NOTICE

SUBJECT: Proposed New Standard for the Yorkshire Terrier.

NOTICE is hereby given that at its annual meeting commencing on February 21, 1968, the Board of Directors of The Canadian Kennel Club will consider a proposed new standard (as outlined hereunder) for the Yorkshire Terrier.

All persons and clubs having reason to be interested in this proposed new standard are invited to submit their comments for the consideration of the Board. All such comments must reach the Secretary, The Canadian Kennel Club, 1173 Bay Street, Toronto 5, Ontario, on or before January 31, 1968.

PROPOSED NEW STANDARD FOR THE YORKSHIRE TERRIER

ORIGIN AND PURPOSE:-

Making its first appearance in British shows in 1861 and recognized by the English Kennel Club under the Yorkshire Terrier name 1886, the origin of the Yorkshire Terrier has not been definitely established. Although it could well carry several Terrier breed crosses, two breeds are generally credited with being the dominant foundation stock. Of primary importance in development, credit is generally given to the Skye Terrier while coloring, it is suggested, came from crosses to the Manchester Terrier. The Dandie Dinmont and the Maltese are two other terrier breeds which may well have had a share in making the Yorkshire Terrier the attractive little dog it is today. While today the Yorkshire Terrier is primarily a pet in the home there is every reason to believe that before being bred down to its present diminutive size and before the development of the long, flowing coat the Yorkshire was a real working terrier for the instinct of a working terrier is still strongly evident in the majority of specimens of today.

GENERAL APPEARANCE:-

The appearance of the Yorkshire Terrier is that of a long-haired Toy Terrier, alert and confident with a flowing dark steel blue and tan coat. The coat is parted on the face and from the base of the skull to the end of the tail. It hangs evenly and quite straight down each side of the body. Although a toy, it gives the appearance of vigor and self importance, partly due to a neat, compact, well proportioned body and partly to a high head carriage that makes it apparent the dog is aware of and interested in those things going on around it.

TEMPERAMENT:-

It should be remembered that the dominant Yorkshire Terrier's ancestors are dogs that today are shown in the Terrier Group. Because of that, the Yorkshire Terrier should have true terrier character. It should be "cocky" and sure of itself. It should be aware of things going on around it. It should be interested in those things, and a degree of aggressiveness, particularly in a show ring towards other and larger dogs is not out of character.

SIZE:-

Weight should not exceed seven pounds, with ideal specimens running from three and a half to five pounds, give or take a few ounces.

COAT:-

Quality, texture and quantity of coat are of prime importance. Hair is glossy, fine and silky in texture. Coat on the body is moderately long and straight. It should neither be wavy nor should it stand out from the body. It may be trimmed to floor length to give ease of movement and a neater appearance if desired. The fall on the head is long, tied with one bow in the center of the head or parted in the middle and tied with two. Hair on the muzzle is very long. Hair should be trimmed short on tips of ears and may be trimmed on feet to give them a neat appearance.

COLORS:-

The proper color of a Yorkshire Terrier is a combination of dark steel blue and a rich, clear, golden tan. Neither sky blue nor silver blue is correct and the tan should be clear, not interspersed with black. However, as Yorkshire Terrier puppies are born black, with some indication of tan, these desirable colors are not always attained until the dog reaches adulthood. Up to adulthood, the blue may be more black and there may be sootiness in the tan. However, as an adult, the color definition outlined above should be present as this is of great importance. As an adult dog, the following color requirements apply:-

BLUE - The dark steel blue extends over the body from the back of the neck to the root of the tail. The hair on the tail is a darker blue especially towards the end. There should be no mingling of fawn or bronze colored hair with the steel blue.

TAN - The tan, which is darker at the roots than in the middle and shading to a still lighter tan at the tips should, at adulthood, carry no intermingling of sooty or black hairs. It provides a rich, golden tan headfall that is deeper in color at the sides of the head, on the ears and the muzzle than on the skull. This tan should not extend down the back of the neck. This same rich tan is found on the legs and chest, not above the elbows on the forelegs, nor above the stifles on the rear legs.

HEAD:-

The skull of the Yorkshire Terrier should not be wide and should be rather flat on top and not too prominent. The muzzle is not long, but should have depth. The nose should be black. Either a scissors or level bite is admissible with good, strong terrier teeth, in relation to the Yorkshire's size, a characteristic. The eyes are medium in size, looking directly forward. Unless they are sparkling and dark in color with a sharp, intelligent look, much of the alert, Yorkshire expression will be lost. The ears, set well up on the skull and not too far apart should be small, V-shaped and carried erect. The leather of the ear should not be too heavy as this can result in dropped or pendant ears.

NECK:-

As stated previously, the Yorkshire Terrier has a high head carriage. This calls for a fairly good length of neck. However, this length of neck should not result in the appearance of a head carried on a broomstick and consequently the neck should be proportionately strong and should blend properly into the body structure.

FOREQUARTERS:-

The shoulder blade of the Yorkshire Terrier should lie close to the line of the body with sufficient angulation with the upper arm so that in moving the dog does not appear stilted. Standing, the forelegs will then be nicely under the body. Viewed from either the front or the side, the forelegs should appear straight. The elbows should lie close to the body and should turn neither in nor out while stationary or while moving. The feet should be round with black toenails. Dew claws, if present at birth, may be removed.

BODY:-

The general body appearance is comparatively short and compact. The top line should be level, neither roached nor high stationed behind. The chest should be reasonably deep, to about the line of the elbows and the rib structure such that there is a gradual slope back to the loins. There should be no pronounced tuck up of the abdomen and the croup should be level resulting in the tail, docked to medium length, being carried slightly higher than the level of the back.

HINDQUARTERS:-

The pelvic or hip bone and the upper and lower thighs should all meet at an angle sufficient to insure strong, free movement behind. Although a toy, the Yorkshire is an active dog and should be sufficiently well muscled to allow this activity. The thighs should not be slab-sided. There should be a medium bend of stifle and, viewed from behind, the rear legs should be straight. Feet, as in the forequarters, are round with black toenails and dew claws are generally removed.

TAIL:-

As previously stated the tail, docked to a medium length and carrying the long, silky hair characteristic of the breed, is carried at a level slightly above the level of the back.

GAIT:-

The fact of being a toy should not excuse poor movement, and the Yorkshire Terrier should move truly, both in the rear and in front. In the rear, there should be the impression of drive, proportionate to the size of the dog and in front there should be no paddling or turning out of elbows.

FAULTS:-

Any serious deviation from the standard should, of course, be taken into account when judging the Yorkshire Terrier. A primary consideration however, is coat and color. The requirements are set out fully above. It is emphasized that silver or sky blue is not the correct color. It is a dark steel blue. The importance of the description of the tan should also be kept in mind, but it is important to remember that Yorkshire puppies are born black and that the color may not break nor the tans become clearly defined until adulthood. Allowances, therefore, should be made in this field for puppies. Wavy coats or coats standing out from the body are wrong and should be penalized. The topline should be particularly noted in view of the requirement for a level back and in judging the body, shelliness is definitely undesirable. Importance should be given to ear placement and carriage and deviation from the description in the standard should be heavily penalized.

DISQUALIFICATIONS:-

None, but dogs weighing more than seven pounds or with dropped or pendant ears should be given little consideration.
