The Brush for all Coats

A fine type of brush in which the bristles are wired into the hardwood block (and covered with attractive walnut inlay) so that they do not come out in brushing your dog.

Interesting, too, is the fact that the kitool and bassine used in making these brush bristles come from British Gulana and grow similar to swamp grass. The Union bristles are a mixture of bassine and a fibre from Mexican cactus leaves.

Sketched is kitool brush, each 1.15. Not sketched, the bassine, each 75c, and the Union, each 85c.

FIELD TRIAL CHAMPIONS

BEAGLES

Ridgewood Sure (173098)

Swift's Upsetter (180228)

Int. Ch. SAINTS REST DOUBLE ACE. A powerful stud force, with 76 per cent Producers of Champions in four generations and 82 Champions produced.

A certain false glamour often surrounds the prefix of "Champion" because the actual records of the Boston breed show that only 20 per cent of the Boston male Champions ever produced a Champion. These same records also indicate that his value to the future of the breed does not depend on how many Best of Breeds or Groups he has won, but must be based on how many PRODUCERS OF CHAMPIONS he has in his four generation pedigree.

Saints Rest stock is producing today, and will continue to produce, because our scientific breeding practice demands that the pedigree of EVERY Boston in our kennels be CRAMMED with champion-producing ancestors.

At least 15 of the 30 Bostons appearing in four generations back of Saints Rest studs must have produced one or more Champions, and we also require that the total Champions produced be at least 60.

Furthermore, we demand similar PROVEN champion-producing power in the selection of our own brood females.

That is why Saints Rest bloodlines are indisputably leading the field in the PROVEN production of show-winning stock.

Select a Saints Rest stud the next time you plan on breeding one of your good brood females. You will improve the producing quality of your stock, as have many other breeders.

We not only invite comparison—we DARE comparison.

Greater Love Hath No Man . . .

By Uncle Billy Hassell

I am going to tell you a story of sacrifice, tragedy and heartbreak on the rocky shores of the Queen Charlotte Islands where the most Westerly point of Canada juts into the great Pacific.

The mighty winds of this globe's largest ocean sweep over these Islands of eagles and loneliness. Around the shores huge tides rise and fall.

The forty miles between the Islands and the Northwest coast of British Columbia are filled by the waters of the notorious Hecate Straits — waters so fierce they have been responsible for the doom of many a gallant ship. Here the great whales run in schools — walrus play—sea lions maraud the salmon and you experience nature stripped to her barest elements. Deep sea captains have told me they would rather face a storm in the Bay of Biscay than one in the Hecate Straits.

The Government maintained wireless stations on opposite sides of the Straits. One at Prince Rupert Island on the mainland and one at Ikeda Head on the Queen Charlotte Islands to send weather reports and speed away distress calls from ships at sea.

It was at Ikeda that I was stationed. Stand with me at the station perched eighty feet above the highest tide on the jagged rocks of Ikeda Point. Prince Rupert lies over the horizon of the open straits to the Northeast. Turning around to gaze inland, we see lovely Ikeda Bay lying in wooded security. Shaped like a huge pear, with the stem forming the narrow entrance, it is guarded by two rocky promontories, Ikeda Head, and Spray Point which forms the opposite side of the bay entrance. We see that Ikeda Head juts right out into the straits narrowing the approach to the bay and protecting it from the worst storms which sweep down the open straits from the northeast.

Follow me around the headland towards the bay. Walk carefully for the jagged rocks are cut by deep crevices. Ah! You stop in your tracks and shudder as the rocks drop away into a sheer precipice and you look down into a huge pothole. You see how it runs back towards the wireless building and there forms a sharp point? Well, it acts as a safety valve.

Imagine yourself encompassed by the sound of howling, tearing wind and the thunder of breaking seas, hanging on to the rocks for fear of being blown away. You gaze out to sea where screeching wind, cold as the north, fierce as the east and powerful as both combined, is blowing the angry curling whitecaps from the tops of the waves, hiding in the green of the sea in mist. Nature is at war! Huge seas are driven to attack the land. The outgoing tide is emptying the tremendous volume of water in the bay through the narrow entrance with a rushing flood—A great sheet of sea rises in anger—up—up it comes until it towers, ready to pounce—The crest breaks as it bares its teeth in rage—Then the great liquid mountain comes racing toward the bay; eager for the fight—eager for its own destruction—for it is broken into millions of tiny drops by the invincible rocks and unconquerable tide, creating a maelstrom of conflict, mercifully hidden in who is more familiarly known on the Canadian Broadcasting Circuit as Uncle Billy Hassell, Chief Squareshooter and who for many years has taught through his broadcasts the absolute necessity of Truth, Right, Justice, Co-operation, Dependability, Loyalty and all the other great fundamentals that go to make good sportsmanship. Mr. Hassell was one of radio's pioneers, owning in 1923 one of the first broadcasting studios on the Coast, C.H.L.S. and C.K.C.D., the call letters for the Vancouver Daily Province.

G. G. McGeer, K.C., M.P., for Vancouver, once wrote: "Many of us have received a great deal of public attention and attained a certain amount of fame, but we all envy Uncle Billy Hassell the great honour that is his, that of being actually loved by countless thousands of people." Few in Canada know that Mr. Hassell, although one of radio's great celebrities, is also one of Canada's outstanding breeders of Collies. For many years, with Clarke Simpkins of Windsor as his associate, Mr. Hassell has bred and shown the Alandale Collies, owning at least five champions. The Collies are purely a hobby and not used as a commercial venture.

Writing all his own scripts taken from real life, and acting all the adult male characters on his program, he is termed one of radio's most versatile men. As a writer Mr. Hassell has received acclaim, the story on these pages was recounted before an audience of three thousand people, and within a few days letters poured into the radio station from all parts of the continent.

Offers have been received from Newspaper Syndicates and National Magazines for this story. Mr. Hassell, a member of the Canadian Kennel Club for many years, preferred to donate the story to "Dogs In Canada"

a sea of flying spray; blown in all directions by the wicked wind. The great sea floods around the headland and its restless, defeated water rises in that awful pothole. You hold your breath for fear it will come over the top and wash you and the station and everything else away. Just in time it goes down and you shudder as you realize it's horrible suction for it creates an enormous whirlpool — a great, black, whirling, sucking water hole so deep it is bottomless; so powerful, it knows no limit. Your mouth tastes dry. The very rocks tremble, as with a demoniacal, screeching roar it swiftly goes down, down and away, whirling and snarling as though searching for something to destroy.

"Near this spot are deposited the remains
Of one who possessed beauty without vanity,
Strength without insolence,
Courage without ferocity,
And all the virtues of man without his vices.
This praise, which would be unmeaning flattery
If inscribed over human ashes
Is but a just tribute to the memory of A Dog.

When I went to Ikeda I took my Cil-lie, Champion Alandale Allegiance, with me. I could trace his ancestry back to the collies Queen Victoria took into England from Scotland in 1862 because she was so impressed with their beauty and intelligence. Allegiance, "Liege" for short, had that rare combination of great size with refinement. He carried a tremendous coat of glorious old-gold color, contrasting sharply with the pure white of his huge ruff, white front frill, white front legs with long feathering and white tail tip. With his small feet and beautifully tapered legs he moved with that style and grace that denotes hidden strength. He had a straight, classical head, small neatly tipped ears, but his eyes were the most beautiful thing about him—a dark, velvety brown and Liege's noble soul looked through them expressing what he truly possessed—dignity and intelligence, kindness and unflinching courage. I was not happy when I first went to Ikeda for my Chief and only companion was morose and unfriendly. He first objected to the dog, murmuring something about useless brutes and once when Liege was lying in his path he tried to kick him, but Liege was too quick. Only the dog's immediate obedience to my command saved serious trouble. I demanded a showdown but the Chief simply walked away telling me to keep the dog out of his sight. To prevent further trouble I moved out of the house to an outbuilding where the collie and I were fairly comfortable. Strangely enough Liege bore him no ill will but slowly wagged his tail wherever he saw him.

Beyond a few brief orders I did not hear the Chief utter half a dozen words until just before Christmas. I went to relieve him in the operating room. He was copying a message with great intensity—Then he stiffened in his chair and drawing his breath through his teeth, he whispered: "Thank God, she's relented." With the words: "Brenda's my wife; Don's my son", he handed me the message. "Bringing Don for Christmas holidays. Due Ikeda Monday, December twenty-first." Signed "Brenda."

The father paced up and down; back and forth, scanning the weather reports, time and again going to where the waves were rolling on to the ironbound shore to look over the sea—up at the sky. Would a gale come up and make the ship's captain afraid to venture into the bay? Most likely! But no—The good God was evidently preparing the full drama that was to follow.

We enjoyed comparatively calm weather and the ship arrived bringing supplies, our eagerly anticipated Christmas mail and a very beautiful woman and young boy to spend Christmas with us.

Mrs. Dalton was tall and graceful, with soft, brown, wavy hair, big brown eyes and was very tastefully dressed. The seven-year-old boy resembled his mother remarkably. Beyond telling her husband to make the most of the boy while he had him, I did not hear the Chief's wife speak to him. They occupied separate rooms.

Don and Liege quickly grew fond of one another and it was good to see the collie have a lithe, active boy to play with. He was the lad's constant companion and watched his every step.

Between the gales and storms at Ikeda the wind seemed to draw back to assemble its full fury and the sea to pause as though resting to gather its mighty forces. Only once in the thirteen months, during which I watched these battles between the great powers of nature, did I see a few hours of peace. Then the sea was grey and calm and looked like an endless sheet of glass that stretched away from the foot of the seaweed-strewn rocks. Black, jagged rocks that reached up and back to the fragile, white wireless masts and buildings perched on them eighty feet above. From the wireless station the rocks jutted out and down to the water like a great black fortress—silent and immovable—grimly facing the sea as though waiting to protect that little outpost where two frail humans made their very lonely home.

Even the ducks looked upon these few hours of calm as a holiday, for flocks of them constantly wheeled over the point as though curious to discover what lay beneath the usual tumult. We were compelled to use gun and fishing line at Ikeda; otherwise we would have had no fresh food at all.

One day I called Liege and the boy and took my gun to where the smooth rollers were breaking on the rocks. I shot a duck flying over but it fell into the sea. Without warning, Liege leaped into a receding wave and after being tossed around in the breakers, managed to swim out and get the duck. He fought to get back up those jagged rocks. We tried to help—The big rollers brought in tons of water which created a powerful suction as it went back down between the sharp points of rock. It was so dangerous we could not even get near Liege, who swam back out to sea to size up the situation. As he started to swim back in to try again, I shouted, "No, Liege—No!" and signalled with my arm for him to swim around the point into the bay. His keen doggie ears caught my voice—His keen collie brain, my meaning. The tide was starting to run out. Don and I did what appeared safest and most practical—we climbed over the rocks around the shore. We had to go up nearly to the house to get around the pothole. When we arrived on the rocks, a few hundred yards on the other side of it, just inside the bay, Liege was out fighting the tide in the middle of the bay entrance, halfway between the pothole and Spray Point—out where the incoming, rolling sea was being broken by the outgoing tide, which, fortunately, was not yet nearly in full flood. I could see that Liege was fighting and struggling with all he had and my heart ached at my folly. I could not tell whether he was gaining or losing ground. Again and again we lost sight of him as he went down into a valley between the heaving, jumping, spurting waves, or a valley of water smashed at him unmercifully and forced him back. He was actually thrown right out of the water, swept swiftly side-ways like a feather—swung dizzily around and around in a whirl-pool. I wanted to shout. I wanted to help. I wanted to cry. Not able to look any longer, I closed by eyes and prayed. When I looked again I saw tears in Don's eyes. Then daring to glance fearfully across the water, I was amazed to see Liege swimming toward the shore with the duck still in his mouth. As I looked into the wet, very weary face of my beloved collie I learned the awful power and peril of those waters and knew I had almost lost him. Liege read my thoughts and his soft, brown eyes told me he realized he had been very close to death. When the collie swam through the tiderip, the tide in the bay had only just started to go out and the seas rolling in against it were comparatively small, slow-moving, smooth rollers. In times of storm when the great liquid mountains of angry white-capped water came racing toward the narrow bay entrance and met the great tide running out at full flood, the maelstrom of conflict was beyond description—as a matter of fact it was actually hidden by the spray which was blown in all directions by the tearing, howling, screeching wind.—Yes, after his experience with the duck, Liege fully realized the awful danger of those waters.

Elmhill Envoy in Black, one of the many fine Collies, bred by Dr. J. T. Cooper of Saskatoon, won Best in Show all breeds at the spring show of the Saskatoon Kennel Club

Two days before Christmas I actually saw the Chief smile. He was telling his son that they would cut a Christmas tree as soon as he had sent his morning wireless reports away—but being a boy, Don could not wait.

