How you move your dog can make the difference between a win or a loss

At this time of year when exhibitors are refurbishing the tack box and preparing new hopefuls for the show ring they tend to pay more attention to getting a dog into the right coat than they do to learning how to move it correctly. And that is one reason why many beautifully groomed, every-hair-in-the-right-place dogs never earn the right to be included in Dogs in Canada's Honour Roll.

Knowing how to move a dog is every bit as important as knowing how to groom it. Every dog has a gaiting speed at which it looks its best and it is the handler's job to find out what that speed is. The pair should move like a smoothly coordinated dance team with the dog, not the handler, setting the pace. But, being adaptable, the dog will measure his pace to suit the handler. For example, if the handler moves with a choppy stride, his dog will copy him. Up and down will go that top-line.

To prove the point, take a few minutes at ringside and watch how the dogs imitate their handlers. The slow, ponderous, heavy-moving type will have anything but a wide-awake looking dog in tow. On the other end of the scale there will be the speed artists — flying around the ring with toy dogs breaking into a gallop as they try to catch up.

And check the footwear on the handlers. While no dog can quite mimic the handler trying to balance atop a pair of platform soles or high heels, he'll do his best. Nor can a handler ever get the feel of his dog's gait if he himself is not sure-footed.

And watch the position of the leads. A ground. Loose and easy does it. One very successful lady handler was so in tune with one of her dogs she showed it on a barely visible, fine silk thread. She had the dancer's sense of timing and always found her exhibit's best gait and used it with tremendous success.

Not everyone is endowed with such a perfect sense of timing but it can be a learned skill. Getting the right feel is what it's all about. Seldom does a puppy gait with the smoothness of an adult. But that's no reason to be heavy handed and possibly wreck his show future. Nor can a dog be expected to give its best the first few times he's in the show ring. But once show nerves have settled down, there comes a magic moment when a handler feels at one with his dog. When there seems to be a changing of gears, the dog's body drops ever so slightly, the head moves a shade forward and he strikes out with reach and drive. It's almost as though he was telling his handler: 'By George, I think you've got it.' Knowing when that moment comes is part of the sixth sense that turns amateurs into pros.

April promises to be the largest, most exciting issue we've produced in our 25 years of publishing Dogs in Canada. Well over 200 pages will focus on illustrated standards, origin and development of the standards, pictorial gallery of judges, what to look for in a recreational vehicle and much, much more. Cover story

Roddy was born in England and was registered by Mr. H. Lambert of the Jenmist Kennels who later sold him as a show prospect to Stafford Somerfield. At the tender age of six months, 'Roddy' was Best Puppy in Show under Joe Cartledge. This was quickly followed by three open Bests in Show. "Roddy's" career had started and he was destined to become one of the best Sealy's of his time. British judge Joe Cartledge said that, along with other outstanding Sealyhams the young fellow was in there pitching like they were in the days of Mrs. Cora Charters, Mrs. Betty Bowler and Mr. Arthur Wade. Somerfield's Roderick of Jenmist finished the year in England Top Terrier and second Top Dog All Breeds.

A change was to come into 'Roddy's' life. While on a trip to England, George Ward saw him and persuaded Stafford Somerfield to let him go to America. 'Roddy' was to become an 'emigrant' terrier. He left his home, Stafford Somerfield and John Oulton (his handler) and went to the States where he was handled exclusively by George Ward, for Michael and Mrs. Florence Weissman of N.Y.

'Roddy' won three Bests in Show on his way to his American title. After a brief absence from the show ring, 'Roddy' came back as a Special to win many Bests in Show and groups, placing in the Top Ten. At this time we sent our imported Ch. Polrose Polyanthus to be bred to 'Roddy' and in due time there were five beautiful pups, two of which we kept and who later became champions. 'Roddy' is also the sire of Eng. Ch. Such a Surprise of Sealaw, who is one of England's top terriers. 'Roddy's' background is also excellent, as he is sired by the Norwegian Champion Jenmist Julian ex Manorbier Melody Maiden. Consequently, Lou and I realized the potential in this terrier.

About a year later we were absolutely delighted to be able to acquire this lovely Sealy and bring him to Canada, so once again 'Roddy' was to become an 'emigrant' terrier. He loves our Canadian winter — romping in the snow and brisk walks down the country road by the Credit River near our home.

The English and American Champion Roderick of Jenmist stands at stud at 'Wirehill' and will be shown at selected shows in Canada. We are proud to own such a great dog, of whom one judge wrote: "TO GIVE HIS MANY ATTRIBUTES WOULD BE TO REITERATE THE STANDARD".

Shelties score

Congratulations on such a fine new format for Dogs in Canada. It is such a pleasure to read. Also, storing back copies will be much easier than in the past.

I was interested that your new column, Stateside, had a feature on the Central New York K.C. show and the obedience trials held in conjunction with that show. You might like to know that my two Shetland Sheepdogs, owner-handled, did something rather unusual at that show. One, Ch. (Can. & Am.) Delamantha's Midday Sun U.D., Am. CDX went Best of Breed over top competition in the conformation ring. My other Sheltie, Delamantha's Fair Day, Am. & Can. CDX was highest scoring Sheltie in Trial with a 197 in Open A. In other words, Ch. Midday Sun was best Sheltie in Show, and Fair Day was best Sheltie in Trial. Quite a record for Canadian Shelties!

Charter to England

Congratulations on the new look. It is a really good looking magazine. The excellent articles by Max Riddle, Lilah Lymburner and 'Bumpy' Lewis on sporting dogs were a great addition. As a sporting dog breeder I share their opinions but regret we cannot now in most cases have the dual purpose dogs.

I think probably the Irish Water Spaniel is capable of being used in the field and shown with a minimum of problems re coat and condition. I like dogs lean and well muscled, able to work. For this reason, I intend to devote my breeding entirely to that breed.

Enclosed is the latest information on the charter trip to Britain I am planning to escort this summer. It includes the Windsor show, one of Britain's most attractive shows, Peterborough show, an open show at Newmarket, where we once landed a loaded Lancaster in an emergency diversion, between the race track fences, and took off again.

In addition, it will include the Working Match between the Welsh Springer and I.W.S. Association members' dogs. Another good idea! These are show dogs, too.

In case anyone wonders why the cost is $501. not $499., that is the actual cost. Not padded and not run as a profit, only to promote our interest and education.

Also Martha, my friend, you are so correct re Specials. Thanks for again saying your piece.

In search of research

Our club donates the money we would normally spend on trophies to various research organizations. Due to some financial problems in 1977, the 1978 donations have been doubled to cover both years. To the Canadian Veterinary Research Trust Fund we contributed $533 for hip dysplasia and $533 for eye problems. To the College of Veterinary Medicine in Auburn, Alabama, we gave $104 for canine disc disease research.

We are seeking research projects into achalasia, deafness in Dalmatians and fading puppies syndrome, for which we are holding monies in trust. If anyone knows of such projects, please let us know. Due to the exchange rate at this time, we prefer to give to Canadian research. If we cannot locate these projects by April 30, 1979, the funds will be sent to the Canadian Veterinary Research Trust Fund.

A better obedience Top Dog system?

In reply to the letter from Nancy Murray regarding the system of selecting the Top Obedience Dogs in Canada, I must agree that people living in certain areas of Canada do have access to more trials. I have checked over the last three years and found that dogs in the Top Ten All Breeds were from Ontario, British Columbia, Newfoundland, Quebec and Alberta. Top Dogs have come twice from Ontario, twice from Alberta and once from the Maritimes.

If anyone wishes to have the Top Obedience Dog it is going to take a considerable amount of time and money. The two Top Dogs in 1977 were from Ontario, but attended trials outside of their province to attain additional points. Also, a very good dog, shown in Open and Utility, can attain a large number of points in a shorter time and in fewer trials.

I do not believe that a handicap system is feasible. If you can suggest a more equitable system that is workable, then please do.

eventually finish and become champions, but will they ever become Specials Only competition? Will their owners ever have to consider the question 'to campaign or not to campaign'?

The decision to show a dog to its championship is usually not a very difficult one. The competition is limited to members of the same breed, the goal is limited to the points, usually the exhibitors are very familiar, great fun can be had by all, and generally the overall anxiety level remains at a reasonable level as does the cost. However, as soon as the decision is made to enter the class for Specials Only, it is a whole different ballgame.

Some people enter their dog so that it will be seen by other exhibitors for potential stud services or puppy sales, others to show that they have finished that pretty puppy, and then there are those others who have decided to compete for the top honours in their breed, group, and the dog world at large. In other words, they have decided to campaign their dog or bitch. How is this decision made? Not easily, I can assure you. The implications of such a decision are enormous and unless considered thoroughly can produce a tremendous amount of heartache, anguish, debt, disillusionment with dogs, and there has been more than one recorded divorce related to such a decision. Such a horror show is not essential if the problem is faced with honesty, objectivity, careful planning, and the spirit of good sportsmanship.

No room for kennel blindness

To begin with, one must have thorough knowledge of one's breed, and be able to assess the particular dog under consideration with great honesty. Be extremely critical and obtain the opinion of other knowledgeable dog people whose thoughts you will respect. The dog is not perfect (the perfect dog has not yet been bred in any breed), but to be unaware of the faults borders on the brink of lunacy when considering the potential for campaigning. There is no room for kennel blindness at first circuit, let alone an extended period on the campaign trail. Such insecurity will be immediately communicated to the dog and he or she will respond accordingly. It is impossible to underevaluate the importance of this essential ingredient as you proceed.

Set your goals realistically according to the above assessment. The dog may be easily able to achieve top in his breed, but not in his group. Financial consideration, at this junction, cannot be denied. It is not cheap to campaign any dog. Entry fees alone will average $10. per show and that does not include travel, food, lodging, crates and other supplies. The budget required to make a dog tops in his breed will be quite different from No. 1 in the group. Estimate and budget for what you can afford and stick to it. One may have to lower one's goals, but it will pay off in the long run. Many potential great dog people have been lost from the world of dogs because they did not do this and totally overextended themselves to the point of never permitting another dog in their house again.

Who will show the dog best?

Correct presentation of the dog should go without saying. A poor dog skillfully handled will very often beat a good dog poorly handled. The paramount consideration here is who will the dog show for the best. Remember, it is a dog SHOW that you are competing in, and he must look his absolute best at that moment on that day. It is much more to your advantage to show him less frequently and show him properly. When the final tally is taken, there is no question that it is a lot cheaper to campaign a dog with a professional handler than to owner-handle. At the risk of repetition let me emphasize that who the dog shows for the best should be the deciding factor in this case. A handler that cannot win with that particular dog is a waste of money. Research carefully the handlers in your area, and remember that you are hiring them and that they will be working for you. Would you go to a physician you don't trust? Are you greater sense of accomplishment. However, as mentioned earlier, depending on one's goals it is much more expensive when considering travel expenses and time.

As well as conformation, you must consider condition of your dog. You may have the best dog in the world but unless he is in proper condition, and you are prepared to maintain that condition, do not waste your time campaigning him. In order for a dog to withstand an extensive campaign he must be in absolutely perfect health. His body must be free of all disease so that he can maintain prime weight and coat condition. He must also be healthy between the ears. A dog that is shy, too aggressive, or freaky will tire very rapidly, deteriorate physically and be unreliable — sulky dogs don't win BIS. Know your dog well and you will be better able to provide an appropriate environment for him to be campaigned under. Once again, it is a dog SHOW and you must be able to present a properly groomed example of your breed. Consult an expert in your breed regarding trimming and coat care if you are not sure. Do not be afraid to ask. There are many tricks of the trade, and dedicated old timers are well prepared to share these with truly interested novices. All dog devotees enjoy seeing a good representative of their breed properly presented — believe it or not, even the competition.

