of the shortage of gas and oil. Well, we did run successful shows long before the first car was invented.

I have just been perusing some of the catalogues of the Canadian shows held some fifty years ago. The Toronto Exhibition in 1892 had no less than 799 entries; Montreal in 1896 gained an entry of 350; the Toronto Exhibition in 1911 showed a small decrease, the entry numbering 739. When one compares these entries with today's entries one is forced to admit that Canadian shows have not progressed as they promised to do. Some critics blame the classification, others the judges. Personally, I have always held the opinion that the reason is lack of encouragement to the novice exhibitor. We place the novice on his debut at scratch and he very seldom has a chance. I have made the suggestion before and am firmly convinced that we would find a very valuable recruiting ground if shows gave Novice Exhibitor Classes for all the popular breeds, exhibits to be handled by owner who must not have won a first prize and give the novice a little of the spotlight on the last night when the all round specials are being awarded by giving a real good trophy for best novice exhibitors dog. Some shows have been going out of the "Beaten Path" for their judges, appointing what I will term "Novelty Judges", experts probably in their own breed and having only a cursory knowledge of many of the breeds. They consent to guess and some of their guesses do all kinds of harm especially if the guess falls to a novice who goes home fully determined to enter our fascinating sport. Unfortunately the next show at which the novice enters his dog, he is showing under a judge who knows the breed with the result that what the novice has been led to believe is a Champion finishes amongst the "also rans", and far too often this leads to losing what might have been a very valuable acquisition to our ranks.

Let's take another angle. The novice attends a show and is enthusiastic over the appearance and wins of a dog and before leaving endures a change of ownership. The next show comes along and the novice's new purchase is entered and you may be sure that the novice has been telling all his friends of how certain he is that his dog is going to repeat the successes. Far too often he does not. He may be beaten correctly by a dog he had beaten at the other show. The novice has not served an apprenticeship with dogs and cannot realize the reason for his defeat due probably to indifferent handling or condition.

It was interesting to me on going over these old catalogues to note the change in popularity of our dogs. At the 1892 Toronto Exhibition thirteen Rough St. Bernards were entered in open dogs and eleven in open smooth bitches. Collies made a grand showing with sixty entries in eight classes. Smooth Fox Terriers at that time far more popular than the Wires mustered strongly with an entry of forty and it is interesting to note how successful the exhibits were that were sired by Mr. A. A. Macdonald's Blemton Trump. Competition amongst the Sporting Group must have been interesting with eleven in Open English Setter dogs and twelve in Open bitches. Irish Setters also were strong with twelve entries in Open Dogs. The merry little Cocker evidently was as popular then as they are today. There was a nice entry of Hounds; Beagles leading in this section. Bulldogs only four entries in five classes. Bull Terriers had twelve entries in open dogs and ten in open bitches. The Toy section was far more representative than this group often is today.

The change in fashions is very marked. Nineteen years later at the 1911 Toronto Exhibition, Bulldogs led the parade with an entry of ninety-two against four at the 1892 show. The largest entry, however, was Boston Terriers, a total of one hundred and forty-one. Fox Terriers showed a change in fashions. Wires about this time were steadily pushing the Smooth out of the lead, but the surprising entry to the writer was Airedale Terriers. The late Mr. Francis Redmond, who seldom judges the breed in England, was greeted with an entry of one hundred and thirty-eight. English Setters made a very poor showing but the Irish came in goodly numbers and showed a gain on the first mentioned show. The reverse has to be recorded in St. Bernards which about this time began their downward slide. Collies and Cocker Spaniels, although not quite so numerous as at the 1892 show still made a grand showing. We will now glance through the 1896 Montreal show, an entry of three hundred and fifty, and here we find Dachshunds leading the show with seven open dogs and ten bitches.

In conclusion, let me ask everyone to do everything to encourage the holding of shows. They were held successfully during the last war and, like the Army, we need recruits. Do something that will induce the novice to stay in the fascinating sport of breeding and exhibition of Man's Best Friend, The Dog.