A little later I was standing behind the Chief who was seated in a big swivel chair operating the wireless key when we heard a bark at the entrance.

Turning, we saw the head and shoulders of Liege, and from his big white ruff red blood was dripping—for in that ruff a little fist was clutched, and from the wrist above the other hand, vainly trying to clutch it, blood was jumping in great, gushing spurts. Liege pulled Don through the door, as with his voice failing, the boy just managed to say: "I went to cut a Christmas tree, Dad, and cut my wrist". Then he fell unconscious. Neither of us knew how to stop that blood but the father's wit was sharpened by his dire extremity.

He frantically called the operator at Prince Rupert who telephoned a doctor. I head the physician's fateful message ticked out in the dots and dashes of the Morse Code.

We tried to find the big artery in the boy's arm, without success. Still acting on the doctor's instructions, I yelled for the mother to bring a towel, rolled it into a tight cylinder, placed it in the boy's elbow, bent the arm tightly against it—and with an easing of tension that made my own heart slow down, I saw the spurting blood that was carrying the lad's life away, dwindle and stop.

An indescribable look of relief came into the father's face. The mother, exhausted, leaned against the wall with her eyes closed.

Hour after hour Don lay unconscious. We kept in constant touch with the doctor who said the boy MUST have medical attention to save his life—the sooner, the better. The Doctor said he would come.

Then we waited—waited—watching the weather reports, the barometer, the sea, the sky. One o'clock—two—three—A message!—"Doctor leaving only suitable boat—No wireless. Captain not familiar with your waters—show lights"—signed "Rupert".

She would arrive about eight that night. Christmas eve—dark by then. I ran down the trail to the bay shore to carry a storm lantern in a boat across the bay to Spray Point. The Chief had to place his lantern low on Ikeda so that a ship would avoid coming close to the pothole. This meant it could not be seen by a ship coming from the northeast until she had sailed right around the headland and she would be afraid to do this as offshore it appeared like sailing straight for the rocks. The Chief told me he had wirelessly this information to Prince Rupert, but too late! The boat had left. When I got back to the station the boy was still unconscious. His parents were under terrific tension so I told them I would go down to the point to watch for the boat. Big, smooth waves were rolling in—no wind—out to sea a school of whales went by. One after another they came up to blow enormous fountains of water high into the air, sounding like great gusts of relief from some deep-down source of tremendous power.

Then the sea was smooth again, until just as darkness thickened. I saw the surface ruffle. A puff of wind, and from the northeast! Then another! And another! The sea grew restless—great clouds helped the approach of night.

I hurried up the rocks, called the Chief, and we saw the barometer was dropping like a plummet and the tide was due to go out! MY GOD!

Then we waited—waited, what seemed a God forsaken, hopeless wait, listening to a hell's symphony of thundering seas and the wind shrieking like a triumphant demon.

With those tremendous seas racing to attack the bay entrance. What was it like out there in the straits where one lone little ship was fighting her way to our rescue? What would those great, curling, angry, powerful white-caps do to her? How big was she? If she did make it no captain would dare come near our rocky shore, particularly if we could not get him to round the point and see our lights, I looked—the light was O.K.

Suddenly the storm seemed to hush. There was a short period of ominous silence. Then a terrific, thunderous roar!

The light on Spray Point went out. The water came rushing down the rocks behind us.

What was it? Was it the end of the world?

No, a tidal wave had hit Ikeda! The pothole had run over and its sinister remnants came creeping into our kitchen. It gave a shrieking roar of defeat as its waters went down and out.

Then more waiting—waiting on into the night—hours that seemed years of hopelessness. No use anyway—and yet we hoped. Then out to sea a light blinked—went out—blinked again—came nearer and nearer. Our rescue ship—

The chief took a lantern and climbed down to the point. Liege and I followed. Rocks, slippery and treacherous and dark—so dark we were taking awful chances. We had to judge by sound how far the seas were coming. The wind made negotiating almost impossible. Time and time again we tried to make ourselves heard above that hell's inferno of sound. Our cries were snatched up and thrown back mockingly by the shrieking wind. We signalled, yelled desperately—all useless.

Then the Chief ordered me to stand where I was and that father, desperately, crazily went forward—too far, and before I could do anything, in the ring of the lantern's light, I saw the sea rise to his waist. Then the lantern went out—he was gone! But no, they on the ship had seen also and threw their searchlight on him. There he was, running water, hair over his face, slicker blown wide open, flattened to the rocks like a postage stamp. Then as the water left him to go down, Liege threw my hand from off his neck and running at lightning speed took one magnificent leap away out into that receding wave. Then for awhile we saw him no more. The searchlight played frantically—trying to find him—it did! In some incredible way he had fought those sucking, surging waters—waters that seemed bent on tearing the very rocks out by their roots—and was swimming out through the whitecaps to the bow of the ship.

Then with the searchlight still playing on him, my collie headed 'round the headland toward the bay entrance. I saw him fighting his way, inch by inch, into the tiderip where those great towering mountains of whitecapped water were racing to conflict and destruction, every moment in awful danger of being drawn into that horrible pothole.

I saw the ship follow him to find our guiding light and fight her way into the bay where we knew she would find safe anchorage.

Soon, with storm lanterns, we guided the doctor and the captain three miles through the darkness of the woods to the wireless station where the unconscious boy lay. We all stood around, tense and worried, while the doctor performed his errand of mercy.

Don opened those big brown eyes and slowly smiled. His first words were: "Where is Liege? I want Liege". The doctor looked inquiringly at the father. Then I said, "He's asking for my collie". I saw the color slowly leave the captain's face—

Taking me by the arm he drew me into another room. The father followed. Then, finding it difficult to speak, the captain said:

"I saw him make that tremendous leap—never dreamed he would make it, but he did. Something told me he meant to follow and I did. Something told me he meant me to follow him and he would lead me into the bay. He didn't hesitate. The last I saw of him he was tumbling over and over. Then he went down with his legs in the air."

Embarrassed at his emotion, the captain joined the others but I spent the night searching the bay shore with a lantern—calling—calling, in the last straw of hope that my voice might help.

When I returned, tired and dejected, the dawn of Christmas morning, the mother beckoned me from the boy's window. She was standing by his bed with the Chief. After a silence she said: "You lost your dog . . . is there anything we can do to make it up to you?" Though hot wires were tightening my throat 'till they almost choked me I was given the power to say: "You can't replace him. He's gone. But you can make his sacrifice worthwhile. He did it for Don, and I think for the Chief—because he understood. If a dog's love is great enough to give so much, are we not big enough to give?"

With trembling lips the Chief added: "and forgive—Brenda?" With a low sob, his wife opened her arms and as Don's father was enfolded within them I saw the boy smiling happily. I tiptoed out.

That Christmas afternoon the sun came through the clouds, far over the winter sea. I went down to the point where I had suffered my loss, knowing the rocks would share my loneliness—and there I found the father, and in his hands were a hammer and a cold chisel, and on those cold, unflinching rocks he was inscribing these words, that they might be preserved for all eternity:

"Greater Love Hath No Man Than This That He Giveth His Life for a Friend."

The Newfoundland — Its Past and Future Glories

By Mercedes Gibson

Eminent writers vary as to the true origin of this famous life-saving breed but it seems almost certain that these dogs were brought to the Island of Newfoundland by French fishermen as early as 1506. Other writers claim the breed was originated by Norwegian settlers who took their bear dogs with them and finding them useful as hunters and beasts of burden they prospered and multiplied and in due course became the chief dog on the Island of Newfoundland. However it seems much more probable that the French really are responsible for the dog as we know him today for it is only natural that they would bring with them the white and cream coloured Pyrenean sheep-dogs whose conformation is identical with that of the true Newfoundland as he is today. This great Pyrenean dog was a guardian dog used to protect the flocks of the French and Spanish shepherds. When bears and wolves became scarce, however, the breed was neglected and in time good types became rare. The English, being sporting people would naturally take Spaniels, Bird Dogs and Mastiffs; likewise the French, Spanish and Portuguese would bring their large dogs to Newfoundland and thus was developed a new type of dog called the Newfoundland. The descendant of those dogs are some straight, some curly, the latter no doubt from the curly black Retriever never seen in the show ring now, some were solid black, some black and white and thus we got the Landseer.

The Newfoundland has been honoured as being the subject of a postage stamp and it is interesting to note that the dog chosen was bred on the island by Hon. H. MacPherson and named Westerland Sieger. The well-known animal painter Sir Edwin Landseer chose a Newfoundland, a large black and white dog, as the subject for his very famous picture entitled "A Member of the Humane Society". It is safe to presume that so famous a painter would choose a good representative of the breed and thus we may conclude the Landseer was the original or true Newfoundland, well marked specimens being very rare. Sir Edwin Landseer was justified not only by the sentiment attaching to this remarkable race of dogs but also by the needs by which Newfoundlands have made good their claim to such distinction, and the popular recognition of this, no doubt, in some degree adds to the great esteem in which this picture has always been held. This picture was painted in 1838 but going back to 1832 M. J. McGregor in his history of British North America wrote as follows: "The Newfoundland dogs are remarkably docile and obedient to their masters, they are gentle, faithful and good natured, ever a friend to man and especially to children many of whom have been saved from death by their intelli-of Ottawa, noted horsewoman and the breeder of Newfoundlands and Irish Setters. Mrs. Gibson served as nurse throughout the last war in a French Casualty Clearing station. While a resident of British Columbia, Mrs. Gibson created a record when she rode on horseback over the dangerous 66 Mile Hope Trail from Duncan to Salmon Arm alone, the first white woman to do so. gence. At command they will leap into the water from the highest precipice and in the coldest weather. So sagacious are they that they seem only to want the power of speech to make them fully understood and they are capable of being trained to all purposes for which almost every other variety of the canine species is used".

Their aptitude for the water is well illustrated in the account of the wrecking of the coastal steamer Ethie, in December 1919, near Bonne Bay, with ninety-two passengers aboard. No boat could be launched and probably all aboard would have perished had not one of these dogs at its owner's command dashed through the seething, surging sea for a rope thrown from the ship and which he brought ashore in his mouth through the breakers. A larger rope, fastened to it, hauled ashore and secured, then by aid of a boatswain's chair all hands were rescued. In 1914, the London Daily News prize to the dog with the highest record for courage in England was awarded to a Newfoundland for having saved from drowning Willie Frampton. I remember and shall never forget watching a fire in England and seeing a Mother standing outside the building and weeping for her baby who was trapped inside when out from the flames emerged a large black Newfoundland carrying the baby, by its night clothes, in his mouth and laying it at the feet of the mother.

The Newfoundland takes three years to develop to his full beauty and size, when eight weeks old a good specimen should weigh from 20 to 25 lbs. and should gain at least three pounds a week in weight, though the writer owned a dog that gained five pounds weekly, so that at the age of seven months he scaled 120 lbs. and at maturity over 155 lbs. The dog should impress one with its strength and activity, not so agile perhaps as the Great Dane, but he should move freely with the body swung loosely between the legs, hence a slight rolling gait characteristic of the breed. Two classes for the breed are allowed, the black, or Landseer, well marked specimens of the latter being very beautiful. Two perfectly marked Landseers were imported to this country by the writer, but unfortunately Daventry Coastguard succumbed to pneumonia six months after arrival and Daventry Grace Darling only produced two litters and died at the early age of six years.

One could quote scores of beautiful verses on the noble Newfoundland but the most popular and certainly befitting is the inscription on the monument at Newstead Abbey and dedicated by Lord Byron.

"Near this spot

Are deposited the remains of one
Who possessed Beauty without Vanity,
Strength without Insolence,
Courage without Ferocity,
And all the Virtues of Man without his Vices.

This Praise, which would be unmeaning
Flattery

If inscribed over human ashes,
Is but a just tribute to the memory of
'Boatswain,' a Dog.

Who was born at Newfoundland,
May 1803,
And died at Newstead Abbey, Nov. 18, 1808".

* * *

"To mark a friend's remains this stone arises

I never knew but one and here he lies."

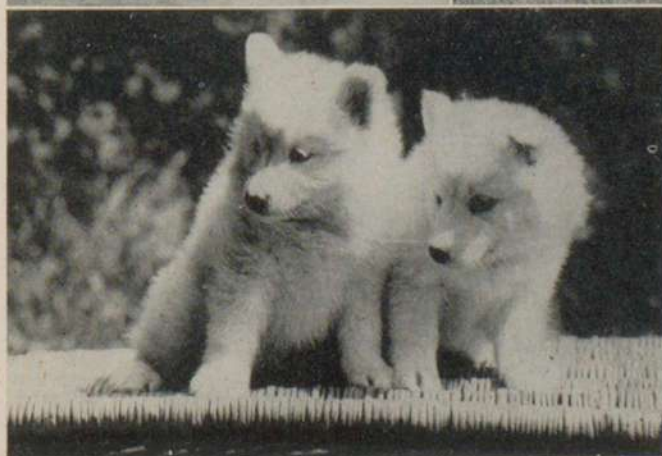

This I am sure is the consensus of opinion among those who have kept a Newfoundland dog, who is steadily gaining in popularity both as a show specimen, life saver and companion dog.