About judges

Do you think that judges fall into two classes — crooks and fools? If you do, then don't bother filling out the first entry blank, it is already a waste of money. Most judges attempt to do an honest job. Most judges consider it an honour to have your dog in the ring for their assessment. Research will assist you in knowing who to show your dog under — read carefully the

"My dog will win on his own merits, not on advertising." This is often heard if a winning dog is seen on the cover of a magazine or even inside. Advertising your dog's wins is a very controversial issue, to say the least, and you will have to come to terms with your own decision on that. However, if you do decide to advertise do so with just as much thought, care and budgeting as you have the campaign of the dog. Injudicious advertising can do more harm than good.

Why campaign?

All the above is just the tip of the iceberg when one comes to terms with the real question: Why campaign a dog?

Purebred dogs are one of the few remaining links left for man with his roots. Every CKC recognized breed was bred for a specific purpose. Nearly always, that purpose was to enhance man's chance of survival whether it be through hunting, working, guarding or pure pleasure. Mankind has progressed to the point of generally not needing dogs for a specific purpose but don't we owe our canine friends something? Because otter hunting is now illegal, should the Otterhound become extinct? Because Chinese emperors are extinct, should Pekingese be also? There are no wolves in Ireland, should there be no Irish Wolfhounds?

As more and more breeds become defrocked of their function, these loyal and faithful creatures should not be dismissed. Only through dedicated breeders and their breeding programs can survival be guaranteed and only through honest competition in our society can quality be maintained.

Silver trophies, blue, red, yellow, white, purple or even green ribbons are merely icing on the cake for the truly dedicated dog fancier. It is the responsibility of every breeder of purebred dogs to exhibit and compete with the best quality dog or bitch he or she owns in order to maintain and improve the quality of the breed that he or she loves.

Where is a champion more of a champion?

A look at the judging systems of four countries

By Joan Morden

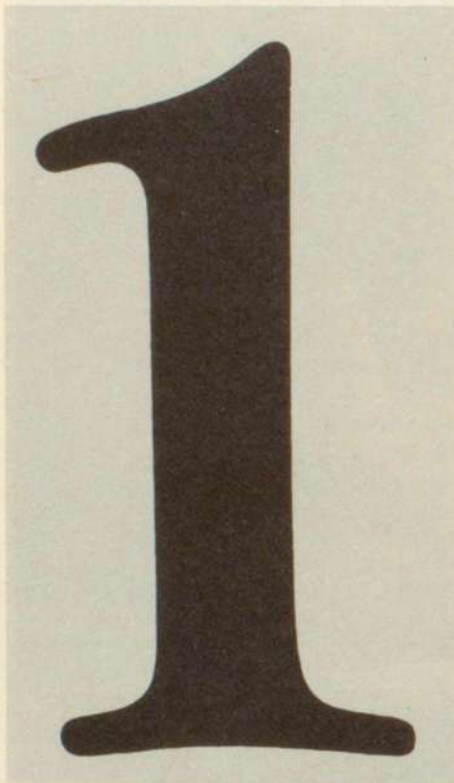

Despite the fact that Canadian bred dogs are making a name for themselves in many countries around the world, the notion prevails that Canadian championships come cheap. Not in the monetary sense of the word. Showing dogs is not a 'cheap' sport by any means. But in the sense that a Canadian championship is relatively easy to obtain. Maybe so. But champions from other countries do not always have things their own way when they are campaigned in Canada.

Most probably the reason the 'cheap' appellation persists is that The Canadian Kennel Club requirements for earning a championship are lower than they are in other countries. These are based on experience and are subject to review and change periodically. Also, different 'Scales of Points' prevail in different parts of Canada according to zoning as established by the CKC on the basis of numbers of breed entries.

The Canadian system requires that before a dog can be awarded the title of Champion it must amass a total of ten points at championship shows held under CKC regulations — these points to be won under at least three different judges. The dog must defeat at least one dog in its own breed or place in the group where five or more breeds are in competition. Part of the derision accruing to the Canadian title stems from the fact that it is possible for a dog to become a Canadian champion without ever defeating another member of its own breed.

On the face of it, this seems a system that might encourage unworthy champions. But more and more one sees awards withheld for lack of merit. And if there ever was a time when Canadian championships might be called 'cheap', that day seems to be pretty well over. Judges are reluctant to put their reputations in jeopardy by awarding championship points to dogs which, in their opinions, do not deserve a title.

The American Kennel Club system is much tighter and the title of American Champion is therefore held in higher regard. In that country, to become a champion a dog must be awarded 15 points at championship shows under at least three different judges. Each point must be earned by defeating at least one dog in its breed. And the 15-point total must include two three-point wins.

'Majors', as the three-pointers are called, are often few and far between. So finishing a dog in the U.S. can be a costly and a time consuming affair.

The Bermuda Kennel Club system strikes a happy medium between these two. To obtain a Bermuda championship title a dog must earn ten points under at least three different judges and this total must include one three-point win. The major may be won at the breed level or by placing in the group ahead of a dog which has won a major. In other words, all four group placings give a dog that has gone Winners a chance to pick up a major regardless of the competition in the breed.

The notion that Bermuda titles are easy to obtain is something of a fallacy, too. Here again the judge awards or withholds as his conscience dictates. And entries offering a major are not always available in every group. For example, at one series of shows a Miniature Poodle won the group all four days but did not qualify for his Bermuda title because no breed in the Non-Sporting Group had a three-point entry.

Generally speaking, Bermuda club members try to boost entries in at least one breed per group so that visiting winners will be able to earn that all-important major in one set of shows.

The British system makes the three described thus far pale by comparison. The requirements for an English championship have made this title universally regarded as the most prestigious of all. To become a champion in Britain a dog must be awarded three Challenge Certificates (CCs) under three different judges. But unlike the systems in effect on this side of the Atlantic where championship points are on offer in all breeds at all shows, CCs are only offered for selected breeds at most shows. These are designated by The Kennel Club according to a system based on previous entries. What's more, a CC may be offered in a breed for dogs but not for bitches and vice versa. It is quite possible to find 100 breeds entered at championship shows with CCs available to half that number. The exception to this is Crufts', where CCs are offered in both sexes in all breeds.

What makes the KC system even more difficult is that there is no Specials Only class for champions. Champions compete in the Open Class. Thus, in order to win a CC a dog must defeat all the champions in competition in its breed. When there is a top dog or two on the campaign trail it's quite possible that few champions will be made up in those dogs' breeds for a very long time.

The saving grace of the British system is an unwritten rule of sportsmanship dreamed up by the exhibitors themselves. Once a dog has been awarded a CC by a particular judge it is considered unsporting to show the same dog under the same judge at a show where CCs are on offer. Those who fail to honour this gentleman's agreement soon find themselves with few friends among the competition.

Here again, (also an unwritten rule) the exception is Crufts' which is the showplace of the British dog world. Every dog that has qualified for entry is expected to be in competition. An exhibitor showing a dog under a judge who has previously given it a CC is in no danger of finding himself friendless.

To be a top CC winner is of great significance to British exhibitors and is why dogs are advertised as winning a certain number of CCs under the same number of judges. Although Britain has a 'top dog' system, the continuing goal is to be a breed's top CC winner. That's PRESTIGE.

Another ancient breed is recognized in Canada

The Tibetan Spaniel comes out of the kimona sleeve and into the Canadian show ring By Alice Bixler Tibet, the legendary land that gave us the Lhasa Apso and Tibetan Terrier, had still one more intriguing breed up its kimona sleeve.

The diminutive Tibetan Spaniel has finally found friends in North America. Though a newcomer to Canada, the breed traces its family tree back to the days of Kublai Khan and perhaps an eon or two before then. The Khan was a Mongolian who conquered Tibet and went on to take over the Dragon Throne of China in the 13th century. The mighty monarch was also quite a dog fancier and kept many canines. True, most were used for hunting but his friend Marco Polo wrote on one visit of "little, golden-coated nimble dogs" and likened them to the lions in the Imperial menagerie. He may well have been describing the Tibetan Spaniel. Dogs of the Tibetan Spaniel type were depicted on Eastern bronzes dating from 1100 B.C. and more recently they were decorating pottery and ceramics. From the 15th century on, many paintings and jade statues show the Tibetan Spaniel as he appears today.

Their lofty position in Tibetan culture is probably the reason why the Tibetan Spaniel managed to continue unchanged through the centuries. The small, silken-coated spaniels were monastery dogs. Their keen eyesight and acute hearing made them superb sentinels for the monasteries perched high in the towering mountains of Tibet. They were the "alarm" dogs whose crisp barks warned of approaching strangers and alerted the fierce Tibetan Mastiffs who were the guard dogs.

As Prayer Dogs, they were taught to turn the Buddhist prayer wheels and often provided warmth and companionship to the lamas during their lengthy meditations.

So treasured and prized were these little dogs that they were rarely sold and only left the monasteries as gifts. Sometimes they were exchanged between monasteries. Occasionally, they were bestowed on people — and only people from society's upper levels — as four-legged thank yous for favours or generosity or as a wish for good luck.

Around the turn of the century, a number of these tiny dogs were brought to England. The British were charmed by them and interest grew. The breed prospered there, being documented in dog books of the time and appearing in shows. By the 1930s, an association was formed to promote the Tibetan breeds. A number of kennels sprang up and show classes were drawing substantial entries.

They all vanished during World War II. One prominent kennel was wiped out by an epidemic. The rest were presumed to be victims of the wartime.

When Lady Wakefield of England was residing in India, a Tibetan Trade Agent presented her with a charming little bitch named Mughliwuli. She was blessed with an abundance of personality and apparently a giant helping of "pull". When Mughliwuli was to be bred, a Maharajah sent his own chauffeured Rolls Royce to take her to Simla where she met Tashi, a male brought down from a monastery in Western Tibet just for the tryst. Now that's class.

Lt. Col. Hawkins, also stationed in India, bought a male and female from the litter, Garpon and Potala, and took them back to England when he returned in 1946. Sir Edward and Lady Wakefield also went back to England a year later, taking along a male, Lama, who was from the litter plus a bitch which they had managed to obtain, through more influential friends, directly from a monastery in Eastern Tibet. Those three littermates and the bitch, Dolma, were the foundation stock for the majority of England's present-day Tibetan Spaniels.

Despite the inbreeding, the quality of the dogs remained high and once more the Tibetan Spaniel started to ascend the ladder of popularity. In 1957, the Tibetan Spaniel Association was formed. The Kennel Club accorded the breed championship status for the first time in 1960. Now yearly registrations exceed 600 and the Tibetan Spaniel Association is a group of more than 400 members.

The resurgence of the Tibetans in England was well-timed. Communist China overran Tibet and the religious forces were one of the prime targets of the Communists. In 1959, the Dalai Lama and many others of the Buddhist faith fled across the border to India. A few of the refugees managed to bring along their revered Prayer Dogs. Some of the breed are in the Tibetan refugee camps and in the foothill villages near the border. There are a few breeders in India but since there isn't the registered pedigree system as we know it, there may be some reasonable doubt as to the purity of their lines. It's extremely doubtful that any of the breed still exist in Tibet.