OPEN AIR SHOWS

From the Annual Report of the Executive as published in the Year Book (1942) of the New Zealand Kennel Clubs (Inc.), we glean the following on open air shows:

"Your Executive has given careful consideration to the position of those societies which have been carrying on under severe handicaps through depletion in strength on their committees and in some cases where they have been unable to secure a suitable building to hold their annual shows mainly through the military authorities having possession of grounds and buildings and also that some buildings do not comply with the black-out regulations. Your Executive, therefore, decided that for the duration of the war it would allow in special cases where societies were unable to obtain suitable building accommodation to hold one-day shows in the open air. It is necessary that all dogs at any such open-air show be properly numbered and catalogued with the names of sires and dams, etc., together with the names and addresses of exhibitors. The closing of entries must not be less than seven days prior to the show. As such fixtures in most cases are held on Saturdays they are not likely to interfere with anyone's war effort. Showing Societies that rely largely on gate receipts will require to make the classification and other features of the show as attractive as possible."

NO RABIES

The Report of the Veterinary Director-General of the Health of Animals Division, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, indicates that "this disease was not found during the year" in Canada.

Obituary

TORONTO lost three doggy fanciers within a period of two weeks when Matthew Gracey, Captain E. Abrams and Harry Shiels passed away recently.

Mr. Gracey, better known as "Matt" to his host of friends, was a member of The Canadian Kennel Club since 1917. His first love was Airedales, later Wires and to a degree Irish Terriers, Scotties and Sealyhams and the Stud Books indicate only too clearly the extent to which he bred, purchased and sold dogs to many sections of the United States and Canada.

His death after a very short illness came as a shock to the many Terrier people who have known and respected him. The funeral services were held at his home, interment being in Prospect Cemetery.

The pallbearers were Bob McAdam, Jack Latham, Wire fanciers; Sandy Palmer and Jimmie Martin, followers of the Irish; Dr. J. A. Campbell and one other gentleman. Other doggy fanciers who were present to pay their last respects were Harry Chamberlain, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Frank Small, Mrs. McAdam and Miss Mildred Ward. Also in attendance were Bob and Bill Johnson, no longer active in doggy circles, but who were associated with Mr. Gracey many years ago. A sister of the deceased flew from Seattle, Washington.

Captain Abrams died suddenly at his home 348 Millwood Road, Toronto, on Friday, October 2nd. He had been in fairly good health and suffered a heart attack after walking home from a visit to his son's house.

Captain Abrams was born in India of military parents and had 26 years' service in the Imperial forces. During this time he served through all of the South African War and Great War. In 1922 he brought his wife and two sons to Canada and before long joined the Canadian Militia being placed on the retired list when 55 years of age.

It was about this time that Captain Abrams decided to breed Scottish Terriers and Wire-Haired Terriers, although finally specializing in Scotties. Possibly his best known Scottie was Ch. Coxmoor Callboy, a dog he imported from England in 1932. Callboy is a son of English Ch. Sandheys Silver-tip and, therefore, a grandson of the immortal Heather Necessity.

Captain Abrams is survived by his wife and two sons, Ernest of Toronto and George of Ottawa, also three sisters all of Toronto.

Born in Londonderry, Ireland, forty-nine years ago, Mr. Harry Shiels came to Canada in 1911. He bought his first Bulldog in 1918 and operated under the kennel name, Monarch, later changing to Stone, a name famous in the Bulldog world. Possibly the best known of his dogs was Ch. Berrington Lass, a brindle female which he acquired from J. W. Tillett of Toronto. Baldwin Malabar and Son of Malabar are more recent winners owned by Mr. Shiels. Mr. Shiels was Second Vice-President of the National Bulldog Club of Canada in 1934.

Mr. Shiels is survived by his widow and two sons.

To the bereaved of the above mentioned members we extend the deepest sympathy of the fancy.