THE GREAT DANE—By Enno Meyer

The appellation "Great Dane" is the great misnomer of dogdom. At no time had Denmark anything to claim in the establishment of this breed, its nearest approach in that country, the Dansk Hond, being a very poor imitation of this magnificent breed, the credit for whose evolution should go to Germany and whose proper name should be that of its native land the "Deutsche Dogge".

The name Great Dane, no doubt, came from Buffon's classification of the large dogs, naming this type of dog the "Grand Danois," and I don't think anyone knows why he should have been so called since he considered the Mollosian and the huge dogs of Ireland his progenitors.

But even in Germany there seemed to be, for a long time, no concerted effort to settle on a definite name, the large dogs of the early days, that were probably some of the ancestors of the breed, were known as Hatzrueden, Saufaenger; and in later years, the Rottweiler was rather indiscriminately mixed with the breed both in name and in active cross breeding.

Again, for a while, the breed was known as the "Ulmer Dogge". But, finally, after the war of 1870, the strong nationalistic feeling finally and definitely fixed the name "Deutsche Dogge".

Great Danes found favor in America quite a long time before they became really popular in America, though the early importations passed here as Cuban and Siberian Bloodhounds. Since their entry, here, the breed has definitely gone forward and established itself in the Fancy. It has always held its own in public esteem, as a companion. As a show dog, it has steadily maintained its position. As early as 1905, there were already sizeable entries at the shows, Westminster having, in that year, 77 Great Danes on its benches. Our largest out-door show, Morris and Essex, benched the fine entry of 120.

America was fortunate in having a rather good lot of dogs among its early sires such as Melac, Major McKinley, Sandor vom Inn, Dagobert, and others.

of Milford, Ohio, one of the world's outstanding authorities on pure bred dogs. His father brought some of the first Irish Setters from Scotland to America one hundred years ago and the love of dogs was natural in his son, who was born in Cincinnati, Ohio. After preliminary schooling, Mr. Meyer studied art under the great American teacher Duveneck, completing his education in Europe. On returning to America he studied anatomy under Dr. Cilley and Professor Nowotny and was connected with this department in the Cincinnati Zoo, with which he is still affiliated. Although Mr. Meyer has judged in every city of any size on the North American continent, his chief interest is his art, he now specializes in portraits and small bronzes of show dogs, and horses. With Mrs. Meyer, who is his constant companion and whose tastes are identically the same, he lives quietly on a beautiful estate. Illness has taken its toll, and Mrs. Meyer, who also is a well-known judge and authority on dogs, carried on until as the readers can see, Mr. Meyer was sufficiently recovered to assist once again in the promotion of pure bred dogs. The accompanying article is, we believe, the finest ever written on the anatomy of the Great Dane and is applicable to most working dogs. The above study is of Mr. Meyer painting a portrait of his wife, with their favorite horse and dog

I remember Major McKinley and Sandor vom Inn very well, and they compared favorably with our later dogs.

The Great Dane is fully entitled to the high rank he holds in the dog world, his noble stature, combining grace and strength with an agility for so large an animal, makes him most impressive. His temperament is splendid, notwithstanding his alertness and desire to guard. His great intelligence makes him most tractable and obedient; and his strong natural desire for human companionship, makes him a safe and reliable dog with women and children.

Of late years, the strong influence of some very prepotent sires has brought to the breed many marked improvements, among them greater style, lovely heads and longer necks, and a great improvement in soundness and movement. These have given this grand breed a stronger position in the show game than ever before, thereby giving promise of a still grander future.

The first paragraph in the standard for the breed demands the distinguishing features that have made its place in the show world, namely: nobility, size, power, and elegance to a degree not seen in other breeds, with a long easy stride and a noble, proud bearing.

The head, of course, is a very important part of this picture. It should be rather long with a strong square muzzle, which should be as long from the stop to its end as the distance from the stop to the occiput, the stop by the way, being quite pronounced.

While the head should be flat and compressed, it should not look weak, it should never simply cover a weak small underjaw. The head should, in and while the muzzle should be ample effect, be composed of strong rectangles. The eyes should be medium size, with a keen expression. Plate 1 shows the side view of such a head, while Plate 2 shows the front view.

Plate 3, depicts a very long head, but one that does not suggest power. In this head, we usually find plenty of loose skin, sometimes an abundance of flabby lip, with no strong supporting underjaw. This type of head also has an expression that is not typical; especially in the eyes, which sometimes also show the very undesirable haw.

Plate 4, shows the type this head sometimes assumes in profile. Instead of the parallel lines of the head and muzzle, this shows a decided drop in muzzle and a bulge in the skull both highly objectionable. Heads of this type are also very often overshot, and it is most important that a Great Dane should have a level mouth. Another fault in this head is the dewlap or loose skin at the throat. The Great Dane should have a long, strong, clean neck, and the nearer it approaches a smooth column, the better.

Plate 5 is another faulty head. The muzzle is too short, and has a pronounced upturn to it. Instead of being cut square in front, it slopes back to rather heavy flews. The eyes are too full, and the neck is thick and coarse.

Plate 6 is a front view of the same head, showing the wide skull, instead of a flat one, and the comparatively attenuated muzzle. The ear crop is also too short.

Plate 7 shows the ideal type of body, with a reasonably short back, the correct station, layback of shoulder, sternum not overdone, deep brisket, and the proper tuck up in flank, that helps so much to give it a graceful line.

Plate 8 shows the antithesis of this. A heavy, logy ungraceful body; too long in back, too short and thick in neck; too pronounced in sternum; tail too long, reaching beyond the hocks.

Plate 9 shows a fair body, but made faulty through the incorrect leg structure namely, the straight shoulder and the stilty hindquarters.

Plate 10 depicts a weak body with a complete lack of rib. For a while this shelly type was making headway, but some of the old German breeders recognized the danger, and these bodies are today seldom met with. The unsoundness in this plate is enhanced by the overdone angulation of the hindquarters.

In summing up the body of the Dane, it should be remembered that the body should be moderately long, and the ribs rather flat. The body should be deep at the brisket to give plenty of lung room. The sternum should not be too prominent, as is often the case with some of the older types. The loin should arch gently and be very strong, while even the toes turning in and losing their purchase on the ground. The opposite of this is the second figure in which the legs turn outward, especially at the pasterns. This is a condition that usually can be attributed to a more or less rachitic condition in youth. This again influences the feet and splays them at the toes.

Plate 13 shows the normal hindquarter with broad, well-muscled hams; the second thighs long and well developed, with strong well bent hocks.

Plate 14 shows hindquarters that are often met with, and are not as desirable nor as sound as those on Plate 13, due to their overdone length in both the femur, or bone of the thigh, and the tibia and fibula, the bones of the second thigh.

This length tends to overangulation both in the thigh and the hocks, and overangulation always brings with it an unsound posture and movement.

In the German Shepherd, this condition was, for a long time, a much desired feature, due to the erroneous impression that such a structure gave added power to the stride while trotting; whereas, just the reverse was true, owing to the lost motion by the undue length of the bones.

Plate 15 shows the opposite effect, caused by too short a femur, which in turn does not permit enough angulation to give the proper leverage to the bones. The result is disastrous in several ways. First of all the second thighs can only do one thing, and that is to assume an upright position to brace themselves and the body, thereby not only elevating the croup until it is higher than the withers, but also putting an undue pressure on the hocks turning the croup should be short and slope gradually toward the tail. An essential is the under line of the body, since this upward curve gives the body its graceful appearance.

Plate 11 shows the correct front. The fore legs should be perfectly straight from the elbow to the pastern, the latter having a slight forward bend. The elbow is comparatively low, permitting a distinct right angle in the shoulder blade and the upper arm.

Plate 12 depicts two faulty fronts. The first, due to loose elbows, makes the front legs turn inwardly at the feet,

War Dogs of the United States Marine Corps

By R. C. Webster

The scenes depicted of the "Heroes in the Pacific" are:

Top left hand corner reading down: "RUFF" IS HIS NAME—This four-year-old Doberman Pinscher scout dog, "Ruff", was donated to the Marine Corps, by Clyde Folmar, of Torrington, Conn. Ruff proved particularly rough on the Japs at Bougainville, alerting hidden jungle positions and saving marine patrols from ambush.

JACK, an unidentified German Shepherd, Otto and Caesar. Caesar, reported to be the first dog wounded in this war has recovered from his injuries and returned to duty.

"NEXT TIME YOU'LL BELIEVE ME"—Jack, a two-year-old Doberman Pinscher, donated for war service to the U.S. Marine Corps by his owner, Mrs. Carrie M. Pace, Johnson City, Tennessee, has been commended by the Commandant of the Marine Corps' for outstanding performance of duty against the enemy on Bougainville Island. Jack started several times during the night towards a tree, but his trainers thought that there probably was a bird or small animal there. The next morning a Jap sniper was picked out of the tree which proved that Jack knew what he was "talking" about.

A SCENT FOR THE JAPS—Liney, a three-year-old Doberman Pinscher, donated for war service to the Marine Corps by his owner, R. C. Webster, 4410 York Road, Baltimore, Maryland, has been in the Marine Corps a year. During the Bougainville campaign, he picked up the scent of two Jap snipers, on the front lines.

Top right hand reading down: NEITHER ONE "BEST FRIEND" OF JAPS—Marine Corps Raiders and their jungle-trained Doberman Pinscher dogs, move up a jungle trail at Empress Augusta Bay, Bougainville, past a light machine-gun nest. The Leathernecks and their Devil Dogs—considered man's best friend—can hardly be classed that way by the Japs they have captured. (In Circle).

NIPPED BY A NIP—Jack, a three-year-old Belgian Shepherd, was donated for war service to the Marine Corps by his owner, Joseph Verhaeghe, 154 Tulip Avenue, Floral Park, New York, and has been commended by the Commandant of the Marine Corps for "outstanding performance against the enemy". While on Bougainville, Jack was in the line of duty, carrying a message back from the company on a road block, and was wounded in the back by a Jap sniper. Even though wounded he carried the message through. He is pictured here with one of his handlers Private First Class Finley, 819 W. Water Street, Elmira, New York.

JAP BULLET DIDN'T HAVE CAESAR'S NAME ON IT—The Marines say the only bullet you have to worry about is the one with your name on it, and apparently the Jap sniper that shot at this jungle-trained German Shepherd dog couldn't spell Caesar. Here Caesar, still bearing bandages from his encounter with the sniper, stands steady while Private First Class John J. Klee-man, 18, of Olney Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa., attaches a message to Caesar's neck-band for delivery to the front lines on Bougainville.

DEVIL DOG WOUNDED IN ACTION AT BOUGAINVILLE — "Caesar", a German Shepherd donated by Max Glazer, of the Bronx, New York City, is carried back to a dressing station (top), by two Marines, after he was wounded in action during the Battle for Bougainville. Hit in the flank and side "Caesar" had his wounds dressed (bottom), and was ready for action again but rest was prescribed. "Caesar" is one of the three German Shepherds attached to a Marine Corps dog platoon fighting on Bougainville and according to news service wire reports is the first to be wounded in action.

Eighteen months ago the high officers of the United States Marine Corps decided to establish a K-9 division which would give to our marines an offensive weapon not enjoyed by our enemies. It was the thought of these high officers that instead of going into a K-9 detachment where thousands of dogs could be used for all general purposes, that they would limit their field to Doberman Pinschers primarily for Scout work and with a few German Shepherds or German Shepherd cross-breeds to be used as messenger dogs.

At Camp LeJeune, New River, North Carolina, the terrain and area are especially adaptable to the formation and training of dog detachments. As one of the executives of the Doberman Pinscher Club of America I accepted the responsibility of procurement for the Marine Corps when they requested that the official breed club act as their procurement in the hope that only the choicest dogs would be made available by the patriotic owners and breeders of Doberman Pinschers throughout America. We assisted in the formation of this department, and we are very proud of the part we have played in the building of this new activity in the Marine Corps.