Tibetan Spaniels, mostly from British stock, have found homes in other parts of the world. They are firmly established in Scandinavia and Finland. The Netherlands, France, Germany, Australia, and New Zealand all have Tibetan Spaniel residents.

Memories of the north

The long summer days and the winter nights are the same but otherwise the old North has gone.

By Larry House

In the 30s I had the good fortune to live in the North (Alaska and the Yukon) before this great country had too many roads and people. Those years were good for the people who lived there because you had to work to live. Some made a fortune, some lived from the land, some lived from others — and some became alcoholics. The folks who had the fortitude to stay were a breed of their own and their word was their bond. In the big card games where thousands changed hands every night, the ones who went broke could always borrow a thousand. No notes were needed — just a shake of the hand and the money would always be paid back. No other type survived in that era.

Our transportation then was by dog team, skis or snowshoes. I had purchased four Malamute pups from an old half-breed at Teslin Lake — a small town then — and sledded them from Teslin Lake to Taku River.

The Taku Mining Company kennel man and driver — whom everyone knew as Wahoo — was, I think, Indian; I often heard him talking to the Tulsequah Indians in their tongue. He was a great dog man and from him I learned the most important things about true working dogs: their sixth sense, and the fact that they are the only living things that have ever seen their God — us. We tend not to recognize it here, but in the North, where that lead dog has a sixth sense, he has to have absolute love and respect for both you and his work.

In my pups' early months I took them with me in the hot summer, even on skiing trips on the glaciers. They grew into big pups by the Fall. There were no veterinarians, no shots, no worm medicine, but my Indian friends knew how to use everything that nature had provided for us in medicinal roots, bark, etc. to cure some of the ills that came with heat and fleas. They also taught me about rationing food for dogs, smoking fish for them and salting down venison and bear meat. It was far from the way dogs are fed in the present day. Dogs had to have their rough coat, with two inches of undercoat and four or so of guard coat, and had to be tough to survive.

The four faithful pups I now had raised to over a year were never away from me for more than a day, so they were very attached to me. Black Joe had quite the personality, though always kept his distance from his brothers. His mask was jet black, the inside of his ears black and his tail black. The rest of him was a silver grey. He was a finer-boned dog than the others but was by far the most gifted with his sixth sense.

Ace was a strong cultas (Indian term for mean or ornery) dog and could snap a chain at the slightest provocation. I never did feel that I was fully accepted by him. I would catch him staring at me with expressionless eyes but when I'd look at him he would turn away to gaze out across the river. He was the only one who would howl while away from camp. Though he controlled the others, I left him alone. Ace was white, almost an albino.

Poker John — John, as I called him — was a grinner, smiling when you spoke to him. He was always happy, which caused him a lot of pain from being beaten up by the rest — through jealousy, I guess. He was red and white with a chest a foot wide. He had a strong character, tough, no dirty tricks, good sense and would fight for you. He knew the danger on soft ice, honey-combed, with six inches of snow on it, and would not let you on it. He had the instinct of poor ice conditions, of snow slides and avalanches off the Taku Glacier where we skied. He truly had and used his sixth sense. John was the one I could have been really close to if I had been able to have only one dog.

Joker was also a red male, slighter than John and with a docile temperament. It was an effort for him to wag his tail, which happened only at feeding time. He was the only one who would challenge you if you fed another dog first. He had to be first with everything.

I could go on and on with the detailed characteristics of each dog and, believe me, they all had quite different characters — all beautiful.

Now it was time to start getting gear for these young dogs. I ordered my first five-foot sleigh from Fairbanks — $25 F.O.B. Juneau, followed by the transportation problem from Juneau to Taku Landing, 100 miles away. The first big snowfall we (Wahoo and the company team) started, following the Tulsequah River, with my four male pups running loose for the first five to ten miles, fighting and playing.

The centre of the river was open so it was quite nerve-racking for me. Wahoo would say the good-headed dogs would know, and if I got back with only two dogs I'd have two good ones. If they ran into the open water or on thin ice, they were no good anyway.

The Indians had a curious way of culling litters. Six-week pups that were too playful or shy would be put away immediately. There was no hoping it wouldn't be shy or crazy head, which was the expression they used. Most of these litters were inbred. The Indians didn't try to trade or keep them just because a pup had big snow feet or oblique eyes. It was thought of as life or death to them. Temperament was number one.

The trip was a joy for my pups and I could snowshoe all day with no effort. After taking three days to travel 75 miles, we arrived at the end of Taku Inlet, about 20 miles from Taku Landing. We were right on the salt water, with no snow, so we unhitched and let the dogs follow with the company dogs packing. The pups followed so closely I could barely walk. The old males on the company team would kill them and quick, and the pups knew it. The hike was finished with us keeping far apart from them. At last we arrived at Taku Landing; my friend Wahoo with whip cracking to warn his dogs off each other and the lodge dogs, and my own males dominated by the smallest of them — Black Jack — who kept them close to me.

Our arrival was quite an exciting event for the dogs and for me. We were able to eat and rest in the most beautiful lodge that I had ever seen. It was here that I met Mary Joyce, the most unforgettable person I had ever met.

Mary Joyce was the owner and operator of this beautiful lodge on Taku Inlet. I was 18 at the time and really impressed. This lady was beautiful, self-confident, wealthy, with a love for the North and its people. She is the only woman I have ever met who had beautiful things for no other reason than the fact that she admired beauty.

This was evident in her dogs, too, which she used for transportation. She was guided by their performance and soundness so they could do the work they were meant for — her hobby of racing. These dogs were fed right and handled with kindness and discipline. Her teams of Siberians were known all over Alaska and the Yukon. I can still see her picture with her nine-dog team advertising Sun Valley, Idaho, in all the sports magazines. She drove her team with about eight other teams and cameramen, to be the first white woman to go from Taku Landing to Skagway.

I learned from her that her love of the North had been instantaneous. She had been an airline hostess when only nurses were able to qualify. She met and married a wealthy retired New York surgeon who owned the lodge. After his death the lodge was kept in operation by Mary Joyce. The North now had a person who could help improve the Siberian breed. No dogs were ever shipped away to be bred; Mary Joyce's dream was to try new blood to improve the Siberian.

Mary had an old Indian who had a Tahltan Dog, named after a little village south of us. These dogs were clipped to make pads for the linings of moccasins and mitts. It seems that the Indians from the far North had stolen this rare dog and had left it at Mary's lodge. Sometimes called the Hare Dog, this is the same species that has been called the Tahltan Dog and also the Tahltan Bear Dog. Mary believed that this little dog was sacred to some of the northern tribes since it was never sold or deserted like whole litters that the Indians left to die on the trail. Another of their ways was to tie them to a tree and leave them.

Indians were always a mystery to me. They cared for their dogs, but when the dogs were no longer of any use they were discarded without the slightest remorse. They felt the same way towards their own kind when they became old and not productive. The different tribes had different beliefs about such things.

Mary had some of the most beautiful teams on the coast and in central Alaska. She did not have to boast about herself or her dogs. She herself was a champion among all northerners; her dogs spoke for themselves. I'm afraid if Mary could hear and see some of the antics of sled racing — particularly the people — she would never leave her beautiful home in the wilderness.

To return to my four Malamutes, I was still too blind then to see what I'd done to them. I realized later that they were fat, spoiled and defiant of attempts to correct them.

It came time to start back with the new sleigh — to pack clothes I had bought (mukluks, wolf parka and shirts), plus food and sleeping bags and four spoiled dogs! Wahoo tied the sleigh on one side of Black Jack, who promptly lay down, so he had to put it on one of the company dogs, with grub on the opposite side to keep balance.

In the meantime, one of the fellows volunteered to take us up to the mouth of the Taku where our gear was. It was quite a sight to see these dogs being tied in a boat — screaming, howling, messing and fighting all at once. The speedboat was a 20-foot vessel which couldn't navigate the fast Taku River. On entering the river we tried to hold the boat against the ice but couldn't because the current was too swift. We drifted back to near the mouth of the Taku, landed and unpacked. All the dogs took off, so Wahoo and I took turns packing sleigh harness and all the rest. Finally my dogs and the team came up behind us and Wahoo said "No good dogs!" We made it back to the camp in good time since the sleigh dogs can trot at a slow pace for hours on end.

After January 1, 1934, I was to help Wahoo break my team, but "No hard pulling, too young," he said. To make this short, my team never pulled that sleigh, which by now had cost me about $2,000. (In the 30s that was a fortune, but Alaska was where the money was — Juneau was the Las Vegas of the North.) Wahoo could not contend with my dogs: spoiled, poor eaters, slept in cabins, and on and on. They were just no good!

The company would sell me a team, Wahoo said, but I yearned for the wag of a tail and recognition, while these company dogs would attack and kill a stranger. I was too chicken, I guess. In the end I gave my dogs to an old prospector (whose name, like mine, was Larry) plus my $2,000. sleigh and harness, and an old upright piano I played for some of the years I lived in the North.

I often think of the disservice I did to the dogs I loved the most by trying to take away the instincts of the northern dogs. They would burrow in the light snow with black eyes looking out, begging me to let them stay, or to catch a ptarmigan and eat it; to fight for survival and to give their life if they respected you. I feel a great sorrow when I see owners in the south brushing and combing out their dog's undercoat, see the longing in their dog's eyes to be free in the snow where peace and quiet reigns; to be racing or pulling a sled with the driver calling "Mush" or "Gee" or "Haw". Those Huskies are happy! Though I will say that the ones not living in the cold country have not lost their good coats and, most important of all, their personality.

I went back North after my stint in the Army. The mines, including Alaska Juneau Mine, the biggest low grade ore mine in the world, were all closed. I went back to find the lodge. The place was still there although a little run down. Now Mary had a seaplane. We flew up the Taku to Tulsequah and it was so beautiful — the river, the glacier, the flowers — but my dogs and old Larry were gone. I guess he was about 75 years old, which was old in those days. Mary told me that one cold winter he ran out of food so he poured coal oil over the cabin and shot the dogs and himself. Those pets of mine couldn't have made it alone and old Larry knew it. I still see the sparkle in their eyes. I guess they were really laughing at me!

I think Mary Joyce is gone now, too. She was a transplanted New Yorker but destiny had brought her and her knowledge of the northern dogs to the North. She knew when they were just talking, howling at the Northern Lights, or lonely. She knew all their moods.

Wahoo was strictly a driver and could break a cultas dog any time, but would never waste ten minutes on a dog with poor temperament. Neither would he give a working dog a pat on the head!

Alaska, the Yukon and the North West Territories, in the periods mentioned, were tough with plenty of good fellowship. There was no social status, no talk down to Indians or whites. The people were proud and knew a good dog on sight and had some fine teams. The mail was brought in by teams, mostly Malamutes and Siberians crossed.

The long summer days are the same, as are the winter nights, but the old North is gone.

I never again had the chance to own a team and do right by them, although I owned half a team of Siberians in the 40s at Yellowknife, strictly for racing. It never felt the same as letting my Black Jack sleep on the bunk.

I'd still like to keep one in the cabin but it would have to be a good one. Without good conformation they aren't a sleigh dog, but without a northern home — the clear sky, the calls to each other, the smile in their eyes — you don't know the joy that your breed can give.

School courses for dog skills getting closer

Curriculum being developed in Ontario by dog experts

By Dr. E. S. Gibson

In the Fall of 1977 the Private Vocational Schools Section of the Ontario Ministry of Colleges and Universities was approached by an organization requesting registration as a private vocational school to teach various courses related to the canine industry. Because no standards existed or had been developed upon which course objectives or curricula could be based the request was not granted.