BOOK REVIEW

*The Springer Spaniel

By Maxwell Riddle

This book, published by the Judy Publishing Co. of Chicago, is a new, revised, up-to-the-minute SECOND edition of a book that proved so popular with Springer fanciers. Its 160 pages will prove a mine of information even to the most experienced follower of this breed for it contains chapters on the origin, history and development; the standard and its interpretation; breeding and principles of heredity; the Springer Spaniel in the field; at the dog show; mating and whelping; feeding, care and training; efficient kennel management, and the Springer sire charts prepared by Mr. Riddle are well worth the price of the book alone. It is profusely illustrated.

We recommend it to anyone desirous of acquiring a comprehensive work on the Springer. The price is $3.00 and copies may be ordered through Dogs in Canada.

EXCUSE, PLEASE!

An officer in the signal corps once had a Setter pup that accompanied him day after day when he took his men out in practices in wig-wagging messages. That fall in the hunting season the officer decided to try out his Setter on birds. They were going through a section of underbrush and pines, the dog about 600 feet ahead, when suddenly his tail shot straight up in the air and waved frantically. Then it began to move deliberately. The officer watched it with fascinated attention. Could he believe his eyes? The dog was actually wig-wagging a message, and this was the message:

"H-a-v-e y-o-u a-n-y b-u-c-k-s-h-o-t? I-f n-o-t r-u-n l-i-k-e b-l-a-z-e-s b-i-g b-r-o-w-n b-e-a-r j-u-s-t a-h-e-a-d a-n-d c-o-m-i-n-g y-o-u-r w-a-y."

Register Your Kennel Name

HOW often have you heard the expression, "What's in a name?" Depending on the name itself, and what it represents, the answer on many occasions may well be "everything", for down through the ages we have continued to associate names with products, services and personalities.

Early in the history of organized dog-dom breeders learned the value of what may be described as a trade name but which we commonly refer to in the dog world as a kennel name, and the governing authorities in those early days made provision for the protection at a fee of those names which breeders, by their constant use in naming dogs, realized their value from the commercial point of view. Almost every dog breeder of today, whether his knowledge of breeding in his own favored breed is limited or wide, can identify the origin of many well known dogs by their name.

The Canadian Kennel Club, like other national organizations, has made provision for the protection of a kennel name at a very nominal fee, ($5.00 to member) and the extensive list of registered kennel names is evidence of the value placed by breeders on this very important aspect of their breeding operations, for without that protection, their kennel name would be available for general use rather than restricted to dogs which they have bred and registered.

On more than one occasion, a fancier has employed a particular name as a prefix or an affix in naming dogs born his property without taking the precaution of protecting his interests by registering the name, only to find that any other individual has likewise used the name from time to time and finally had the foresight to register it, thus making that name no longer eligible for use by other fanciers.

It is, therefore, pertinent to suggest to a fancier that the time to register a kennel name is at the very beginning of his breeding operations, not after the name, and his accomplishments as a breeder have been widely recognized. An application for registration of a kennel name may be secured at any time from the Office of the Canadian Kennel Club or the Canadian National Live Stock Records, and it is recommended that breeders should take the precaution of registering their kennel names without delay.

Heretofore a breeder was permitted only to employ as a part of a dog's name his kennel name on dogs which he owned at the time of birth. However, the constitution of the Canadian Kennel Club as adopted at the last annual general meeting now makes it possible for him to use his kennel name, not only for dogs born his property, but also in naming dogs which he may purchase. It should be noted, however, that the name of a dog imported into Canada, and registered with a recognized Stud Book, may not be changed. Likewise, it is not possible to change the name of a Canadian-bred dog after it has been registered for sixty days.

REGISTRATIONS for the last month at the Kennel Club actually increased over the month before. There were 1,907 registrations as against 1,483, an increase of 424, and transfers were 406 as compared with 380. The total number of registrations for the first six months of the year were 8,359, of which Cocker spaniels had 1,461. Those who wonder how British dogs are being fed will be interested in a letter received by the Kennel Club, as follows, from the Ministry of Food, "I write to inform you that the Ministry has decided to continue the release of damaged flour to the manufacturers of cereal foods for the three months commencing July 1st on the same basis as for the current quarter, i.e., one-third of pre-war datum". Announcements were made of 39 forthcoming shows.