In the beginning of this endeavor, the urgent need was, of course, to construct kennels and to lay out such area, as would be needed in the complete boot training and advance training of these dogs at New River; barracks and quarters had to be erected for officers and men, the very finest personnel had to be selected for the responsible guidance of these activities at New River. The K-9 detachment was fortunate in having transferred from another branch of the Marine Corps services Captain Jackson Boyd. We were further fortunate in obtaining the services of Captain Clyde Henderson of Cleveland, who was formerly Professor of Chemistry at the Cleveland City High School, and who had all his life been interested in dogs and their training and who also has been in charge of the training committees of the Doberman Pinscher Club of America. We next obtained the services of Captain Wilson Davis who has been in charge of club training in our own Baltimore area for many years.

It was my job to establish state regional officers throughout the country who would give most of their time voluntarily and without pay to the procurement of these Marine Corps dogs. No branch of the Government has ever paid for any dog, so that we have had to depend upon the generosity and patriotism of the owners of these choice dogs in order to have obtained nearly 1,000 during the last 18 months. The last main drive that was put on in this country was the June 1st drive in which we had the all-out assistance of Mr. Harry Caesar and his splendid Dogs for Defense organization who had previously procured all the dogs for the Army and Coast Guard. One hundred fifty-five Dobermans and Shepherds were obtained in the June 1st campaign.

There are many interesting developments about these dogs. First, we find that in practically 100 per cent of the cases, the dogs, after two weeks of quarantine and conditioning, begin to gain weight with the well balanced supply of rations given to these dogs at the New River reservation. In charge of the dogs from the beginning was Tom Gately, one of America's finest conditioners and best professional handler, who enlisted to take over this work. At the head of the Veterinary Department at New River is Captain Stewart, one of the ablest veterinarians we have in the eastern United States. The majority of these dogs had infestations of various kinds of worms, and after two to four weeks at the reservation their general condition and health had been

TERRIERS IN CANADA

By Mac Silver

It was a great honor to be invited by the Kerry Blue Terrier Club of Canada to come up and judge their All-Terrier Show on July 2, and to once again meet so many of my good Canadian fancier friends.

Before going into a few details on the dogs, I would like to express my thanks to Hedley Weller and Mac Bell who stewarded for me and so ably kept my ring in order.

One particular point that I noticed was that the dogs were all in splendid condition and that their owners were all good winners and good losers, and are working for the various breeds they sponsor.

By Best-in-Show win was the Welsh Terrier American Ch. Strathglass Craig's Cruft. This typical Welsh was in the best of form, full of quality and style, very sound and a good mover. He has real Welsh Terrier expression.

My runner-up for Best-in-Show was the well known Wire dog, Wynwyre Saddle, owned by Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Kraft, of Royal Oak, Michigan. Saddle showed well and is really a fine dog who could hold his own, as he has proven many times, in sultry competition. His charming owner and her husband had made the trip and had the pleasure of seeing his victory.

Best Irish Terrier went to Charles D.

Jenkins' Maxine Moburn. This little Irish lady made an extremely favorable impression on me through her typical Terrier character, sound conformation, good topline and particularly pleasing Irish Terrier head. Mr. Jenkins, I understand, is a newcomer to the game. Let us hope he will have many more victories such as this in the future.

As was only proper at the Kerry Blue Terrier Club Show, Kerries had a large and splendid entry. I made Mrs. H. Conquergood's Kindon Blue Champagne Best-of-Breed and she subsequently was chosen best Canadian bred entry in the entire show. Champagne is a lovely Kerry of the correct size and very sound. She is of good Kerry color, exceptionally fine outline, good reach of neck set into the best of shoulders.

I found my Best-of-Winners, Wires, in William Reucassel's Gallant Matchless of Royal Oaks, a lovely puppy bitch who, with a bit more maturity, will take some stopping. She has a great outline, very short back, correct eye, keen Terrier expression, was full of quality and was put down and shown with the best of form.

Another Wire aspirant who rated very highly was Mrs. Kraft's Wynwyre Snowflake. Snowflake, however, was short of coat on the day. She is extremely feminine, sound and made right all over.

In conclusion, I would again like to express my thanks to the fine sporting spirit of the members of the Kerry Blue Terrier Club and their friends who took all my decisions in such good part, and who did so much to make my unfortunately short stay in Canada so pleasant.

It was a pleasure to see my old Canadian friends and to make new ones, and to meet so many enthusiastic fanciers who are doing so much to keep the dog game going in Canada.

The dogs which were brought before me were a credit to their breeders and owners and it gave me great pleasure to have my awards received with such sporting spirit.

PTE. WILLIAM F. HENDERSON, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henderson of the well-known Alford Kennels which produce the Shetland Sheepdogs. William is with the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps. He is a keen student of the Shetland Sheepdog and proficient in the handling of dogs since childhood

ARMOURER SGT. R. W. STEVENSON, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Stevenson. Enlisting in the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps, he was in the invasion of Normandy. He is particularly fond of Chow-Chows and hopes to bring a real good one back from England

PTE. GEORGE WARD, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Ted. Ward of Clarkson, Ontario. George is with the Canadian Infantry Corps, and enjoys army life. A professional handler in the United States, George returned to Canada to enlist in the Canadian Army. He is seen here with his father's grand Fox Terrier Eds- wyre Superman, winner of Best in Show at Ottawa and the Irish Terrier Fanciers show

LIEUT. FRANK COOPER, son of A. F. and the late Mrs. Cooper, went overseas with the Royal Canadian Engineers at the beginning of the present war. While Frank loves the Old English Sheepdog his parents were well-known in the Borzoi circles with the O'Dolina Kennels. Frank was wounded in Normandy but declares he is quite well and hopes to rejoin his unit in France. The Old English Sheepdog is Mistress Nibs, his personal pet

He joined the Toronto Scottish at the outbreak of hostilities and went overseas in December, 1939. His health is impaired from overseas duties but he carries on with his kennels and is at present on the Maritime Circuit

PERSONALITIES

Mass production, the slogan of war plants, has jumped into the dog fancy.

Charles Warnett, of Toronto, reports a litter of ten Cocker Spaniels, nine males and one female. Pennsylvania reports a litter of twenty-three fox hounds to Newbold's Ely's Lena; and nine Brussels Griffons were born to Miss Eleanor Baker's Suzie. How about it Canada, any records to equal these?

Dame rumour is busy again, Ormiston Roy was in town and whispered that the Collie fanciers are seriously contemplating the exporting of Canadian Collies to Great Britain to replenish the kennels and assist in the return to prosperity over there. Other breeders are invited to participate in this fine gesture to a people who for many years sent us the nucleus of our kennels.

Taking coals to Newcastle is a saying that will become a reality for Smooth Fox Terrier breeders in England when Mrs. J. deVere Hunt, of Duncan, Vancouver Island, B.C., returns to England in November. American Champion Warren Maiden, the last Warren to win her championship, while but seventeen months of age, has been imported by Mrs. Hunt. Before leaving the famed Wissaboo Kennels of James Austin, Warren Maiden was bred to Ch. Nornay Saddler, considered to be the greatest smooth Fox Terrier of all times. Canada would have welcomed a litter of Fox Terriers with such breeding but as they will be the first of Nornay Saddler's offspring in England, they will unquestionably make a place for themselves in Great Britain's war breeding plans.

Publishing the standards has created interest from coast to coast. Perhaps Canada will jump aboard the band wagon and set definite breed standards. In the meanwhile listen in on "Our Dogs" from England in a recent issue—"Most standards were drawn up many years ago, but the breeds have altered out of all recognition because the breeders seized on certain points and bred from them without discretion. For instance, in most or all standards for Terriers that were originally intended to run with Hounds and go to ground, a narrow front and length and strength of jaw were laid down. Sensible and necessary, but not when narrowness of front was carried to the extent of both front legs coming out of the same hole, and the dog allowed no exercise for fear he might put muscle on his shoulders. Length of jaw was gained at the expense of strength of skull and brain power, and made to look longer by a wealth of whisker that could only be a score hindrance to its owner had he to work in a drain or muddy earth. Don't alter the standards, but print in red letters at the top of each "A beauty exaggerated becomes a fault", and at the bottom, "Moderation in all things".

When the smooth Fox Terrier Elmcroft Harvester, bred and owned by Ray

McLaughlin, of Oshawa, was awarded Best in Show at the Peel County Fair, the crowded ringside broke into cheers. Stepping out like a thoroughbred he seemed to be ready at any moment for the work required of a Terrier. Had a rodent appeared on the lawn, even Ted Ward could not have held the dog back, it was a masterpiece of showmanship, and a well deserved win for a dog who has no frills to hide faults, and must win on his merits. As a Canadian-bred he won the beautiful rose bowl presented by Master Feeds, for best Canadian-bred in show all breeds.

Bernard Yound, of Halifax, N.S., has acquired the sensational young Collie, "Elmhill Elmist" from the Quarrybrae Kennels of George Getty. At the age of ten months this dog won through to Best of Breed in a large entry at the Progressive Kennel Club Show in June. Good luck Mr. Young and a welcome to our ranks.

Winning Best of Breed at Westminster for two consecutive years with the Cairn Terrier Int. Ch. Tam's Grey Girl of Cairndania, spurred her kennel mate Int. Ch. Kilmet of Cairndania to emulate her victories. At Rye, New York, Kilmet won Best of Breed at the Cairn Terrier Specialty Show and third in the Terrier group. It won't be long now until a Cairn reaches the top, and ultimately Best in Show.

Mr. Fred A. Bearse, of Springfield, Mass., celebrated his birthday by renewing his subscription to Dogs In Canada. Mr. Bearse has bred Boston Terriers since 1896, and though the three score years and ten have passed, is still actively and enthusiastically sponsoring the breed.

Lady Winsome celebrated the return of her owners, Mr. and Mrs. Alf Lovelidge to Toronto, by presenting them with two beautiful Boston Terrier puppies, the sire is the Am. Ch. Ace of Aces.

Congratulations to Mr. K. A. Ross, of the Keneva Kennels at Fort William, Ont. Exhibitors returning from the Lakehead Show, state that Mr. Ross has some wonderful Pomeranians, and that Keneva Brucie is a flyer. The latest acquisition for Mr. Ross is Melbourne Blazing Glory, from the Fairbanks Kennels in Toronto.

MR. GEORGE GETTY,

President of the Collie and Shetland Sheep-dog Club of Canada now on its second year with a record membership. Mr. Getty has loved Collies since childhood and established his present Quarrybrae Kennels in nineteen fourteen. He bred the great Quarrybrae Colleen, who won her championship three times

The Norfolk County Agricultural Society, celebrates its one hundred and fourth consecutive Agricultural Exhibition with an all-breed dog show at the Norfolk County Fair Grounds, on October 4th and 5th. An innovation in dog show procedure will be introduced when the two-day show will be divided into three groups each day, and dogs need only be benched on the day of judging. Exhibitors may remove their dogs at the close of the day on which they are judged. This is a war-time measure to assist in aiding war workers, while carrying on the traditions of the Norfolk County Society, to sponsor the Agricultural Show for the benefit of the breeders of pure bred stock, in war and in peace.

Considered the finest show on the continent dog fanciers will be welcomed and if reservations are made, accommodation will be arranged at the hotels.

The Boston Terrier Club of Toronto enters another era with the Specialty Show to be held on Thanksgiving Day, October 9th. Last year was the Silver Anniversary of this Specialty Club which is the oldest Specialty Club in the Dominion, and a record entry was benched. The location is ideal and the club dinner will be served to exhibitors and their friends.

Miss Fay Fox has accepted the appointment of Secretary-Treasurer of the Club, Mr. Blum having purchased a farm at Agincourt is leading a life of ease, and so relinquished the position.

Obedience trials continue to be the most attractive exhibit at the shows in the United States, and indications are that Canada will soon make obedience one of the main issues. On September twelfth at 2 p.m. the Dog Training Club of Canada makes its initial appearance at the Dufferin Race Track, on Dufferin Street, Toronto, the first class starting

Mr. Waggit has shown dogs for sixty-five years, and has bred every recognized breed of pure-bred dogs with the exception of the new breeds introduced in the last ten years. He is a horticulturist, being as successful with gladiola as with dogs

MR. JAMES MILLER,

President of the Norfolk County Agricultural Society, the oldest Agricultural Fair in Canada. Mr. Miller is a dog fancier preferring the sporting dogs. The Dog Show on Oct. 4th and 5th will be the culmination of Mr. Miller's efforts to make Norfolk County pure-bred-dog conscious ments that the dogs are pure bred and kept under control.

The Fort Garry Kennel Club is planning a banquet and a celebration at the Silver Anniversary Show. There are three members of the Fort Garry Club on Active Service, we would be glad to hear from more clubs with news for this page.