As a result however, the Ministry, through John Hay and Lewis Tremlett, Superintendent and Supervisor respectively of Private Vocational Schools, approached prominent members of the canine industry in an attempt to ascertain the need for courses and training in the various facets of the industry.

From the replies it became evident that the breeding and caring of dogs was within the largest dozen industries in Canada considering it included not only the breeding, selling, training and exhibiting of dogs by a very large number of people but also the utilization of canine nutrition, veterinary and many other related services. Furthermore, the designation of Kennelman, in the Canadian Classification and Dictionary of Occupations, acknowledged the existence of a paraprofessional occupation in this field.

The decision was then made to proceed with the development of a core curriculum for studies within the canine industry to be taught in both public and private post secondary institutions in Ontario.

The procedure adopted was the same as that which has been used in developing courses for many other industries. A consultative committee of knowledgeable people, skilled in the occupation and from within the industry, was assembled to develop a core curriculum by the IN-

DECORE method.

What is INDECORE? It is an acronym for Industry Developed Core Curriculum and can be defined as a skill profile that serves as both a curriculum plan and an evaluation instrument for occupational training programs. It is graphic in nature, presenting definitions of the skills of an entire occupation on a single sheet of paper. It is, in effect, an analysis of the occupation.

The occupation is divided into general areas of competence, in this case areas such as grooming, breeding, kennel management would be examples. Each area is then analyzed to identify the individual skills it contains. The result is independent specification of each of the skills or behaviours that collectively enable an individual to perform competently in the occupation. These skills are defined in small blocks on the chart. Each block then, can serve as an independent goal for learning achievement.

By mid-1978, a committee was selected to develop this process, composed of a representative of The Canadian Kennel Club, Dogs in Canada, the executive vice-president of the Ontario Humane Society, representatives of dog breeders, training institutions, dog grooming establishments, veterinary surgeons, and the Education Research and Special Services Division of the Ministry of Agriculture.

To lead the committee in the developmental process, Leo Mitchell, an expert in the method, was provided by the Program Resources Branch of the Ministry of Colleges and Universities.

After three days deliberation late last year, the committee felt it had accomplished its mandate. It isolated what it felt were the general areas of competence required of a person wishing to enter any aspect of the canine industry. These areas of competence, not necessarily in their order of importance, were considered to be; breeding, whelping, rearing, kennel maintenance and management, nutrition, canine health, judging, training, business practices, marketing, legal, exhibiting, handling and grading. Within these general areas certain skills and performance objectives were established. There may be more, but it was generally the opinion of the members that the principal objectives were identified.

What will be the benefits of the committee's deliberation? John Hay feels that the immediate effect will be the standardization of courses related to the industry given by the public and private training institutions. The curriculum for each of the general areas must include instruction in the specific skills.

No private vocational school would be registered or allowed to operate if it did not base its curriculum content on these objectives and standards.

Mr. Hay also stated that the most far-reaching benefit could quite possibly be one of future recognition to graduates of courses based on this INDECORE study. Other organizations over the years have either developed standards or accepted standards of this nature for national recognition. They have, as a result, acquired the necessary authority to provide an accolade of professional competence to a graduate of their regimen.

It would be of great benefit to the canine industry, as well as the public, if the CKC followed the lead of other national organizations in adopting a stance of professionalism, and in so doing recognize that professionalism being acquired as the result of training based on these standards and objectives.

Eye problems in dogs

These are among the most perplexing defects affecting health

By Shaaron Sheahan

Selective breeding presents essentially two challenges. The breeder must try to select for all those desirable qualities of a particular breed of dog, while avoiding the intensification of the various defects that affect conformation or health. Among the most perplexing of the congenital and/or genetic defects affecting health are those that involve eyes.

The eye is a complex of tissues and is consequently the site of a complex of diseases. The retinal atrophy syndromes, Collie Eye, lens densities and cataracts are familiar names to most breeders. In order to contend with these eye diseases in an intelligent fashion, the breeder has to know something of the structure of the eye; how these diseases affect that structure, as well as the functioning of the individual affected; and what can be done to control against these diseases in the breeding program.

The normal eye is a globular structure, the contents of which are surrounded by three layers of tissue — the sclera (outer), the choroid (middle), and retina (inner). The sclera is the white outer shell of connective tissue that preserves the shape of the eye and serves for the attachment of muscles. The anterior (front) part of this shell forms the white of the eye. The bulge in the anterior central part is the transparent cornea. The choroid is the vascular tunic that supplies blood to the retina. It contains dark, pigmented cells to prevent the internal reflection of light. Only the posterior (back) of the eye is covered by the choroid. The anterior segment of the choroid turns in toward the centre to form the iris, that part which gives the eye its characteristic colour. In the centre of the iris is the pupil or opening that allows more or less light to penetrate to the back of the eye. Suspended behind the iris is the biconvex, transparent, crystalline lens. This moveable structure corrects incoming rays of light from objects near and far so that their images focus correctly on the retina. The retina is the thin, inner layer of tissue covering the posterior segment of the choroid. That part of the retina closest to the choroid is composed of pigmented epithelial cells that give the eye the pigmentary pattern described as the tapetal and non-tapetal zones. The layer of retinal tissues closest to the centre of the eye is transparent and composed of specialized, light-sensitive nerve cells known as rods and cones. The rod cells are sensitive to dim light and help in the detection of motion; the cone cells are sensitive to bright light and to colour (in humans). Supplying blood to the retina are the retinal vessels as well as those of the choroid. The fibres of the optic nerve spread over the posterior section of the eye and make contact with the inner nerve cells (rods and cones) of the retina. This jelly body (optic nerve) in front of the retinal layer, carries the light messages to the brain from these retinal cells for interpretation.

The dog's ability to see 'normally' is predicated on the relative soundness of all of these structures. In effect, the eye is like a good camera — it has to have a clean lens (corneal area) to be able to project the correct image back to the level of the film (retinal level). Additionally, the film must not have any holes or previous exposures to blur the image as it is transmitted back to the brain for translation. And while the dog's experience of vision is different from that of the human — despite the fact he'll never read a newspaper or need a driver's licence — he still has to have eyes that function in a fashion that is considered normal for a dog.

When the veterinary ophthalmologist evaluates the dog's eyes he is looking for the degree of change in all of these structures — the cornea, the lens, the optic nerve; changes in pigmentary patterns; changes in the blood vessels; changes that would indicate that there is a loss of any structure overlying or in these areas. Ideally, he should see through a clear cornea and clear lens to a 'retinal level' where: (a) the optic nerve is centrally located and well-formed, (b) there are robust, fairly straight major blood vessels radiating out from the optic disc area and branching with fairly robust blood vessels to the peripheral areas of the retina, the texture is salt and peppery in appearance, (d) there is good pigment, indicating that all tissue layers are present and well-formed. At the same time, he is determining the degree to which the individual dog is, or will remain functionally sighted. When he is assessing the cause of the disease, is it congenital, genetic or simply the result of some injury or infection.

Some of the diseases affecting vision in the 'corneal area' (viz. the structures at the front of the eye) are persistent pupillary membranes (P.P.M.'s), lens densities, cataracts; the Collie Eye and the various retinal atrophy syndromes are centered on the retinal area (the structures at the back of the eye). Some of these diseases are genetic; others are congenital; some are both congenital and genetic. Genetic means that the gene pool, the genetic makeup of the animal, is determined by both parents equally. Any genetic defect will be transmitted through the gene pool. Congenital refers to those defects that resulted from the abnormal pre-natal formation of tissue — something that happened to the animal before birth to cause faulty formation of tissue and as a result the defect is detectable in the newborn. Not all congenital traits are genetic. The most obvious example of this is the thalidomide babies. There are some traits that are both congenital and genetic. The Collie Eye is an example of one such congenital-genetic trait, detectable at a very early age (six or seven weeks is the usual time for initial eye exams with this syndrome). The retinal atrophy syndromes are defects that develop with age, are controlled by the gene pool in some ways but are not detectable in the neonate (breeders must often wait for years for the defect to develop and show up in an eye examination). At the present time, the retinal atrophy syndromes are generally not considered to be the result of malformation. As researchers collect more data and learn more about the various retinal atrophy syndromes, they may discover that some of these are indeed malformations. For the present, there are many questions about the various expressions of retinal atrophy — a disease that affects almost every breed of dog and various other animal species, including people.

The report given to the breeder or owner by the veterinary ophthalmologist contains a number of terms, some used interchangeably, in need of explanation. Keeping in mind the normal structure and function of the parts of the eye, these disease descriptions become more meaningful. The following are the classical symptoms of Collie Eye Syndrome or Collie Eye Anomaly and are similar to the disease entity in Shelties. Not all of these symptoms will be present in any one dog and some are more serious, functionally, than others. Hence, in evaluating the eye, the ophthalmologist will discriminate against some of these more than others in his evaluation. Where other breeds have developed eye diseases affecting the same structures, these will be discussed.

This article is an edited version of a lecture given by Dr. Gary Blanchard, Diplomate American College of Veterinary Ophthalmology, Michigan State University, at the first annual D.C.S.S.A. Eye Clinic, Toronto, November 18, 1978. The author gratefully acknowledges Dr. Blanchard's permission to use the material in this manner.

Posterior Scleral Ectasia This involves large or small areas of the scleral shell, frequently though not necessarily near the optic nerve. There is a thinning and outward pushing or cupping of the sclera. Sometimes retinal detachments can accompany this condition because the retina is subjected to some pulling at the edge of the ectasia.

Chorioretinal Hypoplasia/Chorioretinal Change (C.R.C.) This condition indicates that the retina, the underlying pigmentary areas, and in many cases the underlying choroid are abnormally formed or not completely formed. It shows up as a pale area varying in size. In effect the ophthalmologist is seeing the sclera because the sclera doesn't have any tissue over it to prevent his visualizing it. These are blind spots in the animal's visual field.

Increased Vascular tortuosity The fairly straight blood vessels twist and bend. Ophthalmologists may note this condition if it is extreme but tend not to discriminate against it otherwise, at the present time.

Coloboma (Pits in or adjacent to the optic disc) These are actually holes in the scleral shell, or where the scleral shell bulges posteriorly abnormally. It is usually associated around or in the optic nerve. This association with the optic nerve is what is classically called a coloboma.

Vermiform Streaks These are little folds in the retina — areas where the retina is abnormally formed. They are probably another type of Chorioretinal hypoplasia, where just the retina is involved. They are not a big problem in Collies, but English Springer Spaniels have them to such a degree that blind dogs are being seen. There is enough of this folding in the retina that retinal detachments are the result. American Cocker Spaniels are also beginning to show this trait; at present it seems to be localized in the eye and not affecting vision.

Corneal Opacity This is a density in the cornea related to an abnormal formation of the cornea. In Siberian Huskies these corneal densities are, many times, the defect observed and hence it is felt the densities are genetically controlled. There appears to be an increasing incidence of these corneal opacities in Huskies. Sometimes they become so dense that cursory examination one might think the dog had cataracts. Corneal opacities have also been related to the Collie Syndrome.

Microphthalmia (small eyes) This observation has been classically associated with Collie Eye. It may be that various aspects of the syndrome were first recognized, small eyes seemed to be consistently present as well. There is not necessarily a direct relationship between small eyes and the presence of the syndrome.