Twice in these notes I have told you of the Chow dog named Rolly belonging to a London solicitor, and how the magistrates condemned him to death in July, 1941, but his owner refuses to obey the order. The latest news is that Rolly is still alive, and Mr. Thompson is paying five dollars for every day the dog lives, and recently appeared at Court and tipped up another $525. Up to now he has paid some $1,200, and at his last appearance before the magistrate faced an alternative of three months' imprisonment. Dog owners in England are watching the case with much interest, and are hoping the order to destroy the dog as being dangerous will be rescinded.

A Canadian soldier asked the driver of a Kent Y.M.C.A. tea car if she could get him a copy of "Romeo and Juliet". The driver said she would, and when later she handed him the copy she jokingly asked him if he intended to be a Shakespearean scholar. "No," he said, "but I'm going to write better letters to my girl and thought if I got hold of this book I could use some of the love stuff in it!"

When a dog-bite case finished in the London High Court recently after taking four hours, the Judge said: "For such a case to be brought in this court to take up the time of one of His Majesty's judges, when this country is fighting for its existence, is something which I cannot characterize properly without using language which I should probably regret. It is an outrage." He awarded fifty dollars to a twelve-year-old boy who had been bitten on the nose.

I have just received an interesting letter from a friend of mine who is the leading surgeon in Kent, and who lives in Canterbury, and as the censor has passed the information he tells me about the terrible raids that old cathedral city has suffered there can be no harm in my repeating some of the information. The Germans gloated in the number of people they alleged they had killed. Now for facts. My friend's house, which was not far from the Cathedral, "is a wreck as many houses are here. It is a fact that when daylight comes in the morning and one looks around after which sounds to be such a terrible bombardment, one is surprised to see there is not more damage. The casualties were only 48 killed after four nights of bombing. Kind friends took us in and we were six weeks till we heard of a furnished house. . . . Folkestone and Dover are still recognizable. Dover is wonderful, may get shelled any minute and does, but the people are marvellous in their fortitude and spirit. Considering the Nazi strength and preparedness for war with their vast supply of planes, etc., it is really wonderful how much untouched is this country. The morale of the people of Canterbury after the raid was superb, and laughingly they go about, looking for shops which are gone. Really, the whole area from above our house to beyond the Cathedral is in a ghastly state, like Stonehenge, so no wonder they cannot find their shops. We are getting along alright, but we expect a great deal more coming soon." Such is the spirit in dear old Canterbury.

We still have five champion bulldogs in England, but, alas, they are getting on in years, as there are no championship shows to create new ones, and the youngest is Bosworth Queen, who is now just five years of age. It is always an open question as to which was the greatest bulldog bitch ever bred. The general consensus of opinion is that, up to the arrival of Bosworth Queen, this honour belonged to Ch. Roseville Blaze, born in 1910. Speaking of her, Mr. Voss says, in comparing Queenie, "I should not like to say now which was the better of the two, but I have seen all the best bred in the present century, and, without a shadow of a doubt, Chs. Roseville Blaze and Bosworth Queen stand out alone amongst them. I am certain that no bitch was ever bred prior to 1900 that could hold a candle to either of them, so that makes the pair the best ever."

Four bulldog clubs out of the 22 in existence at the start of war are still keeping the flag flying, and holding Sanction shows so the good old British bulldog will be ready to take his place at the longed-for victory show, thanks to the stalwarts who are keeping their kennels going, and amongst these there are some eighteen fanciers of the Old Brigade who have kept and bred bulldogs for 35 to 40 years. These eighteen have never dropped out despite two wars. How true is the saying, "Once a bulldog man, always a bulldog man".