Mr. C. J. Boyle, President of the Lakehead Kennel Club which held a most successful show last month, has announced plans for next year's show on a much improved scale. The inclement weather disrupted the judging somewhat but from the reports of exhibitors and handlers who attended the show from Toronto, the spirit of friendliness and hospitality extended was such as to make next year a definite return to Lakehead. The Best in Show was won by the beautiful Irish Setter, Ch. Elmcroft Red Ace, owned by R. Manning, of Port Arthur, and reserve to the Miniature Pinscher Int. Ch. Trail Blazer of Geddesburg, owned by Wm. Harris, of Toronto. Quebec City has a particularly fine show scheduled for October 14th, when W. W. Rooney, of Montreal, will judge all breeds. Mr. G. M. Howard, a Scottish Terrier enthusiast, is the secretary and indications are that Quebec will become show dog conscious and remain so for the future.

With the Chow-Chow Club of Canada and the Cocker Spaniel Club of Central Ontario sponsoring Specialty Shows on the same date, the fanciers of the two breeds will have a busy day. The Chow-Chows meet on the estate of W. P. Gudgeon at Bronte, forty miles west

A LITTLE PRAYER FOR LARRY

By Harold MacPherson

Is there a country, Lord, where thou dost keep

A place reserved for dogs that fall asleep?

Large airy kennels, yards for burying bones

A little river chattering over stones,
And wide green fields for those that never knew

A smoky town. An old worn rug or two Before a fire, where sparks do not fly out—

Sparks are such nasty things to have about

I like to think there is, and so I pray
For one small Newfoundland that died today.

He was so full of fun, not very wise,
The puppy look still lingered in his eyes.
But he was very dear—he'd come to me
And rest his soft black chin upon my knees,

Thou knowest him. One night not long ago,

He tramped with me across the frozen snow

And there beyond the wood peaceful and still

We met Thee walking on the moonlit hill.

Lord, keep him safe, wherever he may be.

And let him always have a thought of me.

That I may hear, when I pass through the dark,

Thy soothing voice, and then, a friendly bark.

SASKATCHEWAN NEWS

By Lyla Semple

Exhibition shows have come and gone for another year. We hope, in the near future to again see an unbroken circuit,
Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatoon and Regina.

We hope the City of Moose Jaw will be another link. This city hasn't had an organization for a number of years.
A very enthusiastic gentleman, Mr. Jarvis who entered a lovely Collie, is quite interested in starting a club, he returned to Moose Jaw with a determined glint in his eye and a pocket full of application forms. We will look to Mr. Jarvis for the time when we will be able to contribute to one another better dogs and better acquaintance.

One of the most outstanding events of the season was the visit made to our fair city by our Judge, Captain Will Judy and Mrs. Judy.

Mrs. Judy judged the children and adult handlers class. Captain and Mrs.
Judy made a very lasting impression on all those who were fortunate enough to have met them.

We hope to again welcome them in the not too distant future.

We were pleased to meet Mrs. Brown from Cupar, Mrs. Howell from Park-beg, and Mr. Scott from Moose Jaw.

Mr. Carey, of "Desert", visited our show and gave me the following news about his kennels.

He has "Rideau Park Black Spot" a black Cocker five months old. Heaven's Gate Standstorm is in the east being bred at the Rideau Park Kennels, Ottawa.

Glendewar Bone of Contention is the sire of five young Cocker puppies.

He reports he has ten dogs and we hope Mr. Carey will be seen on the show circuit next year.

Mr. William Semple's Wire Haired Terrier Ch. Straven Admiral made a good showing at his last Canadian Show by getting Reserve Best in Show.

Mr. and Mrs. Mardes, Indianapolis, Indiana have purchased him, he will start the American circuit in September.
The best of luck to "Mickey and the Mardes's.

Another proved winner was Mr. Jack
Dudley, of Regina, with his little Red Cocker, Red Chief of Walmal, recently purchased from Walter Stevenson, Amherstburg, Ontario. Mr. Dudley has him ready for the fall circuit.

We missed Jack Goff, Medicine Hat,
Mr. Saunders, Calgary, and a few other familiar faces that usually appear each year around our show ring.

Remember folks, I am relying on each of you for next month's news. Sometime, somewhere perhaps I will meet you all, Goodbye now.

ALBERTA NOTES

By H. P. Saunders

The frost is on the pumpkin in the early morn, the plumage of the cock birds is now developing a splendid hue, and the young mallards are almost as big as the parent birds; the foliage is turning a golden brown and it now behooves the hunter to get his sporting dogs in shape for the fall shooting. The youngsters should by now be well yard broke and obedient, and above all well muscled up and given plenty of running so that when they are asked to do a good day's work in the field they will not be soft, and short of wind. So many hunters think their dogs are quitters when they are unable to stand up to hard work when the whole fault rests with the owner; so get thee out and run the dogs until they are hard as nails, and you will never regret it.

I sat in an audience and watched with great interest a moving picture of English Setters working on game. I was particularly struck with the performance of a tri-colored female which displayed speed and quartered her territory in grand style, but the crowning moment arrived when she located her game. What style, and was she staunch! Well, I came home from that meeting very covetous, but here is the pay-off—shortly after a lady called me on the phone and asked me if I would be interested in buying a good working English Setter. I said I should like to see her work and when the lady arrived at my home with the dog it was none other than the Setter that had made such a marvellous performance in the movie. I nearly fell over with astonishment, and when I looked at her registration papers I noted that she was sired by a winning son of Pal Hansen. I lost no time closing the deal, and after that taking her out to a grain field and did she delight me! When on game her tail is sky high and perfectly tense. In concluding this story I may say that I have bred this female to a son of Equity, whose dam was by Sports Peerless.

My friend McGregor from Saskatchewan, whose home is in Saskatoon, and who is an optician, is developing a grand English Setter pup which Pat Randall selected for him from the Kennels of Wally Wilgress, of Vancouver, B.C. You all know that this same Wally has sent out some of the very finest and they have always brought back a good account of themselves. Mac did the right thing and I want you to just watch the result.

Now for an account of our Kennel Club activities. We start the ball rolling this fall with a show on September 4th, at Medicine Hat, Alberta; Vic Williams, of Vancouver, judging all breeds. Then Calgary, September 8th and 9th, with Capt. Will Judy, of Chicago, judging all breeds. Edmonton Show is on September 11th, with Mr. Kynoch judging all breeds. We are looking for a large entry at each one of these shows, so come along and bring all the entries you can muster.

PACIFIC NOTES

By Dollie Wall

In the August issue of Dogs in Canada I made reference to the five newly imported Pekingese dogs by Mrs. Gladys Creasey, of Victoria. None of these dogs I believe at that time had ever been shown before. With the coming of the Vancouver, Washington, and Portland, Oregon, shows, Mrs. Creasey decided to send some of her dogs down, and in so doing I sincerely believe has made Pekingese history out here on the Pacific Coast. Her male dog (whose name I have mislaid) capturing Best in Show all breeds in Washington and again repeating his win at Portland Oregon the next day, this in our opinion is certainly a boost for the Pekingese world out here in the West.

We regret very much the proposed shows for Vancouver this fall have had to be postponed owing to unforeseen difficulties.

Ch. Elmcroft Red Ace, owned by R. Manning of Port Arthur, Ont. This Irish Setter won Best in Show all breeds at the Lakehead Kennel Club Show. He was bred by Ray McLaughlin of Oshawa.

THE PAST, THE PRESENT AND THE FUTURE

As we study our various popular breeds of dogs and read articles on their origin, we naturally look back with envy and some reverence to the days when these breeds were in the process of being "discovered" or shall we say "produced".

There must be occasions when you, like others of us, wonder if we breeders of the last quarter century have done our part to maintain their quality and character. You must wonder too if we have proved ourselves worthy to carry on the work started by these, the Chapmans, the Countess Howes, the Edward Laverack's, the Colonel Thornton's, the Enniskillens, the Captain Edwards, the Malcomes and more lately, the Hockwalks, the Theo. Marples, the Freeman Lloyds, the Bob Armstrongs and the Herman Mellanths. As you look back on, or read of the dogs they produced, judged and trained you must wonder if we have successfully perpetuated the bloodlines they left for us as a heritage.

Are we still producing "Necessities", "Realization", "Gallant Fox", "Rivington Laws", "Banchony Bolo's", Choonam Hung Kwongs", "L'le Messenger Boys", "Joe Cummings" and "My Brucies". If we would look at the mill-run of our dogs and note the lap-dog Spaniels, the silky sickly Setters and nerve racked Alsations and Dobes, one is forced to wonder if the research and study of our forebearers was worth while. In almost every case these, our favourite breeds, were produced for some useful purpose, whether it be that of going around, scenting game or guarding person or property is of little consequence, so long as that usefulness was kept in mind, progress and improvement followed, and any or all of the set backs that these breeds have experienced must be laid at the door of the beauty parades which we have fostered to the exclusion of all else. Our national organizations, our local clubs and we as individuals, have, until recently, given little recognition or publicity to field-trial and obedience work, yet these are the type of activities which brought many of our favorite breeds into being and which today bring out the qualities which through dormancy have caused degeneration.

Field work, guarding and sport in general were the motives behind the original production of these dogs, Beauty Parades, and Pet Sales have done much to defeat that purpose. Indications are to the effect that the immediate future holds in store for us, BETTER DAYS AND BETTER DOGS, Commercial dog-papers, Official organs and numerous Dog Clubs are thinking, talking "educated dogs". Many more Dog-Show patrons are asking for demonstrations by trained dogs at our shows, and we are hardly in a position to deny them. Rather we should welcome such demands because they will undoubtedly set many of our declining breeds back on their feet and tend to give back to our fore-bearers those things which we have been largely instrumental in losing for them.

Quality

One hears at our dog shows the words "quality" and "elegance" applied to this animal or another in many breeds. These words are usually used to put aside those few dogs in every breed who possess these rare attributes in abundance. These terms, of course, cannot be applied, in the Doberman breed, to the dog that possesses a plug-ugly, forbidding countenance or expression, narrow front, shallow brisket, splayed feet, fiddle front, swayed or roached back, cur coat and steep quarters, which faults are the results of improper breeding.

We have recently sold to

MR. GEORGE WADE

57 Felbrigg Avenue, Toronto, Ont.

two Doberman Pinschers who possess the highest qualities expected of the best in our breed.

Ch. Westphalia's Rameses, C.D.X. Sire: Ch. Kurt v d Rheinperle-Rhinegold Dam: Ch. Sgn. Jessy v d Sonnenhohe

His 20 Best of Breeds under America's foremost judges—breed specialists Cholley, Parth, Lawrence, Thomas, Peters, Grant, etc., and all-arounders Rost, Rosenberg, Worden, Downing, Myers, Williams, Buck, Thomas, etc., in America's most important shows, testify as to his show greatness. His C.D.X. Obedience title is evidence of his brilliant intelligence, and he has already sired some of our best American champions. These are the three great tests of a truly great dog.

Fair To Middlin' of Marienland Sire: Ch. Westphalia's Rameses, CDX. Dam: Ch. Dow's Cora v Kienlesberg

Middlin' was mated to Carrollton (Cerita's full litter brother, and a son of undefeated Ch. Rembha and Ch. Roland v Stahlhelm), and from this mating there are now at Mr. Wade's kennels six lovely puppies, and the person will be fortunate indeed who selects one from this litter. It represents the very best in the Helios and Sigalsburg families, and is practically the same blood that produced the two greatest Best in Show Dobermans in America last year, namely, Ch. Emperor of Marienland and Ch. Dow's Dodie v Kienlesberg. You will enjoy doing business with Mr. Wade as he is a gentleman of strong integrity and good name. He is not a "professional" but a "hobbist" whose hope is to own and breed the best. It is our intention to assist him in this endeavor by procuring the best available dogs when and as they make their debut in the American show rings.

Foundation Stock

We take pride in furnishing some of the greatest stars of the future in the establishment of

BLAU TURE KENNELS Vancouver — Owner: Mr. C. W. Kelly

During the past several years, our kennel has sold more champions than any other, notwithstanding the fact that we have never bred more than four litters in any year. Moritz, Cerita, Clipper, Echo, Dante, Darlington, Ernestine, Echo, Riecka, Monterey, Dow's Illena, Dow's Dusty, Rolanna, and Key are but a few of these greatest of the great now owned throughout the country. Many of the younger stars, nearly completed, were sold by us. We, naturally, take pride in such a record.

