NOTE TO CKC MEMBERS

Editorial

Standards are being overhauled by Canadian breeders

If you have ever wondered why Canadian breed standards bear a stronger similarity to those in the U.S.A. than they do to their British counterparts, you have probably thought this came about for reasons of geographical convenience. In a sense, this is correct. But there is another, more valid explanation.

Something most dog hobbyists may have forgotten, or never knew, is that The Canadian Kennel Club published its first Book of Breed Standards in 1962. Before then the standards as approved by the American Kennel Club were used here exclusively, the reason being that there were few breed associations organized in Canada prior to the sixties and it is the specialty clubs that are responsible for setting and revising standards. So the next best thing to having Canadian standards was to 'borrow' them from another country. In this case it happened to be the U.S.A.

But if Canadian breeders seem to have been a bit slow getting themselves organized into specialty clubs, they can be credited with some of the most progressive action ever taken as far as the standards are concerned. Shortly after publication of this first CKC book, some of the more astute breeders noted the great disparity among the standards. Some were too long, some much too short, while others were filled with outdated terminology. These members conceived a plan whereby each breed standard would be written in an identical pattern. In other words, all the standards would relate to each other so that paragraph two of the German Shepherd standard, for example, would cover the dation was taken to CKC and the Board of Directors approved it. Not to the extent of a complete overhaul of the published standards, but it was agreed that when new standards were written or old ones revised, they were to conform to the format. The first breed standard so revised was that of the Bullmastiff and it is a model of clarity. One of the most recent, also excellent, is the proposed new Lhasa Apso standard.

When this issue of Dogs in Canada was in the planning stage we considered setting up each of the breed pages format-style. But, when this was tried out with a few breeds, it seemed as though there would be more blank space than printed copy. The final discouragement was learning that it had taken one breed club two and a half years to rewrite its standard in accordance with the format.

All the same, it was an interesting exercise. If you want to find out how your current breed standard rates, try reassembling the information as published under each of the format headings. Like us, you may be dismayed by what you discover and the number of 'missing parts' this puzzle reveals.

Judges win the approval of a few, the criticism of many, endure vocal assaults, require the stamina of an athlete, and are not overpaid. So, it's logical to wonder why so many are so eager to be a member of the judging fraternity. There are probably as many answers to this question as there are judges. Without these long-suffering, underpaid, overworked, abused arbiters, the sport of showing dogs would be finished. What a far better sport it would be if competitors were as graceful in defeat as in success, rising above the very human instinct to look for a scapegoat when the ribbon is clutched in some other hand.

SCIENCE DIET...NOW IN CANADA!

It's here...the scientifically-balanced diet that provides all the nutrition your pet requires for a happy, healthy life.

Holiday Science Diet foods help keep a dog fit, because they fit the four Lifestyles of a dog: GROWTH for puppies, MAINTENANCE for normal adult dogs, LACTATION for gestating and lactating dogs. And MAXIMUM STRESS for stressed or working dogs.

Science Diet cat foods contain the proper balance of nutrients needed for good health. And, low ash levels that aid in the prevention of urinary disorders.

Each Science Diet formula is designed for precise nutritional performance without supplemental feeding. Each diet provides the proper nutrition, high digestibility, low stool volume and consistent ingredients to take the guesswork out of feeding.

Because of its special nature, Science Diet is available only through pet shops, grooming shops, kennels

It's meaty, chewy, needs no mixing

Cover story

Noted judge, James Taylor, awarding Best in Show, October 1978, to Glahms Golden Sovereign.

It is the dream of every kennel to breed one truly great dog, a dog who will be remembered as the standard of excellence, by whom others are judged and compared.

Such a dog is 'Stanley', Ch. Glahms Golden Sovereign, the aristocratic standardbearer of Glahms Kennels, the Dandie Dinmont who has achieved unrivalled international recognition and accolades.

His triumphs read like a Guinness book of records. A multiple Group and Best in Show winner in Canada, Stanley competed successfully abroad and was awarded championships in the United States, Bermuda, Mexico and the Dominican Republic. He attained his International Championship under judges from Australia, America, Poland and Sweden. He is World Champion for 1978, and holds the world record for the most number of championships bestowed upon a Dandie Dinmont in the history of the breed.