Retinal Detachments (and Intraocular Hemorrhage) Such detachments occur when this tissue layer comes away from the rest of the eye, either partially or completely, and floats around in the vitreous cavity. Most detachments are associated at some point, with intraocular hemorrhage, possibly because the retinal blood vessels are not being supported properly. This eye is to be discriminated against absolutely. It is a blind eye and is predisposed, as is any hemorrhaging eye, to inflammation because the blood inside the eye irritates the eye tissue. NOTE: None of the other defects of this complex syndrome will prevent the dog from functioning normally. The dog can go through life happily catching a ball and playing with the children. Only a complete retinal detachment causes absolute blindness in this syndrome.

Among the defects affecting all breeds are Persistent Pupillary Membranes. These are little stands of embryonic pupillary membrane or parts of the vascular tunic that provided the lens with nutrition during its development. In themselves and in a mild form, they are a warning that ocular formation is incorrect. In Basenjis they have proven serious because continued breeding of affected dogs has led to cataracts, colobomas of the optic disc, and chorioretinal change in the breed (some of the same disease entity present in Collie Eye). P.P.M.'s are congenital and possibly genetic.

Golden Retriever breeders are familiar with a congenital and genetic change known as Posterior Axial Opacities. The vascular bed that nourishes the lens from the posterior before birth is not completely reabsorbed. If these dogs are bred to more serious complete lens opacities, cataracts can result. Dogs with complete opacities or complete cataracts are blind.

The various retinal atrophy syndromes (the blood vessels disappear, cutting off the vital blood supply to the retina) are progressive and are diagnosed by looking for a thinning or disappearance of blood vessels, hyper-reflectivity (a lot of light reflection inside the eye) and pigmentary changes. When small, thready vessels are seen at any age the breeder should be cautious about inclusion in the breeding program until further checking is done at a later date. It is a mistake to assume that the retinal atrophy syndromes are the same for every breed, either in the way the disease progresses or the manner in which it is inherited. Because much research has been done on Irish Setters the disease entity is now called Rod-Cone Dysplasia in that breed. It is suggested that a metabolic defect is involved and that the rods and cones are unable to synthesize a metabolic need of their own for proper functioning. It is believed that something is known about the way the retinal atrophy syndrome is inherited in Poodles — as a simple autosomal recessive trait (the trait is not sex-linked; in order to produce an affected dog, both the sire and dam have to carry a gene factor, although it may not be expressed as the disease in either parent).

However, it is not good science to assume that because the disease operates and is inherited in a certain manner in one breed that this model applies to all other breeds. Careful scrutiny of some of the more recent research on these subjects reflects the debate going on in the scientific community. The Dachshund, for example, shows nothing in terms of lesions until it is blind. At one time such blindness was thought to be an optic neuritis (an impediment between the optic nerve and the brain) because on examination, all other structures of the retina looked normal. The Collie has the classic type of retinal atrophy that affects the four to six-year-old animal and also a type of retinal change that many times affects the animal at one to two years. Symptoms of this latter type of retinal change are very small calibre vessels and pigmentary changes. It is not known for sure if this latter disease is a form of retinal atrophy or some other variant of the Collie Eye Syndrome.

It is clear, too, that where ocular genetics is concerned the term simple autosomal recessive has been used prematurely, in many instances, to explain the inheritance of certain traits. Often insufficient data is available to support the hypothesis of simple autosomal recessive in many of these ocular diseases. The Collie Eye Syndrome has been defined as a simple autosomal recessive trait for some time. But this hypothesis does not explain the fact that affected dogs have produced normal-eyed individuals. If the trait were as described, two affecteds would have to produce affecteds only. Given the complexity of the eye and the variety of structures involved in the syndrome, a poly-genetic involvement makes more sense. How all these traits are inherited is the question to be answered where this syndrome is concerned. From the example just cited it can be seen that much data will also have to be collected before viable hypotheses can be advanced about the type and mode of inheritance of the various retinal atrophy syndromes.

The list of congenital and/or genetic canine ocular diseases is extensive. Those affecting the breeds examined at the Dominion Collie and Shetland Sheepdog Association eye clinic have been highlighted. The question remains — what can the breeder do to control against these eye diseases in the breeding program? It is obvious that there are no simple solutions, but routine examination of all puppies and breeding stock by a veterinary ophthalmologist in conjunction with the C.E.R.F. program (Canine Eye Registration Foundation Inc.) is the essential first step in the management of these diseases. By checking all animals regularly the breeder can monitor personal breeding results to obtain a clearer overall picture of what is happening. Checking selectively does not indicate very much; indeed, severely afflicted individuals could end up in the larger breeding population. Blind pets could be sold. Because of the progressive nature of the retinal atrophy syndromes one eye check is not enough. Although work is being done in the area of blood tests for the retinal atrophy syndromes it is still in the early stages of validation. In addition, routine and complete checking can serve to warn ophthalmologists, researchers, and breeders of ocular changes that may be making significant inroads into certain breeds.

The C.E.R.F. program offers two advantages to breeders immediate and long-term. Normal or non-affected stock are registered with an individual number. Identification of non-affected stock is thus made easier for interested breeders. This does not guarantee the eradication of the diseases because as we have seen, the genetics of many of them is still unsolved. But it is a start. Secondly, all of the results of the eye checks done across Canada and the United States are available for researchers in ocular disease and genetics. This is the data so vital to research efforts aimed at understanding how the diseases operate and are inherited. Without this data efforts at solving the myriad problems are seriously hampered.

Obviously, breeders have to be concerned with healthy eyes. But there is more to the animal than its eyes. And there are no guarantees that breeding totally non-affected animals will eliminate the problem. In Collies, there is now considerable questioning about the existence of normal-eyed, non-carriers. Waiting for the retinal atrophy syndrome to show up can involve many years, several litters could be on the ground before the disease manifests itself in the sire or dam. Hence the philosophy of the ideal — breed nothing but normals — has to be tempered with common sense. If the breeder chooses to gamble, then breed to a normal-eyed individual where possible and check all eyes.

The Dominion Collie and Shetland Sheepdog Association will sponsor an annual, all breed Eye Clinic in November for Toronto-area breeders and owners. The Poodle Advancement Association already sponsors one in February each year. In addition, the D.C.S.S.A. is interested in working with other clubs locally or nationally to encourage the certification of qualified Canadian veterinarians with the American College of Veterinary Ophthalmology so that the C.E.R.F. program can be extended in this country. At the present time, board-certified veterinary ophthalmologists are available in the United States only. Inquiries or suggestions may be submitted to Mr. Paul Sheahan, D.C.S.S.A. Eye Clinic Coordinator, R.R.4, Uxbridge, Ontario L0C 1K0.

THE CANADIAN KENNEL CLUB

ANNOUNCING . . .

A PUBLIC RELATIONS CAMPAIGN

There is a growing concern among the officers and directors of The Canadian Kennel Club over anti-dog legislation movements across the country. In order to promote goodwill and impress upon those involved in anti-dog movements that the majority of Canadian Kennel Club members are responsible and conscientious dog breeders and owners your Board of Directors plans to launch a nation-wide public relations campaign. It will stress our concern over the various dog problems and will promote the importance of buying directly from the breeder.

Since these problems are not identical in municipalities throughout the country, the Public Relations Committee urges that members and other interested people provide in-put to the committee suggesting how we can be of service in alleviating individual community problems and promote 'doggy' goodwill in your respective areas.

The committee hopes to obtain as much press and publicity as possible. Those of you who know of local radio and television stations and newspapers who might donate time and space — such as phone in shows, etc., are urged to contact the Public Relations Chairman. We will then endeavour to contact these sources in the hope of arranging for a responsible Canadian Kennel Club representative to be of service.

Other projects on the drawing board of the Public Relations Committee include goodwill-type bumper stickers, leaflets on varied subjects such as The Importance of Buying from the Breeder, The Importance of Spaying and Neutering Your Pet, What Every New Dog Show Exhibitor Should Know (i.e. important excerpts from the Dog Show Rules).

It is the hope of the Committee that many French as well as English contacts can be made.

You are asked to participate by sending your suggestions regarding the needs of your respective areas to

Breeder's viewpoint

By Ariel Sleeth

Many breeders who have gone before us have written about the difference between a great show dog and a great dog. When asked, a top authority in a breed may describe one dog as the greatest he has seen, and another as the best show dog.

A great dog is one that comes close to filling the requirements of his breed standard. If it were possible to compute, this dog might rate a 95% in conformation, temperament and breed character. A very great dog, indeed. Although his quality is acknowledged, he may not choose to show these traits to full advantage in a show ring environment. He may not have the spark and desire that all great show dogs possess.

A great show dog may rate an 85% (if this were possible to compute) but in a show environment he capitalizes on this quality fully, adding spark and desire, standing out in the group and Best in Show competition, giving an illusion of quality that rates 95% and defeating the great dog who gives an illusion, in the ring, of rating an 85%.

The show dog will have other factors working for him. Most have an inner confidence, or conceit, that is often recognizable in the youngster who stands apart, holding his head high, with a look that says, "I am a notch above the rest." If you have a breed that is shown naturally and baited, a good show dog must be hungry all the time. There is quite a difference between dogs of equal quality when one is at full attention anticipating a tidbit of liver and the other won't take it. There is much more fun in showing a greedy dog, so this is another trait to look for in your show dog.

It is important that the show dog be an 'easy keeper', and not put off his food when his routine is drastically changed. He must be a healthy, fit dog with good stamina, who will not quit after breed judging or after a few days on a hard circuit. One multiple Best in Show working dog, I have been told, is road worked three miles every day behind a station wagon. Doesn't it stand to reason that this dog will feel considerably different to the judge's hands than worthy competition who are kept crated, except to relieve themselves? The fit dog is going to move with confidence and have the benefit of a well muscled body, compared to his counterpart of equal quality but less conditioned.

A top winning show dog has something else in his favour if he has reached the top. He has a dedicated, knowledgeable owner and handler, often one and the same, in his corner. This person is sensitive to his dog's needs and alert to any changes in his routine, so problems can be avoided rather than corrected after they are problems. This person knows when his dog is ready to show and does not make him compete when he is not in winning condition. The owner of a top winning dog treats his entry like an athlete, bringing him to his peak condition for the show season, then caring for his comfort and well being during the circuit. The personal sacrifices are many, but always the 'athlete' takes priority.

Campaigning a winning dog means travelling and packing for every emergency. You may lose a Best in Show because you missed the breed when your battery failed. Keep booster cables in your vehicle and be sure your tires are in good condition. When packing for a show circuit, consult a basic list that you keep at home and add to it, depending on the time of year and location of the show site. Be prepared for weather that is hot, cold, wet or sunny — for both you and your dog. Pack medications that might be needed. It is wise to carry your own drinking water — for you and your dog. Valuable time can be lost at an outdoor show looking for a little water, and you avoid the risk of diarrhea if your dog is kept on the water he is familiar with.

It is a wise handler who packs a little human food, of the type that will not be affected by heat or cold, for those times when you need a lift but cannot face hot dogs again!

Also, be prepared to accept your wins modestly and your losses graciously. That is this breeder's viewpoint.

Views? Send them to Ariel Sleeth, R.R. 1, Seeley's Bay, Ontario K0H 2N0.

People often look on change with a sense of anxiety and fear. They want things to stay the way they are, or they try to recapture the good old days.