The young Doberman Pinschers now at Blau Ture are:

Ch. Blank v d Domstadt (Sg. Ch. Muck)
Ch. Domossi of Marienland
Sgn. Ch. Ossi v Stahlhelm (Sg. Ch. Troll)

OLIVIA OF MARIENLAND

Ch. Kurt v d Rheinperle-Rhinegold (Astor of Westphalia)
Ch. Westphalia's Rembha
Sgn. Ch. Jessy v d Sonnenhohe (Cherloc v Rauhfelsen)

Ch. Domossi (Ch. Blank)
Ch. Emperor of Marienland
Ch. Rembha (Ch. Kurt)

ROXANNA'S EMPEROR V REEMON

Ch. Kurt (Astor of Westphalia)
Ch. Westphalia's Roxanna
Sgn. Ch. Jessy (Cherloc v Rauhfelsen)

Ch. Roland v Stahlhelm (Sg. Ch. Troll)
Carrollton of Marienland
Ch. Rembha (Ch. Kurt and Jessy)

DOW'S RAMPART OF MARIENLAND

Ch. Westphalia's Rameses (Ch. Kurt and Jessy)
Dow's Illisa of Westphalia
Ch. Dow's Cora v Kienlesberg (Ch. Kurt and Gretl))

Such is the foundation stock of Blau Ture Kennels. People of Northwestern America and Canada are fortunate to be able to purchase from 1945 on progeny of these illustrious parents. Others meeting our specifications will be sent to Blau Ture whenever they are available in America.

"We, The People's Next Guest . . ."

Through the courtesy of the Columbia Broadcasting System and the Gulf Oil Co., sponsor of the program, "We the People," we quote the spot from the July 2nd broadcast. Many of you know intimately Capt. James Winton Leman—a "Doberman man" for many a year. The broadcast:

"WE THE PEOPLE'S next guest has something he'd like to add to it. He's Captain James Winton Leman of the United States Marines. All right, Captain Leman."

"My story is about a Marine; not a uniformed Marine—but a Marine war dog. MY dog—a Doberman Pinscher—named Kathe. I had her 2 years—from the time she was a pup, and when the war came, Kathe and I both went into the Marines. Kathe was a good dog, but she had a very demanding personality. She insisted on having things her own way. She loved to sleep on my bed and it took some pretty severe scolding each night to make her lie down where she belonged, in her own bed in the corner. But invariably in the morning, I'd awaken and there she'd be—curled up on my blanket. When I was leaving the house, she seemed to know whether it was on business—or just to take a walk. And if it wasn't on business, she demanded to go along."

Q.—"Well, Captain, were you and your dog together in the Marines?"

A.—"No. She went off to boot camp for training. She was pretty angry at me for shipping her off like that, but Kathe wasn't so dumb. She played up to her new handlers and I heard that at camp she soon talked them into giving her special privileges like an extra bone between meals. She even bamboozled a hard-boiled Marine Sergeant into letting her sleep on HIS bed once in a while. Then she was assigned to the first dog platoon of any of the armed forces to be sent as a unit into action in the South Pacific."

Q.—"What were Kathe's duties, Captain?"

A.—"She started as a private first class on Red Cross and messenger duty in the front lines, but she took this work in her stride. In fact, she was doing swell—except that she made one social error. She fell in love with a native dog named Gunga Din . . . But the fellows out there managed to find a home for all ten of her puppies."

Q.—"She must have been pretty uncomfortable without any beds to sleep on?"

A.—"Well, I understand that did make her kind of unhappy, so she used to crawl in between a couple of Marines in a fox hole!"

Q.—"Was Kathe under heavy fire?"

A.—"Yes, she wangled a promotion to Front Line Security duty. This meant guarding our Marine flanks against Jap infiltration. One night her position was attacked by shell fire, mortars and grenades. The next morning Kathe said nothing but looked very self-satisfied. She had no official recognition of it but I heard that upon close inspection one of her handlers found a bit of cloth between her teeth that resembled the seat of a Jap's pants."

Q.—"What other action did Kathe see?"

A.—"Well, you see, on security duty her job was to keep alert at night—warn our men of approaching danger—scent out the enemy. On one particular Jap attack, Kathe stayed at her post all through heavy fire. For three days after she was stone deaf from the noise of the explosions and suffered from shell shock. But she regained some of her hearing and went into action again. Soon afterward Kathe died in the line of duty. She got no medals, no citations. All I have of her now is a copy of her service record—and something else—at night when I'm in bed—I'm awfully conscious of that empty place on the foot of the blanket. . . ."

them outward, weakening them and losing their entire function of transmitting the thrust from the hocks in the movement of the hindquarters. All hindquarters that are sound, should be perfectly parallel when viewed from the rear.

Plate 16 shows the various positions of the tail. The first is the carriage when the dog is at rest, hanging straight down and not reaching below the hock, thick at the base and tapering to a fine point which, by the way, should never be clipped.

The second figure shows the position of the tail when the dog is in motion. It should never be curled over the back, or even curled toward the back. A ring tail is a very serious fault. The third figure is a bent tail that is sometimes met with, and is also undesirable.

Plate 17 shows the perfect foot, a very important feature in the Dane. It is obvious, of course, that so large an animal should have perfect foundations, and so the feet should be compact, strong, well padded with well arched toes. The second figure shows the wrong foot, namely the flat toes with no pads, and the spreading bones that have no strong tendons to brace them.

Having covered the structure of the Dane, there remains the coat and its color. The coat should be very short and thick. It should lie very smooth, and have plenty of gloss, while the color is divided into the following: fawn, which varies from the lightest yellow to deepest golden tan. It is most desirable to have black shadings on the muzzle, ears, and brows. White is tolerated on the chest or toes, but it is really undesirable. The nose must be black, and the eyes and nails dark. The golden fawn should be preferred, while silver, or blue gray, or biscuit-colored fawn shades should be considered color faults.

Brindles have the same body shades as the fawns, together with the same black shadings on the head, but the body should be striped with pure black distinct stripes, the body color showing clearly between them.

The same rule concerning the nose, eyes, nails, and white markings of the fawns also applies to the brindle color. Faults in this color are silver gray, blue gray, biscuit fawn, or a dirty fawn color.

Blue Danes vary from light gray to deep slate. Again the rule of dark eyes, nails, black nose, and white markings applies to this color also.

Harlequins should have a pure white ground color on which patches of black are distributed all over the dog in a pleasing pattern. The pink, or butterfly, nose is permissible, and so are wall eyes. But dark eyes and nails, and black noses are distinctly preferred.

WAR DOGS

improved considerably. In nearly every case these dogs became devoted to their handlers and actually enjoyed the training and their new systematic way of life.

After some half-dozen platoons had been trained and finished at the advance base in California, Captain Henderson was sent to the home base in the central Pacific, and it was he who lead the First Dog Platoon in action throughout the battle of Bougainville. This First Platoon consisted of 26 dogs, 24 Dobermans and 2 German Shepherds, and their achievements have, of course, already been recorded in the impartial press of practically every country.

There is a mistaken idea, however, about war dogs and the services they render. These dogs are trained to attack when commanded to do so, but this is rarely ever done. Only on one occasion has any dog been given an order to attack up until this time. These dogs are divided into two groups—scout and messenger dogs. A group of our marines may be sent to advance over a certain area. Fifty yards in front of these advancing soldiers is the handler and his dog, on point, and this dog is so trained that in every instance when within 200 to 250 yards of the enemy this dog will freeze and point in the exact direction of the enemy even though the jungle growth is so high and thick that it would be impossible for one to see such enemy emplacements or groups. The dogs detect these either from their keen sense of smell or hearing. It means that our boys are warned and that we know exactly where the enemy is located, and it means, further, that the enemy hasn't the faintest idea that we are anywhere near. This gives us a tremendous advantage, especially where there is jungle growth. Another great advantage these scout dogs render is the preventing of infiltrations in our lines at night. These dogs are placed at various points to protect our lines, and it would be hard to estimate how many thousands of lives the Marine "Devil Dogs" have saved so far.

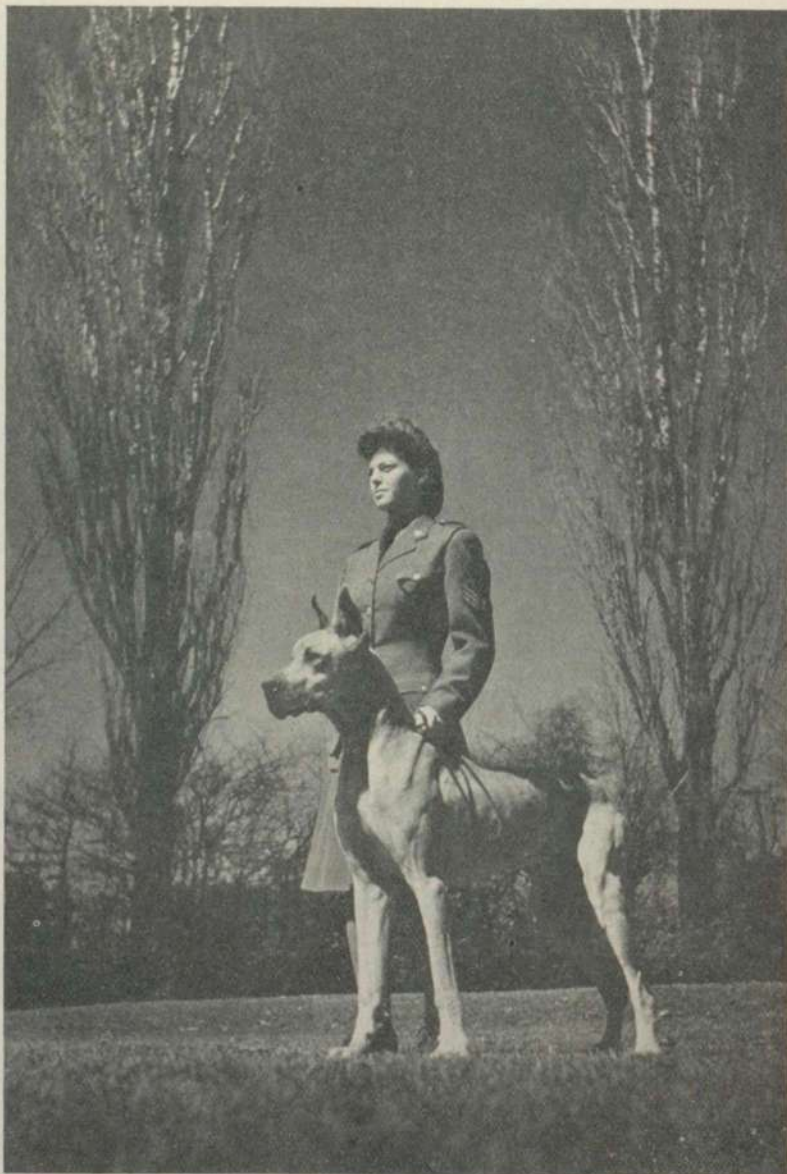

Summing up their value in the words of the commander of the Second Raider Battalion, Colonel Chaplee, he said he considered the dogs of the First Platoon and their handlers the least expendable of anything in the Second Raider Battalion.

Since Bougainville there have been many other platoons leave New River and are now at the central bases in the Pacific. All of these later dogs were given a more intensive course of training to cover all the lessons learned and the experiences of the battle of Bougainville. In the meantime, Captain Henderson has been transferred to the home training center at New River, N.C., and Captain Wilson Davis is in direct charge of all Marine Corps dogs in the central Pacific.

COLLIES

By Johnny Milner

The Editor of Dogs In Canada has requested that I write something of interest to the many Collie lovers for this special issue.

My love and attachment to the Collie began in the early nineties of the last century. At that period I was residing within walking distance of the world famous Ormskirk-Southport and Parbold Collie Kennels. The beauty and alertness of this breed made me a Collie fancier for life. A few years later I became acquainted with W. E. Mason, R. H. Lord and Mr. Stansfield, of the Southport, Seedley, and Laund Kennels.

I met these three great pillars of the Collie world again at Crufts Show in London, England, the year Ch. Poplar Perfection won. Our chat was the best kind of a female from which to breed. Collie readers would have been deeply interested in the remarks. Mr. Mason said the pretty as a picture female does a lot of winning, they are often on the small side and prove to be poor producers when bred, they have very little to put in a pup. Mr. Lord said I never keep a puppy for myself unless it is out of a good, big, sound female, with lots of bone, depth and spring of rib. They do not have to be winners to give you Champions. I am more interested in the dam that produced the champion than in the champion himself.

Your many readers who are lovers of this beautiful and intelligent breed, need no discussion of the stand here. It is still a splendid description of a very likeable and friendly dog.

Like many other breeds it has its detractors, who say the Collie is vicious—others say the skull is too narrow and that they have no brains. To these people I would say I have handled hundreds of Collies and I have yet to meet a really vicious one.

The Collie when born has a loving disposition—only brutality can make it any different. Intelligence, and devotion to its owner is as much a part of the Collie as his beautiful long coat and his understanding expression is when he looks at you.

He has to his credit the saving of

a real oldtimer and a great supporter of the Canadian Kennel Club, taking an active part in the formation of the C.K.C. He formed the first advisory board to the late Dr. Boulton and was a Director for Manitoba. Known as a great Collie fancier, Mr. Milner bred Ch. Corona Premier hundreds of human lives. When in the dark hours of the night he awakens the household with his furious barking, God didn't give him speech, but he is shouting "fire!" in the only way he knows how—trying to protect those he loves so dearly.