Superbly elegant, combining style with spirit, the magnificent mustard dog has become Canada's Dandie ambassador. He has recently been shown in five countries, and has won or placed in the Terrier Group each time. He has attained an equally successful reputation at stud. Stanley has sired American, Canadian, Mexican and International champions. His son, Can., Mex. & Int. Ch. Glahms Coin of the Realm, pictured with him on last year's March Dogs in Canada cover, recently captured the Terrier Group twice at the coveted Mexican International dog show.

Glahms Kennels is deservedly proud of such a magnificent showman, sire and serene companion as Can., Am., Bda., Dom., Mex., Int. and World Ch. Glahms Golden Sovereign.

For an appointment to tour Glahms Kennels, and meet Stanley, contact: Miss M. Macbeth, Graymalkin Manor, R.R.3, Stouffville, Ont. L0H 1L0 (416) 473-2817.

Judging from the cover (January), one would expect such excellent quality from a U.S. publication. I was immensely impressed with the layouts of your articles and advertisements and am gratified to discover that your informative articles are written by new authors.

G. Joey Thernesz
Toronto

What a way to start the New Year! I am thrilled with the 'new look'. The distinctive new cover design was indicative of what I would find inside — I wasn't disappointed. Editorial content was sparkling, plentiful and, as always, interesting. Photos and ads look so much sharper.

Carol McDonald
Milton, Ont.

I just received my copy of the 'new' Dogs in Canada. The new look is very attractive and convenient. The new format has made the job for those of us who are statisticians just that much easier. I am sure future editions will be a welcome addition to the readership's library shelves. Keep up the good work.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Lester, Jr.
Itasca, Ill.

I would like to give personal congratulations to you and your staff. The new format is something you should all be proud of. In fact, it is a magazine that all Canadian dog breeders and fanciers can be proud of.

William J. Carpenter

Compliments on your gorgeous Annual. Your colour reproductions are beautiful — superior to any U.S. magazine. This goes for your new format, too. The first colour cover was from a pastel portrait I did, of Mrs. Thompson's Welsh Corgi, in January, 1957.

Patricia Detmold
Glen Gardner, N.J.

My heartiest congratulations to you and to all your contributing editors and staff. Your 1979 Annual is better than ever.

Even more important and impressive is the beautiful 'new look' of Dogs in Canada. It is a joy to read, to show and to keep. I suspect that your circulation to dog owners and lovers will zoom upward.

Never have I written a publication to comment on its content, but I cannot resist the new Dogs in Canada. At last, to be able to settle, read and not have to flip pages or drop sections. The layout is excellent.

Wheaten story appreciated

Congratulations on the fine article that appeared in the February issue. Having read practically every article written about the Soft-coated Wheaten Terrier in recent years, I would have to rank yours among the top. You have captured the history of the breed and managed to convey that 'something special' that the Wheaten possesses. You have done a service to the breed.

I also ask your permission to reproduce your article as a handout to people who write for information about the breed. Up until now, we have had to send out information that was written in the United States, but your article represents something Canadian — a trait that is often lacking in many areas in Canada.

Inter-club challenge

For the past ten years, around April, an Inter-Club Challenge Match takes place, hosted by the previous year's winning club. Each participating club sends a team of five members, who match wits with other teams answering questions on breed standards, dog show and obedience trial rules, etc. Last Spring, this affair had to be cancelled for lack of interest. I sincerely hope this year's invitation by the Burlington Kennel and Obedience Club will receive the response it deserves.

The way we were

Thanks for Mrs. Joel's article in February on Canadian studs and, in particular, on Susan Radley Fraser's Tramp. His picture brought back memories of the sixties, when I was active in the show ring in the Ottawa area. He was so special. Sad to note that he is deceased, as are all my dogs of that era, but it's nice to remember the way we were.

Touching to read about the 18-year-old Samoyed competing at the Credit Valley show. Congratulations to Jessica and her owner.

Nutrition worth tracking down.

Wayne® Dog Foods. We've been around for more than 40 years. Now if you haven't seen us, that's probably because you weren't looking in the right spot. You see, Wayne® ALL-PRO Dry Dog Foods are sold only by Wayne Feed dealers and other qualified dealers. Where else would you expect to find a dog food so high in nutrition that it meets or exceeds all 26 nutrient requirements for dogs as established by the National Research Council?