In the ring

Martha Covington Thorne

Two very interesting trends have been drawing my suspicions for some time, but it was only recently I put a name to them. Now listen carefully, for who knows, you might be the one of those who has come to believe that Big Is Fat and Good Movement Is Fast.

Sound silly? It's more than that — it's frightening! Waiting outside show rings last year and marking time in large groups, I had the opportunity to realize that a good percentage of Canadian and American exhibitors are tempering their exhibits to meet these definitions.

BIG IS FAT

This is most evident in the larger breeds — Saint Bernards, Bullmastiffs, Great Pyrenees and especially Newfoundlands — with too many people who should know better completely overlooking the fact that these dogs were bred to do a job demanding top physical conditioning. But the insecure exhibitor watches the larger entries winning week after week and decides the answer is to feed his dog more so he'll be big, too!

Excess weight on any breed puts more and more pressure on the feet, which soon break down. To get out of a walk into a trot, excessively heavy animals tend to shuffler or even pace. Three times around the ring and their breathing is laboured. Watch them coming and going and you'll see they roll and wobble rather than drive. The load on the heart is unbelievable.

Just plain fat, in addition to ruining health and impairing movement, can also dramatically change the structure of an animal whose body can be permanently weakened so that it never returns to normal when weight is taken off. Temporarily, the animal's outline can become misleading — heads which are normally in proper proportion to the rest of the dog become too small when the body inflates unnaturally. Perfectly adequate bone becomes fine bone. The whole picture is that of an unbalanced animal.

GOOD MOVEMENT IS FAST

This second misconception easily becomes dogma because, unfortunately, the average exhibitor really has no concept of what good movement is! He sees winning dogs flying around the ring — Irish Setters, Springers, Afghans — therefore all dogs should move like the wind. It doesn't seem to matter a tinker's darn how a particular dog is structured. It all seems to boil down to — if my dog is faster than your dog than my dog is a better mover than your dog.

Accompanied by a handler who believes such hogwash the tall, lanky dog throws his legs all over like a rag doll as he fights to keep his balance while his short-backed, shorter-legged cousin digs in on the corners to make up for what the Almighty didn't give him, so that he looks lame half of the time.

THE SOLUTION

Doesn't anybody ever take the time to stand back and look at his dog, posed or gaiting? This is the solution, you know — hand the animal over to a helper and watch, not as a proud owner or breeder but objectively, as a judge will watch.

With the dog posed, study him from the back, the front, and both sides. Look for overall balance of the separate parts. Does the head look like it belongs on that particular dog? Stand directly above the animal and look down on him, watching width of back through the midsection.

Have the dog moved directly away, directly back and across your vision. Kneel or sit on the ground and study the animal going fast, slow and normal. Sometimes a dog will need, for instance, slower movement away than returning, or vice versa.

A correct dietary program for a sound dog free of internal and external parasites, a sensible all-around vitamin supplement, intelligent road work and physical and mental conditioning — all these combine to produce correct movement and honest structure.

Do you have questions? Comments? Write Martha Covington Thorne, a widely respected professional handler, at Box 119, Fournier, Ontario K0B 1G0.

"I'm glad you like it. It's starch."

AUDITORS' REPORT TO THE MEMBERS

We have examined the balance sheet of The Canadian Kennel Club as at December 31, 1978 and the statements of income and expenditure and accumulated surplus and changes in financial position for the year then ended. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, and accordingly included such tests and other procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

In our opinion, these financial statements present fairly the financial position of the Club as at December 31, 1978 and the results of its operations and the changes in its financial position for the year then ended in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

And now, Canada. The breed was recently recognized by The Canadian Kennel Club and will debut in the show ring in June. Backers of the breed still have to determine whether the spaniels will appear in the Non-Sporting Group as in England or whether they are better suited for the Toy Group.

What the judges will see then (many of them for the first time) is a small dog that shares several characteristics of its other Oriental compatriots, yet is distinctively different. A first impression takes in high-set pendent ears, liquid brown eyes brimming over with expression and a rich plume of a tail cascading over the back.

The lion is an important symbol in the Buddhist religion. It harks back to the legend of Buddha taming the mighty King of the Jungle so that he padded along at his heels like a placid pussycat. But lions are not all that abundant in the Far East and just a trifle impractical to have wandering about palaces and monasteries. So the Buddhists settled for the next best thing. They bred dogs to resemble lions. Different people had different ideas about which features and qualities made a dog appear lionlike. That's why a number of different breeds have been known as 'lion dogs'. The Tibetan Spaniel is one of these.

Perhaps it was the regal bearing, the quick, positive gait, the firm, well-defined chin or the impressive mane about the short neck that likens the Tibetan Spaniel to the awesome King of Beasts.

Obviously, a dog that can con a Rolls from royalty has got to have personality. Alert, observant, intelligent, dignified, gay, assertive — the Tibetan Spaniel is a mixture of them all.

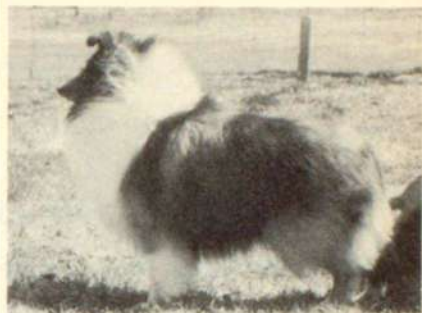

Margaret Thomas, a judge with a fondness for oriental breeds, acquired two Tibetan Spaniels as pets. She was visited by a high-ranking Buddhist Lama and brought out her pets for him to see. Seizing the opportunity to learn more about the background of the breed and the existence of possible hereditary problems, Mrs. Thomas asked if he had ever known Tibetan Spaniels to go blind or deaf. For a moment, the holy man looked. Then he nodded. "Yes," he said, "Dog go blind when hit in eye. Dog go lame when fall off mountain."

It appears that they are relatively free from hereditary faults.

At present, there are fewer than 50 of the Tibetan Spaniels in this country and no breed club. But there are interested breeders and owners spread across Canada and the future looks promising for the Tibetan Spaniel.

Honour Roll

Each March you have the pleasure of meeting some of the outstanding dogs that have distinguished themselves in the show ring in the preceding year. They have won Best in Show, placed in their group, or added the title Champion to their name. Their owners have every right to be proud and accept tribute from you, the reader. Dick Meen's article in this issue tells the story of what it takes to ride the campaign trail in time, energy, money and good humour. Some of these dogs will continue to add lustre to their name. We salute them all!

It always has seemed to me that the democratic ideal in government was achieved by the good citizens of ancient Athens.

The Athenians, who probably would be appalled at how their infant democracy has aged over the centuries into a wizened and frequently ineffectual old man, were representative of, and responsible to, themselves, when the entire citizenry turned out for legislative meetings.

In the early United States, a localized version of this ultimate in the democratic process was achieved with the town hall meeting, which gave everyone who was interested a personal voice in local legislation.

Recently, the same sound principle was applied to the Manitoba workings of The Canadian Kennel Club, when newly-appointed provincial director Ellwood Smith called a mass meeting of members at The Planetarium, in Winnipeg.

Ellwood Smith.

Some 100 members and associate members turned out on a Sunday afternoon, or about one-fifth the membership throughout the province — not bad, when you figure that Ellwood, not a football fan himself, inadvertently called the meeting the day of the Super Bowl.

In attendance was CKC president Hilda Pugh, who flew in for the occasion, and with all her many duties Mrs. Pugh is to be commended for taking the time and effort to be there.

High on the agenda was discussion of Winnipeg's current dog control study, but I thought the most important feature of the meeting was the meeting itself.

Here was an opportunity for Manitoba's new director to hear the voice of the membership, with discussion of various topics from the floor, and I wonder how many provincial directors have established such close contact with the members they represent.

Ellwood plans to hold such town hall meetings periodically, with the next scheduled for sometime in mid-summer and I, for one, congratulate him on bringing Athens to Winnipeg — so that he can bring the membership's wishes with him to Toronto.

My most recent copy of Wheaten Wags, published by the Soft-coated Wheaten Terrier Association of Canada, arrived with a two-line 'late flash' scotch-taped to the inside front cover.

It announced May 1 as the breed's recognition date by the CKC.

Congratulations to all you Wheaten Terrier people — and kudos, too, on your newsletter, edited by Kim Hunter of Barrie, Ont.

President of the association, which boasts the bulk of its membership in the West, is Alan Fox of Regina, but the group has one member — Gerrie Masters — as far east as Halifax. With a membership of just 19, individuals and family, the association is coming on strong this year of the breed's recognition, with a new newsletter name, an attractive new format and a club logo — obviously a group to watch in the months ahead.

Another breed club with an obviously very enthusiastic membership is the Rhodesian Ridgeback Club of Western Canada.

I received a full set of the club's newsletters, dating back to Vol. 1, No. 1, May, 1978, from Sharon Helgesen, of Whonock, B.C., editor of The Ridgebacker.

"Formed last April," wrote Ms. Helgesen, "our club has almost 60 members, from as far east as Kenora, Ont., and as far south as Sonora, Cal. I enjoy Dogs West and would be happy to send you news of Ridgebacks, should such items be of interest and use to you."

In answer to that, they certainly would be.

The Ridgebacker is magazine-style, with a colour cover featuring the striking logo — a replica of which is as a trophy at boosters in bronze; a bronze for Best of Opposite and in for Best of Breed, at specialties.

Still on trophies, the Crocus Obedience and Kennel Club, of Brandon, chose framed Eskimo art for its awards in conformation and obedience shows and trials held January 27 at — the first of the season in Manitoba.

I had two thoughts about this: attractive and tastefully framed represented a unique tribute to the that won them, as well as to the Es artists who executed them. They also the fortunate exhibitors and trialists won them something useful to displace their home, or kennel — a pleasant from the Winged Victories that I heard someone refer to as 'neighbour bowling trophies.'

PAW POURRI: Fran Hoye, president of the Lethbridge and District K.C. Club, wrote to advise that the club has an ongoing program of contribution to community services, recently donated $100 each to a local YWCA building fund, a group called Disabled on Move, and the Companion Dog Fund. The Western College of Veterinary Medicine, University of Saskatchewan. Carol Klapwijk and Saskatoon's House Centre are looking forward to good turnout at the Jake Giaccone obedience seminar, April 21 and 22. For more information, write Ms. Klapwijk, R.R. 3, Saskatoon S7K 3J6. The Shetland Sheepdog Fanciers Club, Edmonton, gave English judge Mary Davis, judged its specialty at the North Alberta Canine Association's show, a presentation album of photos of members' dogs. "She was completely thrilled with this lasting memento of her trip to Edmonton," noted club member L. Dethlefsen, "would not let it out of her possession — and carried it on her lap the way back to England!"

Readers are invited to send their news to Fred Edge, The Croft at River Hills, Manitoba R0E 1T0.

Atlantic action

By Jay Underwood

This month's focus is on the Honour Roll, so I thought it might be appropriate, since we are honouring the achievements of so many dogs and handlers, to discuss the few awards that can be won in the Maritimes which are becoming the centre of some increasingly intense competition throughout the region.

The Don Messer Trophy, contested for annually by breeders and owners of Group 5 dogs, is based on a point aggregate system related to the wins made by the dogs over the year.

Last year also saw the start of a new competition for Nova Scotian breeders. The Halifax Veterinary Hospital Nova Scotia Bred Puppy Award is offered by the H.V.H. for pups whelped in the province. This award is also based on a point aggregate system, and cash prizes are given to the top three pups.