I hear that General Russell P. Hartle, who commands the American troops in Ireland, is always alluded to as "a swell guy". He has a big nose and a big grin. He is friendly, and says what he thinks, and all Northern Ireland have fallen for him because he is devoted to his Kerry Blue, which is named "Scrappy". Incidentally, this is the general's own nickname. "Actually, he's a lot scrappier than I am," General Hartle says. The general's office is on the ground floor with a big bay window opening onto a meadow. One window has been put on hinges, and steps have been built up to the window sill like a stile, so you can slip out the back way. This suits Scrappy, as he can come and go as he pleases. He sits in on all military conferences. He cocks his head and listens in turn to each speaker. Often he is very nonplussed, for when General Hartle asks a question of one of his high-ranking officers, Scrappy looks intently at the officer as though to say, "Alright, stupid; what are you gonna answer to that one?"

By the way, it's against Army Regulations for soldiers to adopt pets such as cats and dogs. Unfortunately, these animals do the adopting themselves, and the generals can't very well get out with a stick and chase them away from every camp in Northern Ireland. As a result, if and when the A.E.F. charges onto the Continent for the great invasion, it will be accompanied by a colossal congregation of Irish cats and dogs.

England is mourning one of our High Court judges who went for a walk along the edge of the sea in Somerset and was never seen again. Mr. Justice Langton, a leading divorce judge, was witty and outspoken and noted for his epigrams and as an after-dinner speaker he was unsurpassed. One of his best stories was that of a Hollywood film star who held the "world's record" for divorce. She had been married nine times. She had prepared a magnificent sarcophagus. When she was introduced to a Poet Laureate she begged him to write her epitaph for it. He did it for her at once—in four words:

"ASLEEP—ALONE—AT LAST."

Fifty Huns arrived at the Gates of Heaven and asked for St. Peter. He said, "Who are you?" They replied: "Fifty Luftwaffe who were shot down this morning by the R.A.F." St. Peter replied, "Highly probable, but I wish to make certain, so wait here till I return." St. Peter came back again and said, "Your own communique says only two intrepid airmen were shot down this morning by the R.A.F. Those two can come in and the other forty-eight can go to Hell."

Keep 'em fed right

THIS SLOGAN MEANS ONLY WHAT YOU MAKE IT MEAN!

Have you adopted this slogan as your own? Is your name one of those pledged to further the cause of Keeping Dogs Fed Right? If it's not, there's no time like the present to do something about it!

Remember, the words "Keep 'Em Fed Right" won't solve the wartime dog feeding problem any more than the words "Slap a Jap" will decide the war itself.

Your stake in the dog breeding business is very real indeed. Why not go on record by signing the "Keep 'Em Fed Right" pledge?

How do you do it? Just drop a card or letter to the Gaines Food Company, stating your endorsement of the Keep 'Em Fed Right idea . . . and if you like, add your reaction to the campaign itself. That's all. You don't have to agree to feed any particular kind of dog food or recommend any particular brand—so long as you agree to feed and recommend one that you know can keep dogs fed right.

Gaines, of course, is such a food. It contains Vitamins A, B₁, B₂(G), B₆, D, E, Niacin, Pantothenate and other food factors dogs are known to need. And recent surveys

• All dog owners, breeders and handlers would do well to adopt your "Keep 'Em Fed Right" slogan as their very own.

Jos. L. Shackleford, Haddonfield, N. J.
Secy. South Jersey Beagle Club

• I'm glad your company is campaigning to forestall the "feeding problem" which could have such an adverse effect on the breeding and sales of pure bred dogs in wartime.

Homer F. Oranger
Dogwood Kennels, Norfolk, Virginia

• Too much valuable food is being used to feed canines when in truth such combinations as yours not only may do a better job but will surely aid in this great war cause.

Phil "Doc" Gootenberg
Paterson, New Jersey

have shown, moreover, that 9 out of 10 dogs like Gaines from the start. If you haven't yet tried Gaines, by all means do so.