Like so many others already know, Wayne Dog Food products are worth going a little out of your way to get. And you'll like the types you have to choose from — Wayne Dog Food in Bite, Meal and Chunk forms, Puppy Os and PROMIX. But there's even more value to buying ALL-PRO Dog Food at your feed or pet store, like the value of buying from someone who knows canine nutrition and care. So you can depend on getting good sound advice. You can also stock up on other quality pet goods while you're there.

To find the name of your nearest Wayne Dog Food dealer, just call 416 - 894-0921, collect. Then hurry on over and pick up a bag of Wayne ALL-PRO Dog Food today. You may never try another dog food again.

Winning donations

Last year at their annual all breed show, the Kingston and District K.C. supported research in heartworm instead of awarding trophies. A cheque for $900 was sent to Dr. Joseph Slocombe at the University of Guelph to assist his research. This year, the winner of Best in Group, Best Puppy in Group and Highest Qualifying Score in each of the five obedience classes will receive a special rosette, accompanied by a framed certificate stating that a donation has been made to further research into kennel cough at Guelph. The club invites anyone to send their donation to the Kingston and District K.C., Box 12, Kingston, Ont.

Corrections

In People, January issue, the item I sent concerning the death of Mrs. Harriette Sheppard appeared. However, under her picture you printed my name! You can imagine how upset I am about the error.

Miss K. M. Wells
Beaconsfield, Que.

You had an item (February) re U.S. wins by Quantico's Bluebell and Ouchitas Darin Lee, daughter of Quantico's Daisy Mae (BIS winner). I was the breeder of Bluebell and Daisy but do not own them. Miss Linda George is the owner and is the breeder owner of Ouchitas Darin Lee.

I would like to express appreciation of your new format. I especially enjoyed the article by M. Riddle, 'Were yesterday's sporting dogs superior?'.

Betty Peterson
Grimsby, Ont.

In an advertisement for our Golden Retriever stud, Ch. Chrys-haefen's Camelot, (February), we unwittingly made several errors in the information submitted. The BIS win in the 1976 Golden Retriever Club specialty belongs to Ch. Curranhall's Karo of Goldrange, owned by Jack Reid. Our ad should have given credit for a BB at the Golden Retriever Club booster in 1977. Also, wins for progeny should have included a Best Puppy in Show, rather than a BIS. My humble apologies for these errors.

Club listings useful

Many thanks for having the Club Directory. It has let people know about our club and brought us more inquiries than we would have otherwise received.

You're welcome!

With the help of Dogs in Canada and the CKC, which very kindly provided us with a list of dog clubs, we were able to collect a very nice sum of money for the Harry Dodds Memorial Fund. We would like to publicly thank the clubs and individuals who sent donations.

The total amount collected was $960 and I'm sure the Research Department of the Western College of Veterinary Medicine, University of Saskatchewan, will be pleased to receive it in Mr. Dodds' name.

As it really is

In his column in the February/March issue of Show Ring magazine, Nigel Aubrey-Jones offered to send a copy of the report of the World Conference of Kennel Clubs to The Canadian Kennel Club.

In fact, a complete report of the Conference, dated June 1978, was received by The Canadian Kennel Club late last July at which time copies were made and forwarded by me to every member of the Board of Directors and the Executive staff.

So Mr. A.-Jones' offer is unnecessary — and rather late in coming.

He also questions the cost to The Canadian Kennel Club of sending two representatives to the World Conference, as compared to the $700 he states was incurred by The Kennel Club in hosting the entire Conference. Anyone who has purchased a plane ticket to England has the answer to that one.

The decision to send the President and Vice-President of The Canadian Kennel Club to attend the World Conference, as official representatives from Canada, was made at the January 7, 1978, Board meeting. Living expenses were to be paid only to cover February 4 to February 12, with a detailed journal of expenses to be maintained and submitted to the board. And this was done.