The Cobequid (Truro, N.S.) club's last show of 1978 saw the second Show of Shows held for all breeds, with entries limited to those dogs who had won a group placing in any Maritime show, provided the award had been earned in the period commencing with the 1977 Cobequid show. The show was co-sponsored by Ralston Purina of Canada.

The Mirimachi Club, in Chatham, N.B., is holding the first shows of April, and the first three-day-event of the season, over the Easter weekend.

I recently found my applications for the Atlantic Terrier Association and Cairn Terrier Club of Canada lying in a bottom drawer reminding me of a note I want to make. It's in the best interests of all breeders and owners to join the many different breed and group clubs in country, and become as active within club as possible, regardless of how flung the membership might be. But clubs do a great deal to protect and upgrade the standard of the breed and standards of the breeders, so get involved.

Brenda Heinsma, of the Pictou County Kennel Club, recently became a leader in the local 4-H program. She's hoping to start a regular course in dog care for youngsters in her area. Brenda would like to hear from any other 4-H groups that might be running a similar program anywhere in Canada so that she can arrange a suitable teaching plan. Her address is R.R. 2, Scotsburn, (Ly Brook) Pictou Co., N.S. (Note that Pictou county, not Picton!)

As you probably know, this column has been written two months before publication. Some planning is needed as I try to find some space to highlight the month's feature. I'm not certain how many dogs featured this month will be from the region, but let's hope it's considerably more this year than the number of dogs shown in the Top Dog issue of last year. Only five dogs were included in the dis- advertising that followed the 1977 Top Dog breakdowns and yet I know there are a lot more deserving Maritime canines than that figure would suggest. So I show these Upper Canadians and Westerners just what kind of class we've got down here!

Keep everyone up to date by writing Jay Underwood at R.R. 1, Eureka, Pictou County, Nova Scotia B0K 1B0.

Obedience

By Jake Giacomelli

A question that comes up more often than not: "Is giving a verbal command to heel in the Signal Exercise necessarily a failure?" My personal opinion is that in some cases a substantial penalty is sufficient for this handler error, but there are other cases where I wouldn't hesitate a moment to fail for the first verbal command given during the signal heeling part. Let me explain my reasons.

First, let's cover the regulations that affect my thinking on this subject. Chapter III, Section 26. Signal Exercise: "A dog which fails on a single signal from the handler, to stand or remain standing where left, or to drop, or to sit and stay, or to come, or which receives a command or audible signal from the handler to do any of these parts of the exercise must receive a score of zero." To me, this implies that a failure is a must for a command or audible signal given while performing any of the exercise mentioned above. There is no indication, however, that a zero must be given if a verbal command to heel was inadvertently given during the heeling part of the signal exercise. The above chapter also states that: "all of the deductions listed under the Heel and Recall exercises above shall also apply to this exercise" — this, too, doesn't indicate a zero.

Personally, if in my opinion the first verbal command was given inadvertently during the heeling part of the signal exercise I would penalize the handler substantially for this handler error. However, if a second verbal command was given during the heeling, the handler would receive a zero. After all, it is supposed to be a signal exercise!

Now, to give you an instance where I would fail a handler on the first verbal command given during the heeling part of the signal exercise: On my command forward, the handler gave the dog the hand signal to heel — after taking about three steps the handler noticed that the dog was still sitting at the starting point. The handler immediately gave a loud verbal command of "Fido, Heel", whereupon the dog quickly ran up beside his handler and heeled along with him. For this deliberate verbal command I would give a zero. The reason for this decision is covered adequately in Chapter III, second paragraph of Section 12.

Back in December, the competitive Obedience Club of Manitoba in Winnipeg held well-run trials. Got to hand it to these Western clubs, they supply more matting than I ever see in our neck of the woods! If my notes aren't messed up, the uproarious, exciting series of Scent Hurdle races was won by a fast team of Labrador Retrievers called the Loco Labs!

For you Western clubs, our loss is your gain. Walter Konradt, who was licensed to judge all Obedience Classes back in 1959 and who also judges Tracking, has moved to Vancouver Island. Walter is building a new home out there and I understand his address for the present is 9576 Faber Rd., R.R. 3, Port Alberni, B.C. V9Y 7L7. Now that he's retired he'll be able to accept assignments that previously he could not, due to his work schedule.

Hunting dogs

By Gord McIntyre

How many of the CKC breeds in Group 1 and 2 are still popular with hunters? How many of these latter breeds have been split into two or more distinct or nearly so, sub-species: pet/show, hunting, field trial? How many show dogs of these breeds still have strong, natural hunting ability and desire? How many hunting and trial dogs of these breeds win in the show ring, however well handled? How many hunters and trialers show their dogs; how many show people hunt their dogs?

The HOWS are easy to answer, but each answer demands the next question — Why? Answers to the WHYS are more lengthy and involved, but not difficult to find.

Tragically, all answers point to a near-future in which increasingly fewer breeds will be both hunted, trialed and shown, and those that are will be the recognizable sub-species mentioned above: pet/show, hunting, field trial. Within a human life-span, we will have destroyed once great breeds, and replaced each with three lesser ones.

Hence the ultimate question: What can be done to reverse this process; preserve or re-establish where necessary, the breed integrity — natural hunting ability, conformation, temperament — of each CKC breed still being hunted? Perhaps a few of the less popular hunting breeds can also be redeemed, but the rest are doomed to be pets and pretty show dogs. Their fate is sealed. We must salvage what hunting breeds we can; while we can.

Now I've got plenty of suggestions as to the ways and means of providing the answer to this ultimate question. And, I expect, so do you. Let's get together and thrash-squabble our way to a united consensus. Then we'll need a power base to force our final solution on CKC.

Since neither you nor I is possessed with all-knowing infallibility — we just think we are — we'll initially have some white-hot arguments as we search for the answer to the ultimate question. Wonderful! When we're finally agreed, that heat will have tempered our resolve to near-diamond hardness.

Rail as we will against the breed — destructive extremists in the ranks of the show and trial fancy, those of us dedicated to preserving the integrity of our chosen hunting breeds deserve equal condemnation. But where the extremists' crime was one of commission: they knew what they wanted in their dogs and they got it, our crime was one of omission: let it happen.

We're as much a part of the present problem as are the extremists. What we could easily have prevented by a few extra rules governing the award of show and trial championships, we let happen. What we could easily have been prevented by the use of diplomacy and politics, will now probably have to be resolved by savage and ruthless street-fighting.

This is the first of a series of four articles dealing with this issue. Hopefully, when it's finished, good things will come of it. Then this column will be free to deal with other areas of hunting dog interest: provide information, create greater awareness and appreciation of hunting dogs, and act as a catalyst in developing closer bond among the hunting dog fraternity in Canada. There's a need for a these.

Far from being anachronistic, a thing of the past, more Canadians are hunting than ever before, and an increasing number of them are hunting with dogs. In Ontario for instance, the ratio of hunters to dogs has narrowed in the last ten years from 18:1 to 8:1 and continues closing.

This increasing popularity of hunting dogs has created a growing number of knowledgeable hunters, ever more demanding of the qualities of field performance, conformation and temperament they expect of their dogs.

While recreational hunting in Canada poses no threat of extinction to any game species — nor ever will, the amount of available game-holding cover grows less each year. The bulldozer, paving machine, drainage ditch or pipes, Fall ploughing, fence row clearances, river channelization, insecticides — see to that.

Thus, particularly close to urban communities, there are more hunters hunting smaller areas, and in the competition for the available game only the best and luckiest dogs produce.

It's this 'best' dog that knowledgeable hunters want. Best in trained, natural ability, best in the conformation for long hard hunts, and best in the temperament to double as beloved family pet.

It's to such dogs that this column should be dedicated. Agreed?

Questions and comments should be directed to Gord McIntyre at R.R. 4, Bolton, Ontario L0P 1A0.

Doggy postage

The Old English Sheepdog, Welsh Springer Spaniel, Irish Setter and West Highland White Terrier are featured on the first of many colourful 1979 commemorative stamps being released by Great Britain.

BIS in first show

A Chow puppy owned by Fred Peddie, Toronto, went BIS, first time shown, at the first all breed sanction match staged by The Golden Retriever Club of Canada. Held at St. Lawrence Market, Toronto, January 7, the entry amazed the club — 382 conformation, 52 in obedience.

Mexican event

Newsworthy because its members are veterinarians, the Club des Medicos Veterinarios Zootecnistas, held a 700-entry show in Mexico City January 13 and 14. The club is affiliated with the Federation Canofila Mexicana and Federation Cynologique Internationale. Canadian judges Mrs. Dorothea Daniell-Jenkins awarded BIS the first day to a local Bulldog; John Devlin gave BIS the following day to Ch. Bostone's Baby Zira, Afghan owned by Carl Boggs, Anthony Livingstone and Mr. and Mrs. Alan Ewles of Afking Kennels, Kleinburg, Ont.

Tibetan 'first'

Reported to be the first Tibetan Terrier to obtain both Canadian and American CDX degrees, Kalai Lamleh Zia Na-Bun (Misty) now has a leg toward UD. Owned by Mrs. Roy Trowell, Toronto and handled by Mr. Trowell, she was bred by Mrs. Henry S. Murphy. Misty has also trained in scent hurdle and drill team competitions with Swansea Dog Club, whose team took first place at Lockport last September.

Sighthounds

Affiliated: The Ontario Lure Coursing Association with the Canadian Sighthound Field Association, with meets to run under CSFA rules.

Named Top 1978 coursing sighthounds were: Whippet, Kenji, owned by John Hine; Saluki, Phantom, Janice Tizzard; Borzoi, Alish, Susan Holte; Wolfhound, Sheevra and Greyhound, Shandra, both owned by Terry Semple and Afghan, Simon, Suzanne Stahlbaum. There was no individual breed award for Scottish Deerhounds.

Among OLCA dogs winning U.S. points was the Whippet, Ch. Laba's Sir Windstorm, owned by Starr White. Tiger placed first in the Open Stake and second the following day.

Demodex mite study

Dr. Robert M. Schwartzman, veterinary dermatologist at the University of Pennsylvania, has begun research on the demodex mite, one of the most common, devastating and least understood of mange-causing parasites. The Seeing Eye, Inc., through Morris Animal Foundation, is funding the project.

Golden first

At the Sudela Dog Training Club's Fall tracking test held in Cloverdale, B.C., Mrs. Margaret Best awarded Bonnie Island Gypsy Rose, Can. CDX, TDX, Am. CD, TD, owned by William and Joanne Fraser, Victoria, B.C., a TDX. This makes her the first Golden from B.C. to earn this honour, according to her owners. 'Gypsy' gained her American TD at 14 months and her Canadian TD two months later.

Marathon show

German Shepherds drew the greatest breed entry with an all-time record of 378 at Australia's renowned Melbourne Royal which had a total record of 7,397 dogs. For the three judges it was a marathon demanding incredible stamina. Peter Thomson, a former Australian now residing in the States, L.L. Skarda, U.S.A. and Mrs. J. Quiros of Argentina assessed entries continuously for 11 days. The Pekinese, Aust. Ch. Pangtoy Mardi Gable, owned by B.K. Wilson was named BIS. Obedience trials required eight days.

Welfare program

A project to improve the welfare and health of dogs, cats and other pets has been launched by the Western College of Veterinary Medicine, Saskatoon. The WCVI Companion Animal Health Fund (CAHF) provides for research and graduate training programs in the veterinary health sciences. Financial support will be sought from groups and individuals.