Most of you readers have seen that splendid film called "Lassie Come Home". The devotion of a Collie for a boy—a devotion comparable to this in the human race could only be—"He gave his life for a friend".

After almost fifty years close association with the Collie, I can only say—day in and day out he is your best friend. He is glad because you are glad—when sorrow and bereavement comes your way—he is sad with you. In his eyes you can see a world of sympathy. His head rests on your knees

—his great love EASES A BURDEN HARD TO BEAR.

What can compare with this dog whose love and protection for children—his comfort to the lonely heart—his beautiful appearance—HE IS WORTH HIS WEIGHT IN GOLD!

Thirty years ago the Collies in Canada were the equal—and sometimes the superior—of the best Collies the English and American Kennels could produce. The Great War came—several leading breeders went "Overseas" the grandeur and success of the Canadian Collies faded away. But there still remained the famous Elmhill Collies in the West, holding the fort.

Today, the Collie in Canada is again a favorite breed and is fast regaining top place in the breeding world.

OUR COVER

A fitting cover for this our Working Dog issue is the Collie which for centuries has proven valuable to man. Bellhaven's Model Commander is a gorgeous sable and white Collie, imported by Alf Roberts, of Etobicoke, from the well-known kennels of Mrs. Florence Ilch, Redbank, N.J. As this dog is featured in the advertising section, we take pleasure in introducing his owner, Mr. Alf Roberts.

Mr. A. Roberts has bred and shown dogs for so many years he has decided to resign himself to the task. At the age of seven years he bought his first Collie on Saturday night for half a crown (2s/6d) and two days later sold it for one pound, ten shillings. He organized the Accrington Canine Association in 1909 and was instrumental in the foundation of many clubs in England. Since coming to Canada Mr. Roberts has assisted in dog shows, and is known from coast to coast for his superintendant and ring steward abilities.

The German Shepherd Dog Specialty Show is to be an outstanding event this year as the Von Stephanitz Trophy is to be up for competition at this event. This is a very interesting trophy and it might be in order to give a little of its history. Von Stephanitz who originated the trophy is known as the father of the Shepherd Dog and the trophy can be competed for only by the German Shepherd breed. It is one of the conditions of the trophy that it must be competed for every year. Another interesting condition of the trophy is that the residence of the winner determines the country in which it is competed for the following year. That is what makes the Specialty Show such an event this year. The Von Stephanitz Trophy was won in 1943 by Major of Northmere, owned by Mr. George Jerman, who lives in St. David's, Ontario. Therefore in 1944 it is competed for in Canada and this is to be done at the Specialty Show, to be held on September 23rd, at the Queen Elizabeth Lodge, on the Queen Elizabeth Highway at Mississauga Road.

I HAD MY DAYS OF SKIN TORMENT, TOO - BUT NO MORE - I GET REX OIL IN MY FOOD NOW

REX OIL SUPPLIES UNSATURATED FATS ESSENTIAL TO SKIN HEALTH

Don't let your dog suffer the agonies of eczema and the torture of itchy, scaly skin that comes with this disease. Instead, add a few drops of REX Wheat Germ Oil to his food daily. REX Oil is over 50% unsaturated fats, the skin vitamins that promote healthy skin and coats of excellent bloom, sleek, glossy and free of dandruff or scale. Dog foods are apt to lack unsaturated fats, so take no chances. Add it yourself by dropping a few drops of REX Oil on the food each day. It tastes good to dogs and results show quickly.

REX OIL ENDS BREEDING TROUBLES

For more than ten years Rex Wheat Germ Oil has been proving its value in helping organically right dogs overcome slowness to mate, absence of heat and similar breeding troubles. Rex Oil feeding results in bigger and stronger litters.

REFUGEE PETS SWARM OVER R.C.A.F. AIRFIELD

Canadian airmen are noted for acquiring pets and mascots. But if many more refugees from shell-blasted farms arrive at a certain R.C.A.F. Typhoon fighter-bomber airfield in Normandy, the pilots will be in danger of becoming out-numbered by their pets, according to a despatch in Wings Abroad, R.C.A.F. newspaper overseas.

The situation has developed from a small beginning — a baby billy goat which F.O. William Hutchinson, Toronto, found wandering around in a barn where four other kids, the mother, and several horses had been killed by a shell-burst.

Now, at least two dogs, a duck, a rabbit and a hen with no tail, as well as "Butch" the goat, cluck, speak and frolic between the legs of the pilots as they chat in the mess. Outside, the calves munch at the grass around the tent, and three pigs—one shell-shocked—are fed from scraps. Near by also grazes a fine saddle-horse, found by Flt. Lt. P. A. "Paddy" Hayes, Skibbereen, Cork.

Latest addition to the growing guest-list is a white nanny goat, which Flt. Lt. Cecil Langille, Wolfville, N.S., found licking the taps of a broken bathtub in the ruins of a house in a village near the front. He reports gleefully that she is regularly providing milk for his morning coffee.

Complaints are beginning to be heard over the antics of F.O. Hutchinson's goat. Several pilots have reported that "Butch" browses into the tents and chews the legs of their trousers.

"Funny thing about that goat," F.O. Hutchinson observed. "He never seems to want anything to drink. He won't drink water, or beer or milk or anything. He just gets lonely at night when nobody is at the mess, and that's why he wanders around. He's just friendly, likes the boys you know."

A pilot asked: "Say, Hutch, what are you going to call the rabbit?" F.O. Hutchinson replied: "I don't think I'll call him anything. We'll be eating him shortly, I expect."

"SMOKEY" SCORES AGAIN

Four German airmen who escaped from the prisoner of war hostel near Magrath shortly before midnight Wednesday watched a trained Royal Canadian Mounted Police dog strain at his leash towards them, decided that their dash for freedom and the United States was over and they humbly walked out of a clump of brush with their hands high in the air and surrendered to a lone policeman.

They were taken into custody by Constable G. H. Hacking of the Taber detachment of the R.C.M.P., in the vicinity of Del Bonita and only about four miles from the international border at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon after travelling about 40 miles southward from the hostel.

The men—Willy Schindler, aged 26; Walter Brawn, 26; Alfred Muschiol, 23; and Hans George Shute, 26 — were brought here during the evening and lodged in the cells at R.C.M.P. headquarters. They are still in custody of police while consideration is being given to the possibility of charging them with theft of an automobile, in which they fled the Magrath district.

Each of the men was fully garbed in civilian clothing and had discarded his prisoner of war uniform, leading police to believe that the escape was well planned. The men also had a detailed map of this region.

Third Break

Authorities explained today that the escape of Schulte was his third break for freedom.

The quartette was missing Thursday morning when the count was taken at 7.30. It was learned today that they escaped just before midnight. About an hour earlier a car owned by a farmer named Jacobs near the Magrath hostel was discovered missing.

An alarm was promptly sounded and search parties of soldiers and police began to scour Southern Alberta. By the time police were notified of the escape the Germans had a lead of at least eight and a half hours.

They discovered the missing car on the McIntyre ranch lease about 20 miles south of Magrath.

Constable Hacking and his dog "Smokey" and Constable S. M. Slinn of the Taber detachment joined in the search.

As they examined the abandoned car and prepared to have the dog pick up the scent, police learned that the Germans had anticipated the use of dogs in the search. They had scattered about a pound and a half of pepper about the car.

Pick Up Scent

The dog was guarded against the pepper and picked up the scent further south as the Taber patrol scoured the region.

Constable Hacking and his dog followed the scent while Constable Slinn angled off. For more than a mile and three-quarters the highly-trained dog ran along with his nose close to the ground and along the trail of the Germans.

As "Smokey" reached the north bank of the Milk River the trail became "hot" and the dog quickened his pace and strained at the leash with all his strength. He was pulling his master towards a clump of brush about 25 yards away when four men meekly walked out of the clump with their hands in the air. They willingly surrendered.

The recapture added another remarkable feat to the fine record of the marvellous dog, explained Inspector E. D. Fryett, officer commanding the Lethbridge subdivision of the R.C.M.P.

OCTOBER

We regret that circumstances beyond our control prevented the publication of the working breeds in the September issue.

These standards, together with the popular TOY breeds will be in the OCTOBER ISSUE. As that issue contains also the Nomination forms and complete list of members of the Canadian Kennel Club, it will be in demand.

Reserve advertising space early.

The Canadian Kennel Club, Incorporated

From the office of the Secretary-Treasurer

The meeting of the Board of Directors of the Canadian Kennel Club, Inc., held on July 6th was reconvened on July 21st, at 3.00 p.m., in the Club's offices, 25 Melinda Street, Toronto. In the absence of the President the Vice-President, Mr. Walter H. Reeves, presided. Directors present included: Mrs. E. Brown, Miss A. Elsie Mayhew, W. P. Dudgeon, Wm. McDerment, and Captain H. Dudley-Waters, M.C.

Before commencing with the business on the Agenda for the meeting the following resolution was moved by Mr. Gudgeon, seconded by Miss Mayhew and unanimously carried:

"That the minutes of the meeting held on Thursday, July 6th, be reviewed."

It was reported that a member of the Board of Directors had received a circular which had been prepared by Mrs. Phyllis Robson and mailed to members of the Canadian Kennel Club.

Captain Waters received permission from the President to rise to a point of privilege in respect to this particular circular sent out by Mrs. Robson to the members of the Canadian Kennel Club and which he was given to understand was mailed in Toronto. The following position was taken by Capt. Waters:

"I want to protest against the untrue and libellous statement in a circular sent out by Mrs. Phyllis Robson wherein she states that Mrs. Brown and myself withheld the publication of a report of the banquet given in her honour. I want it understood beyond question that I have never even seen the letter or the article in question. I should be glad, therefore, if Mrs. Robson would be so kind as to let me know the name of her Solicitor in Toronto."

Letter From Age Publications Limited

A letter from the Age Publications Limited was read advising that it was necessary to adjust their quotations for the printing and mailing of Dogs In Canada.

Comments in respect to this letter were read from Messrs. Pym and Rooney, however, after discussion, the Secretary was instructed to secure quotations from competitive printing firms.

The Board discussed the volume of work to be accomplished by the office staff and the following resolution was moved by Miss Mayhew, seconded by Mrs. Brown, and unanimously carried:

"That in view of the resolution passed by the Dominion-wide Board in February that all matters coming before the Ontario Board must be in the hands of Officers and Directors outside of the Province of Ontario in sufficient time for them to pass their opinion on same, it becomes necessary to engage additional help and the Secretary is hereby instructed to engage the

Letter From Mr. Alec Gostick

A letter from Mr. Alec Gostick was read in respect to the appointment of the Publications Committee, after which the following resolution was moved by Mr. Gudgeon, seconded by Miss Mayhew, and unanimously carried:

"That the Secretary advise Mr. Gostick that his letter was read to the Directors and the contents noted."

Letter From Mrs. Phyllis Robson

The Secretary read a letter of resignation as a member of the Canadian Kennel Club from Mrs. Phyllis Robson. Comments in respect to this letter from Messrs. Pym and Rooney were read and after discussion it was agreed that the letter be acknowledged and Mrs. Robson advised that no monies are refunded in respect to membership, however, at the end of the year her membership in the Canadian Kennel Club will automatically lapse.

Letter From Ottawa Kennel Club

A letter from the President of the Ottawa Kennel Club was read in reply to our letter re an advertisement appearing on behalf of Canadian Dogs in the catalogue for the recent show held by the Ottawa Kennel Club.

After discussion the Secretary was instructed to acknowledge Mr. Plant's letter advising him that same had been referred to the Board of Directors and thank him for his courtesy in replying. Copy of Letter From the American

Kennel Club to the Canadian National Beagle Club

In view of the recent correspondence and request made by the Frontier Beagle Club, the Secretary referred a copy of a letter received at this office from the American Kennel Club and addressed to Mr. Frank L. Petersnarck, Secretary of the Canadian National Beagle Club, to the Board for their information. No action was taken.

Passing on Applications for Show Dates and Judges

The following applications for show dates and selected judges were considered by the Board:

September 4th—Medicine Hat Kennel Club.

September 2nd or 4th—Vancouver Exhibition Association and British Columbia Fox Terrier Association (Specialty Show).

September 11th—Edmonton Dog Fanciers' Club.

October 14th—Quebec Kennel Club.
After discussion it was moved by Mr. Gudgeon, seconded by Mr. McDerment and unanimously carried:

"That the above applications for show dates be granted and selection of judges approved."