The World Conference was promoted as a fact-finding conference, the results of which would be disseminated to club officials throughout the world for further study and consideration. The eventual aim is to achieve more uniformity in standards, easier mobility of qualified judges through international reciprocity, modification of rules which affect each other, methods of effectively combatting anti-dog legislation and so on. Organizers of the World Conference did not anticipate this initial meeting would necessarily result in any tangible, revolutionary changes, but rather create a better understanding among all the kennel clubs involved. And it succeeded. Now we can proceed to deal with specifics.

For the R.R. record

I wish to correct a statement made in 'In the news' (Dogs, February). It is stated that the Rhodesian Ridgeback entry at the October 1978 Fort Garry K.C. booster was the largest in the history of the breed in Canada. This is not correct. On June 2, 1973, there were 29 R.R.s entered in the Lions Gate K.C. R.R. booster. There have been several large entries on the west coast, with a total of 189 Ridgebacks entered in boosters. I do not wish to detract from the accomplishments of the Winnipeg group, but I am sure they would not want an incorrect statement to stand.

CONTROL HER HEAT CYCLE CONVENIENTLY

If you own a female dog, you know the problems and concerns of your pet coming into heat: spotting; restlessness; temperament change; the possibility of unwanted pups – and the roving pack of male dogs.

Now you can control your dog's heat cycle with a new birth control concept from Tuco Products Company, Division of The Upjohn Company. You have the option whereby you can eliminate the undesirable features of heat by either surgical or non-surgical methods.

Be a concerned pet owner! Consult your local veterinarian, as he can advise you on the best heat control program for your pet. Check with him about convenient non-surgical control.