For nearly a decade the Del Monte K.C. has wanted to return to its original site, The Lodge at Pebble Beach, Calif., which earned it the title 'The most beautiful dog show in the world'. When the event grew to a 2,000 entry, the hotel lawns could no longer accommodate the show. Derek Rayne informs Dogs a totally new show, slated for May 15, will be limited to 500 champions (or dogs with majors) and will be the first of its kind. It will honour the late S. F. B. Morse, for many years president of the Del Monte Corp. and the Del Monte K.C. and who was responsible for holding the first dog show at the hotel. Part of the proceeds will be donated to the Monterey County S.P.C.A. in his name.

Among winning Golden Retrievers, Ch. Main Topic of Ambercroft, owned by Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee, Ambercroft Kennels, Streetsville, Ont., took a 5-pt. major at the Progressive K.C. show in Detroit. Their Ch. Carolee's Bran Muffin took a 5-pt. major at the same show and a 2-pt. win in California. Shadywell Rustic Pipe CD, WC won his American WC and the first leg of his American CD at the Golden Retriever Club of America 1978 specialty. Owners are Stan and Bonnie Kukula, Toronto. Owned by John Mann, Tottenham, Ont., Ambercroft's Archie WCX won his American WC and the first leg of his American CD.

The quality of Canadian coursing hounds emerged at the Ibizan Hound Club of America meet. This ASFA sanctioned event, held in Hanover, Pa., was dominated by Ontario Lure Coursing Association sighthounds. Best in Field the first day was the Saluki, Sami Arad of S.A. owned by Bev Richmond and Doug Hebbel. Terry Semple's Wolfhound, Sheevra, took top honours the second day. The Whippet, Laba's Hilary Sam The Man, owned by Bob Ash, finished in ASFA field championship at the same meet. The OLCA was awarded a set of coursing jackets for entering the greatest number of dogs.

Your dog's health

By Dr. Martin DeForest

QUESTION: Would you tell us about the condition of pyometra, especially with respect to the cause and early methods of detection?

ANSWER: Pyometra is defined as an accumulation of purulent material (pus) within the uterus. It is a consequence of a condition known as cystic hyperplasia of the endometrium (which is the inner lining of the uterus). With pyometra, the cervix may be open or closed, and this often determines the intensity of the signs of the disease. With the 'closed type', illness generally is more severe, as the infection is trapped within the body of the uterus and cannot drain to the outside.

Pyometra is usually seen in bitches over six years of age and especially those which have never had puppies. Evidence of pyometra usually appears within two months of the last heat period. No special breed incidence has been observed. An endocrine (hormonal) imbalance is believed to be the primary cause of pyometra, with bacteria playing a secondary role in the development of the disease.

Clinical signs of the disease include a history of irregular estrous (heat) cycles, abnormal vaginal discharge and enlargement of the external genitalia, especially with the 'open cervix' form of the disease. First signs may be listlessness, weakness of the hindlimbs, evidence of pain and abnormal fullness of the abdomen, poor appetite and occasional vomiting. Increased thirst (polydipsia) and increased urination (polyuria) are usually present and may be pronounced. When a vaginal discharge is present, it is often foul smelling and adheres to the haircoat of the genital region, tail, and hindlimbs. When the cervix is closed and the purulent material is retained in the uterus, abdominal distention and toxemia are seen. The toxic phase of pyometra is often sudden in onset and is characterized by loss of appetite, vomiting, excessive thirst, depression and dehydration. Body temperature may be somewhat elevated initially, then tends to drop below normal as the signs of toxemia progress to include muscle tremors, weakness, and engorgement of the blood vessels of mucous membranes. Kidney failure and uremia usually hasten death in many cases.

The diagnosis of pyometra is based on the patient's history, clinical signs, blood tests and abdominal radiographs (x-rays). The best treatment is surgical removal of the uterus and ovaries. Occasionally, medical treatment (drug therapy and uterine irrigation) is attempted to preserve the reproductive ability of valuable breeding bitches, although this means of treatment is not always successful in eliminating the disease.

Reference: Smith, K. W., in Canine Surgery, Second Archibald Edition, American Veterinary Publications, Inc., Santa Barbara, 1974.

QUESTION: One of our own bitches was given an injection of female hormones following an accidental mating to prevent an unwanted pregnancy. Everything seemed to be fine with her until about six weeks later when she developed an infection in her uterus. Do you think that this could be directly related to the injection that she received, or was this merely a coincidence?

ANSWER: Many veterinarians use steroid and non-steroidal estrogens (female hormones) for prevention of pregnancy following mis-mating. Because of the present market trend away from stilbestrol, many practitioners have been forced to use longer-acting estrogens, such as estradiol cypionate, as a 'mis-mating shot'. The use of these drugs at the late follicular phase of the estrous cycle appears to be followed by an increased incidence of uterine disease. Many veterinarians feel that there is a lower incidence of uterine infections if the treatment used is stilbestrol and shorter-acting steroidal estrogens. There is much speculation as to the reason for an increased incidence of uterine disease with the use of estradiol, although the exact nature of the underlying cause is unknown. Estradiol has also been reported to cause fatal blood disorders in dogs.

QUESTION: Which types of bones are safest for dogs to chew on?

ANSWER: My personal feeling is that dogs should not receive bones to chew on. Bone fragments can become lodged in the animal's mouth, and may tend to damage the intestinal tract as they pass through the dog. I recommend the use of nylon chew toys for animals that require something to chew upon. These are readily available in most pet stores.

Am. FT Ch. Basset 1st

Am. FT Ch. Del-Ron's Toby is the first Canadian bred and owned Basset to earn an American field championship, according to her owners, Donald and Florine Sills of Bloomingdale, Ont. This is particularly newsworthy because Toby entered her first trial on her seventh birthday.

In the States, Basset field trials are run on rabbit, under rules similar to Beagle trial regulations, and judged by Beagle trial judges. To become a field champion, a Basset must win 60 points, made up by taking a first place plus at least three others.

Toby competed in only nine trials for hiers.

A pet spaniel-of-sorts lured Fred Carter in to dogs

BY JOAN MORDEN

If you had been listening to CBC radio one January afternoon you would have heard a gentleman phone in and firmly correct some statements made by Iris Nowell, author of The Dog Crisis. The subject under discussion on this open line program was the Nowell book, the caller Fred Carter, president of the Oakville Humane Society and the Oakville and District K.C.; past Director of the CKC; breeder of Westacres Basset Hound fame; championship show judge and life member of the Basset Hound Club of Canada.

Fred knew his business when, in a few well chosen words, he refuted the Nowell claim that animal welfare groups have more money than they know what to do with. Animal welfare is a subject close to Fred's heart. Currently, the Carter home is shared by their one remaining Westacres Basset, a spayed female and Benji, an adoptee from the Oakville shelter. Fred explains Benji's presence this way: "I couldn't resist him. He put his paw through the cage and touched my arm — that did it. I'd like to get another." It's this attitude that makes Fred a natural for the job of HS president and one that bespeaks a long association with dogs.

Born in Newfoundland, Fred grew up in St. John's and recalls a succession of childhood pets. There was a Wire, Collies, various crossbreeds, Newfoundlands of course, and after his marriage three Dachshunds. Fred met Betty, his wife-to-be, when as a nursing sister she was stationed with the navy in Newfoundland. When he joined the staff of Simpson's, the couple moved to the Toronto area, raised their family of two, Judy and her brother Sandy, and eventually became completely involved in the dog hobby. A pet 'spaniel of sorts' was indirectly responsible.

One day this dog wandered from home ground and was killed on the highway. "No more dogs!" vowed four sad Carters. But old habits die hard. Reading the paper one evening Fred put down his hand to stroke a little head that was no longer there. "This is ridiculous", he said to himself, and turned to the Pets For Sale column.

As it happened, there was a framed picture of a Basset on the wall. Betty had hung it, saying that this would be her next breed. And by one of those long strokes of chance Fred found an ad listing Basset puppies for sale. Within a few days the Carters opened their hearts and their home to Schaufelein's Logey, a beautiful pup bred by Joey Purdy and sired by her top winning Ch. Whistledown Commando. What happened next made Basset history in Canada.

Fred is deeply involved in animal welfare work as well as judging dog shows.

Encouraged by Joey to show the pup, the Carters finished his championship when he was eight months old. A good dog deserves a good mate so the next Basset to move in with the Carters was Ch. Hantshead's Fanfare. Bred to Logey, she produced the bitch who became the dam of the record maker Ch. Westacres Hugo The Red, Canada's top hound in 1965 and 1966 and winner of the first Show of Shows in 1967.

During the 60s it wasn't easy to top the breed, let alone the hound group. Competition was keen, Bassets were peaking in popularity and there was a great temptation to breed for the pet market. Fred gives thanks to many people for help along the way. Joey Purdy, Shirley DeBoer and the late Horace Hollands for their encouragement and good sportsmanship; Bob Blythe and Helen Langford for sharing their knowledge freely, especially re puppy care; his youngsters who willingly took on handling and kennel chores and Betty who Fred says did most of the work of raising, training and showing Westacres stock. Fred says he didn't come into the picture until after a dog had made a name for himself. He was busy doing other things.

Serving on the Board of CKC was one. Fred had hoped that the Club was moving to a system more in line with that operating in the USA. But this did not transpire. He found himself sitting on various committees and appointed chairman of the committee to look into computerization. After serving one term Fred did not seek re-election.

Another of his interests was judging, and as this facet of his hobby grew he decided to curtail exhibiting his own dogs. It had never been the Carters' intention to continue as a breeding kennel indefinitely. The dogs were a great tie. Good kennel help was hard to get and as the Carter youngsters found interests of their own it became impossible for Fred and Betty to enjoy a vacation together. So, after 12 successful years, the beautiful Westacres kennel property was sold and the Carters moved to their present home in Oakville.

During that time they made a substantial contribution to their breed. Not just with quality stock but also by helping researchers unravel the mysteries of an inherited problem Fred calls 'bird tongue'. This is a nerve disorder that prevents pups from suckling. Working with a team of vets from Cornell, the mode of inheritance of this defect was determined as well as the means to clear it from a line. A report of the study gained national recognition when it was published in a veterinary journal.

Since 1972 Fred has judged coast to coast in Canada and in several cities in the USA. He has some criticisms of present day Bassets. For example, he thinks the tendency towards the long, thin, 'wind splitting' head is bound to lead to problems. He does not like dogs with excessively long backs and he thinks more attention should be paid to breeding correct feet. He sees many Bassets down in pastern, paper footed and with spreading toes. He is opposed to revising the breed standard. Rather, he would like to see breeders aim to breed within the standard as written. Then he closes on an optimistic note. Despite all this criticism, he says, there are some great hounds in the ring today, including some very sound Bassets.

ONE OF PURINA'S PET PROJECTS:

RESEARCH.

Most people know us for one project — pet food. But we've got another — research. And it's really our most important project, because without it no pet food can be complete.

The Purina Pet Care Centre is the world's largest facility devoted entirely to pet nutrition and care research. Since 1926 we've tested the effects of our continuously improved products on over 18,000 dogs in studies based on palatability, growth, breeding, digestion and maintenance.

That's why we can state that Purina* Dog Chow,* Purina Dog Meal and Purina Puppy Chow dog foods deliver complete, balanced nutrition in flavours dogs like.

Research. We invest more money on it than any other animal food manufacturer.

Because your pet's health is one of our pet projects.