Policy of "Dogs in Canada"

Since the Publications Committee had resigned at the meeting of the Board held on July 6th the proposed policy of Dogs In Canada as drawn up by that Committee, and which had been referred to the Board at its meeting held on Thursday, June 8th, when it was agreed that the policy would be adopted in principle and ratified at this meeting was not discussed further. However, the following resolution was moved by Capt. Waters, seconded by Mrs. Brown, and unanimously carried:

"That the proposed policy of Dogs In Canada as drawn up by Publications Committee appointed at the meeting of the Board of Directors on May 11th, be published in the minutes of this meeting."

Following is the policy:

"It is the understanding of the Committee that the magazine is intended to promote the well being of the C.K.C. as harmoniously as possible; that it should be a medium for conveying to its members the business of the Club, reporting the wins of the C.K.C. shows as fully as possible, and to carry from time to time articles of general interest to its members as a whole, and not for the self-interest or glorification of any person or club; that its advertising matter shall not carry anything of an objectionable character and shall not be subject to doubt.

We feel that the magazine should be able to stand by its advertisements (within reason) without in any way guaranteeing the same. Our object is to make the magazine as interesting as possible without raising any contentious or objectionable discussions.

We have laid down the following principles to be followed:

1. That no article of a contentious or controversial nature, or anything that appears to be at all libellous shall be accepted for publication.

2. Letters to the editor must not contain inferences or innuendos, but if any complaint or charge is intended it must be laid as such, and responsibility accepted by the party writing any such letter.

3. The editor shall not mention letters in the editorial columns.

4. The editor shall have the right to refuse for publication any article which may be construed as stale, or which may have been previously used in some other form.

On motion of Director W. P. Gudgeon the meeting adjourned at 5.30 p.m. to be reconvened at 6.30 p.m.

President W. J. Risewick presided at the evening session of the meeting.

Memorial for the Late Mr. J. D. Strachan

This matter was again reviewed, and the President agreed to supply Mr. Scott Carter with the proper wording for the Memorial.

The meeting adjourned at 10.15 p.m.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of The Canadian Kennel Club, Inc., was held in the Board Room of the Club's offices, 25 Melinda Street, Toronto, on Thursday, August 10th, 1944, at 6.00 p.m. The President, W. J. Risewick, presided. Officers and Directors present included: Walter H. Reeves, Mrs. E. Brown, Miss A. Elsie Mayhew, W. P. Gudgeon and Captain H. Dudley-Waters, M.C.

Adoption of Minutes

It was moved by Mr. Gudgeon, seconded by Mr. Reeves and unanimously carried:

"That the minutes of the meetings held on July 6th and 21st be approved as read with the proviso that anything arising out of the minutes would be discussed later in the meeting."

Mr. A. K. Butler being in attendance he was invited to the Board Room when the Secretary read Mr. Butler's letter of July 3rd, our reply of July 31st and Mr. Butler's letter of August 1st. The Board agreed that Mr. E. S. McKay be also invited to the Board Room. At this time Mr. Butler suggested that the resolution passed at the Annual General Meeting in respect to a full report of the minutes being published in Dogs In Canada was not being carried out, and he was asked to give any evidence he might have of any minute being approved for publication by the Solicitor, but which had not been published. After considerable discussion the Board advised that if Messrs. Butler and McKay wished to review the minute book at any time, they were at liberty to do so. They suggested they would go into this matter at a later date and left the Board Room.

Discussion arose re a portion of the minutes of the meeting of July 21st, setting forth Captain Waters' position in respect to the circular sent out by Mrs. Phyllis Robson, and which Captain Waters wished published, but had not been approved for publication by the Solicitor.

At this time Captain Waters retired from the meeting.

Report of Progressive Kennel Club Re J. P. Sheridan's Protest

A letter was read from Mr. Clarence M. Stevens, Secretary-Treasurer of the Progressive Kennel Club of Canada, advising that Mr. Sheridan's protest had been sustained by that Club. After discussion the following resolution was moved by Miss Mayhew, seconded by Mrs. Brown and unanimously carried:

"Having gone on record as disapproving of the practice of allowing dogs to be kept in boxes when same came before the Kennel Club two years ago, I now move that the action of the Progressive Kennel Club be endorsed and the wins of the following dogs be cancelled: Cocker Spaniels, Bar-Nan Showman's Roderic, Nonquitt Nobadeer, Whirlaway of Irolita."

It was moved by Mr. Reeves and seconded by Mr. Gudgeon and unanimously carried:

"That the awards of Best of Breed, Best in Sporting Group and Best in Show be considered void on account of the now winning Cocker never having met the dogs in the Sporting Group, or the five dogs competing for Best in Show."

Vice-President Pym approved of the action taken by the Progressive Kennel Club and suggested that further action should be taken against the offending handler, not the owner of the dogs in question. Director Ryder wished to be recorded as not having expressed an opinion on this matter.

Directors Matheson, Saunders, Semple, Gostick and Rooney did not submit comments.

Letter From Mr. R. W. Schelling

Correspondence from Mr. Robert W. Schelling was read in which he appealed the decision of the Progressive Kennel Club in regard to his protest. The protest being that while the Boston Terrier No. 307, "Saints Rest Ace's Jezabelle", owned by Mr. Schelling, was placed second to dog No. 249, "Paddy's Easter Model", which was eventually awarded Winners Bitch, thus entitling No. 307 to compete for Reserve Winners, this privilege was not allowed.

After discussion it was moved by Miss Mayhew, seconded by Mr. Gudgeon and unanimously carried:

"That Mr. Schelling's protest regarding the awarding of the Reserve Winners ribbon in Bostons at the Progressive Kennel Club Show be upheld."

Vice-President Walter H. Reeves, being in attendance and who judged this breed at the show, explained that he awarded the ribbons having full knowledge of the dogs competing.

Letter From Mr. R. G. T. Hitchman

A letter was read from Mr. R. G. T. Hitchman in respect to the registration of the kennel name "Middle Stone". After discussion the Board agreed with Mr. Hitchman's suggestion and if this was not satisfactory that the fee of $5.00 be refunded to the applicant.

Second Vice-President Pym was also in favor of this arrangement. The Secretary read Mr. Ryder's comments at this time suggesting that a hyphen be used between the two words.

Letter From John Milner

The Secretary read a letter from Mr. John Milner presenting to the Canadian Kennel Club a picture of the Collie, Ch. Corona Premier, and which Collie was bred by himself and considered to be the most typical specimen of the breed to date. The Secretary was instructed to communicate with Mr. Milner and thank him for the beautiful picture which will be displayed in the Club's offices.

It was moved by Mr. Gudgeon, seconded by Mrs. Brown and unanimously carried:

"That the statement of general accounts for July as presented be paid."

The statement of advertising discounts was endorsed.

Letter From Mrs. E. Brown

The Secretary read a letter from Director Mrs. Brown and which she requested appear in the minutes of this meeting. To this the Board agreed. Following is Mrs. Brown's letter:

"To the Officers and Directors of the Canadian Kennel Club, Inc., 25 Melinda Street,
Toronto, Ont.
Miss Mayhew and Gentlemen:
Re: The Swan Song by Mrs. P. Robson.

Herein are contained a few remarks in answer to the above.

I fail to see that Mrs. Robson could blame certain C.K.C. Directors for the stand they took in the so-called Palmer fiasco. Any fiasco there was, was undoubtedly caused by Mrs. Robson as Editor allowing certain letters to be published in Dogs In Canada, so that reason does not hold water for being one of the reasons for her resignation.

Also Mrs. Robson, who sought the position as Editor, her having called upon Mr. Risewick many times previously to her being engaged, and may I state here Mrs. Robson was asked by the President what salary would she expect for her work as Editor and Mrs. Robson offered to come for $15.00 (Fifteen Dollars) per week, and knowing an editor would soon be needed Mrs. Robson was engaged at the sum of $25.00 per week and 10 per cent on all new advertising. Mrs. Robson said how grateful she was for the offer of the higher salary, and I must say at this late date Mrs. Robson has shown her gratitude in rather a strange manner.

As Mrs. Robson started her duties early in January of 1943, and Mr. Brown did not leave the C.K.C. till the latter part of May, 1943, Mrs. Robson had every opportunity of seeing what was required of her as the Editor of the magazine. No more was expected of her than those who had acted as Editor, and in some cases less, because she had no Secretarial or Treasurer's duties.

If it was necessary for Mrs. Robson to have to put in fifteen to sixteen hours daily how on earth could Mrs. Robson find time to solicit advertising and write editorials for her English magazine.

I must state here so far as Dogs In Canada was concerned there were great improvements in it, and yet why shouldn't there be. As Editor she had no other worries concerning the business of the C.K.C. and so was able to give her time to the magazine.

The so-called libellous letter was not sent to the Editor, but to the Board and after a lengthy discussion it was agreed to publish same; Mr. Strachan going on record that it should not be published. Miss Mayhew said the letter was no worse than some of the other letters, but did not favor it being printed and hoping thereby to stop this contentious affair.

All other officers voted for the publishing. Mr. Risewick did not vote. One thing should be explained: all business done at your Board Meeting is turned over to Mr. Wilkinson, the Club's legal adviser, and whatever his opinion is regarding all the business transacted, we have never differed with him in what he considered was right or wrong. It is unfortunate this letter was not given to Mr. Wilkinson for his attention, as is the usual procedure.

As one of the Publications Committee for 1943, I did not see Mrs. Robson's letter that was published in the Christmas issue. I was ill and not able to go down and see what Mrs. Robson had for the "Voice of the People". To be brief I asked Mr. Strachan at the December meeting, did he know of Mrs. Robson's letter. He said "Yes". I asked did he approve of it. "No" was the answer, and Mr. Strachan then went on to say he had advised Mrs. Robson not to publish the letter, but that if she persisted in doing so there would be only one course left for her to do, and that was to resign.

It is the general supposition of most members that the Publications Committee had the last word as to what or what should not appear in the magazine. This Committee was formed solely to decide what or what should not go in 'The Voice of the People', and did not have any say or take any other part in the publishing of the magazine.

The 'Swan Song' was withdrawn from the magazine by Mr. Risewick. This he did because he felt it was in the best interests of all concerned. At the Board Meeting following the President brought the matter up and we all agreed he had done the right thing.

The Banquet and Presentation.

Some notes were written in a previous issue and this we considered covered the matter. All agreed it was not necessary to publish anything further, considering Mrs. Robson's action in wanting the 'Swan Song' published.

The so-called 'libellous letter', I have already drawn to your attention in another letter. There is much more could be said, but I feel I have said something that might help clarify what has been a miserable affair.

I am not apologizing to anyone for whatever stand I have taken or what I have said, because I have been more fully aware of many circumstances dealing with past events, and so hoping this may clear matters up and hoping better spirits may prevail among us.

I am yours very truly,

(Signed) Mrs. Ellen Brown."

Best American Cocker in Show — raised exclusively on GRO-PUP!

Mr. Robert Simpson breeder of "Gloria" and owner famous "Of Isla" Kennels, Winnipeg, Man., writes:

"Gloria has been raised exclusively on "GRO-PUP" Meal! She has developed into a splendid puppy with strong, sound bones and a magnificent coat. In a recent show she was awarded Best American Cocker in Show and went on to win Reserve Best Dog in Show. In another show, a few days later, she was again awarded Best Parti-Color Cocker in Show. We will be pleased to give any dog owner the benefit of our experience with GRO-PUP."

Here's why so many owners, breeders and nutrition experts agree on GRO-PUP.

GRO-PUP contains every Vitamin and Mineral dogs are known to need for growth and vigor PLUS more protein than many experts say dogs need for vital well-being (22½% protein, ⅓ animal protein, ⅔ other good protein). DOGS of all sizes and breeds love GRO-PUP . . . and thrive on it!

MONEY SAVING! One box of GRO-PUP CUBES feeds an average 20 lb. dog a week. 2 lb. packages on sale at all grocers. For kennel owners and breeders, GRO-PUP is available in 100 lb. bags in cube or meal form at feed stores.

We aim to be Big and Strong

... that's why we speak for GAINES,
the Complete Meal

YOUNG OR OLD, all breeds of dogs thrive on GAINES, the nation's most popular dog food. GAINES is the Complete Meal, containing meat meal, cereals, milk nutrients, vegetables, minerals and vitamins A, B₁ B₂, B₆, D, E, pantothenate and niacin—everything needed to nourish dogs completely. As prize-dog breeders know, this balanced formula has been successful for 14 years in helping to make glossy coats and sound teeth and bones, and keep dogs in vigorous health.

FIRST AND LAST, dogs like GAINES. 9 out of 10 like it at first taste—and they don't tire of it. That's one of many reasons why breeders have helped to make GAINES the largest-selling dog food in America. It's easy to prepare—merely add water, stir and feed. It's definitely economical. It's available in 2-lb., 5-lb. and 50-lb. bags.