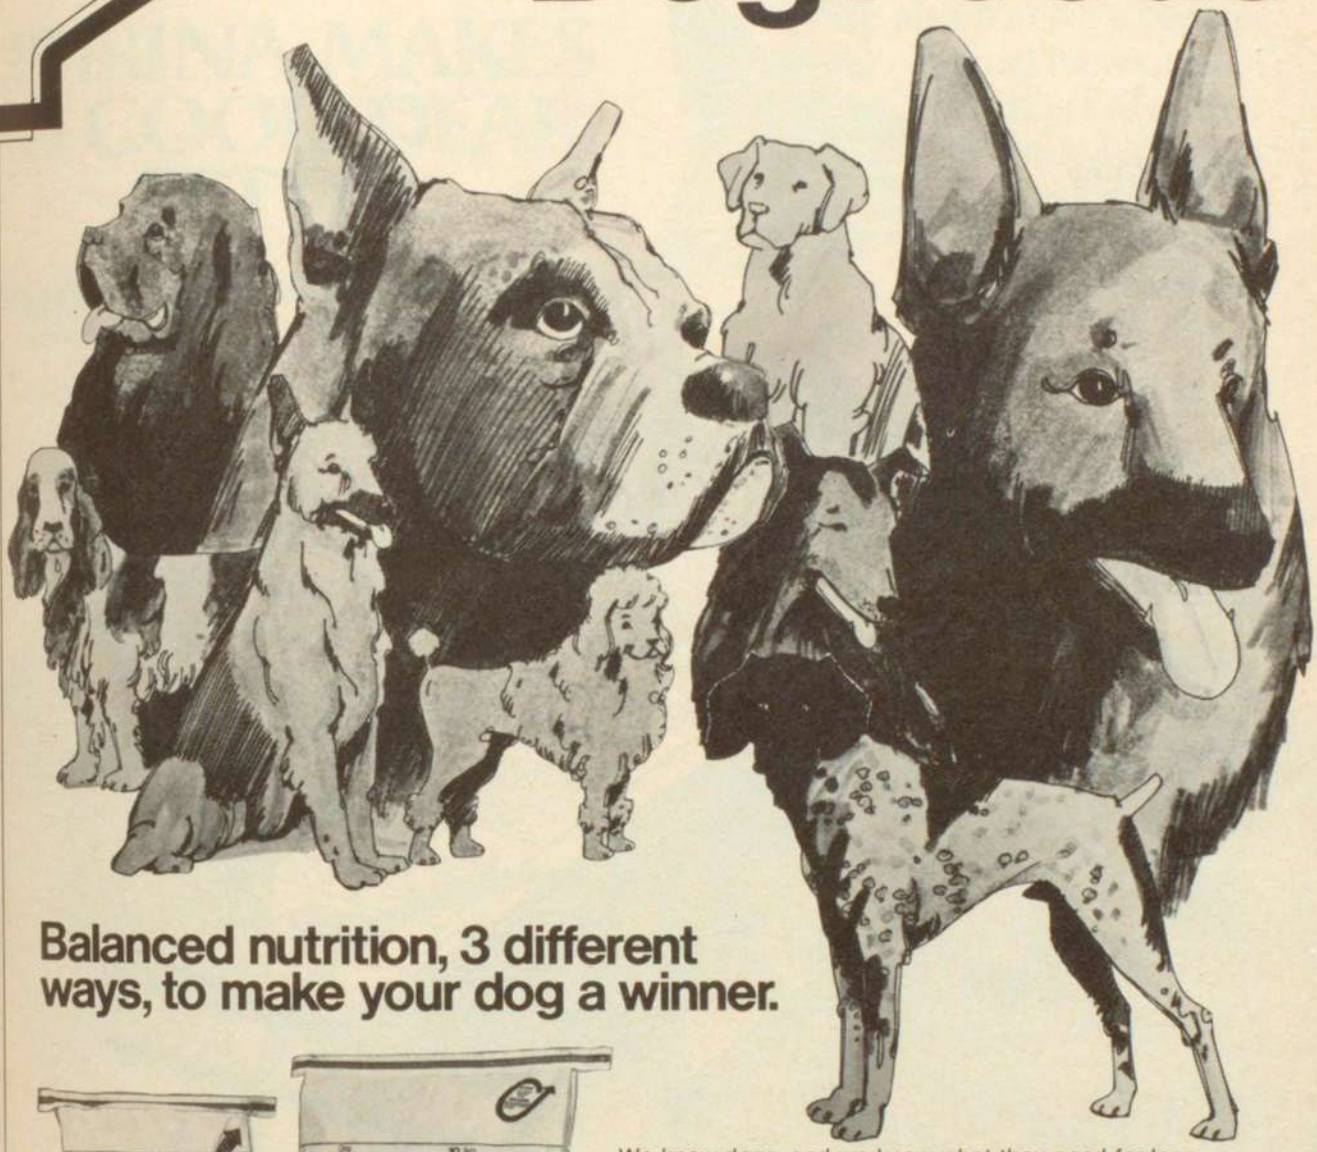
CO-OP

Hi-Boy! Dog Foods



Balanced nutrition, 3 different ways, to make your dog a winner.

We know dogs, and we know what they need for lean healthy growth, proper bone and muscle development, sound teeth and a rich, glossy ,prize-winning coat. We also know all dogs don't have the same activity levels or the same preferences in foods. That's why your CO-OP offers the same complete nutritional package in three different forms.

CO-OP Hi-Boy Dog Chunks are an expanded, dry food to fit the needs of the average dog who doesn't really have to work for his dinner. 10 and 20 kg. bags.

CO-OP Hi-Boy Dog Chews are a more concentrated form for the active dogs which require a greater amount of energy and essential nutrients. 10 and 20 kg. bags.

And the same complete nutritional values are available in CO-OP Canned Food. A canned food that some dogs prefer to dry or moistened forms. 8 oz. cans.

Don't take chances with the health of your dog! There's a CO-OP store near enough to make sure your dog gets the balanced diet he needs to make him a winner.

Australians boast it's the world's best cattle dog

The Australian Cattle Dog is now being put to the test in Canada and winning a host of dedicated believers

By Alice Bixler

The Problem:
Rebellious range cattle — half wild and as hard to handle as a mob of teenagers at a Bay City Rollers' performance. Spread over thousands of acres of Australia's Great Outback grazing lands which are too vast to fence. With experienced stockmen in short supply, how can these cattle be controlled or be moved the great distances to market? The obvious answer – a good cattle dog. He must be tough, tireless, agile, intelligent, quiet, quick and a fierce biter. But in the early 1800s, no such paragon existed in Australia and that was the problem.

The Solution:
Create one!

They tried. Australian stockmen had imported several different types of sheepdogs from Britain in hopes of converting them to passable cattle herders. They brought in the Old Smithfield and the Black Bobtail, a breed now extinct. But the Smithfield was too slow and methodical. The Bobtails found long trips too tiring in their bearlike amble and, in the words of one historian, they "bit like an alligator and barked like a consumptive."

The heart of the matter was that there was an ocean of difference between controlling England's mild-mannered sheep and those maverick Outback bovines. Rather like teaching a small town Sunday School class as compared to a New York street gang. Malevolent, savage and just plain ornery, Australian cattle are apt to drop kick an ordinary dog smack into the next territory. They're notorious for their ability to corner or gang up on a dog in order to gore or trample the hapless animal. So the cattle dog of Australia must do what no self-respecting sheepdog would dream of doing. He bites. Nipping at the heels of the cantankerous cattle, he forces them to move.

Different breeds, different combinations and crosses were tried without finding the ultimate answer. Then, in the 1840s, a squatter named Thomas Hall brought a pair of blue merle smooth Collies from Scotland to his home in New South Wales. Though they were a marked improvement over the other breeds tested so far, Hall felt that they barked too much and 'headed' (moved the cattle from the front) excessively. With such spooky cattle, boisterous barking could easily start a stampede. So Hall hit upon the idea of crossing them with Australia's native wild dog, the Dingo, an animal that works silently, and instinctively pursues its prey from the rear.

The offspring came to be known as Hall's Heelers. They were rugged, inexhaustible, quiet and took orders well. From their Dingo half, they assumed the trait of performing silently. The Collie blood produced the herding instinct and their controllable nature. It was a good combination.

Before long, others realized that Hall was onto something good and the demand for pups began. In the 1870s, brothers Jack and Harry Bagust of Sydney bought some of these pups and embarked on a breeding program that was to develop the animal now known as the Australian Cattle Dog.

First they crossed the female with a Dalmatian in order to instill the instinct of working with horses. The drawback to that combination was that some of the herding instinct was lost. In order to regain it, they crossed in the black and tan Kelpie, an Australian sheepdog noted for its ability. That did the trick.

The Bagust dogs were outstanding cattle herders. Possessing the silence and stamina of their Dingo ancestors, the herding talents of their Collie and Kelpie kin and the protective and faithful nature of the Dalmatian, they proved to be the perfect dogs to control the Australian cattle. In order to set the type and get the line breeding true, the Bagust brothers "bred a lot and drowned a lot."

Aside from the working ability, the breeding combinations produced a dog with colouration found on no other canine. The mixture of the Dalmatian spots and the Collie merle became a speckle. From the Kelpie came tan markings on the legs, chest and head. From the Collie came a white blaze on the head and darker colouring around the eyes and ears. The final product is a dog similar in type and build to the Dingo and with that breed's upright ears but more substantial in body. They come in two colours. Blue dogs have a dark blue body speckled with lighter blue, blue-black patches around the eyes and ears, tan markings on the head, chest and lower legs and a white blaze on the face.

Red dogs have dark red markings instead of the blue-black and have an overall red speckle. The reds are said to be fiercer biters than the blues. Like their Dalmatian forefather, the pups are born white and don't acquire their distinctive markings for several weeks. But breeders have found that the skin of the body and pads of the feet provide clues to enable them to predict the future coat colour with accuracy.

The Bagust brothers' creations were the start of the modern Australian Cattle Dog. As word of their working abilities spread, so did their popularity. In 1902, Bob Kaleski, a stalwart of the Australian working dog world, drew up a standard which was presented to and accepted by the Cattle and Sheepdog Club of Australia and the Kennel Club of New South Wales the following year. The breed was known then as the Australian Heeler.

As a matter of fact, the breed has every right to an identity crisis. It's had more names than a nervous crook. In addition to Australian Heeler, the dogs have been called the Queensland Heeler, the Blue Heeler, the Queensland Blue Heeler, Bluey and finally and officially, the Australian Cattle Dog. As might be surmised from the names, the blue colour has been the more popular of the two.

A willing and able worker, the Cattle Dog is also popular as a family pet and protector. Though not a large dog (17 to 20 inches at the withers), he's a sturdy dog with a slightly suspicious nature and an inborn inclination to protect family and property.

In the years since its development, the popularity of the breed has increased steadily and in 1977 it had the third highest number of registrations in the

FOCUS ON

The origin and history of the standards

By Braxton B. Sawyer

When writing a research paper I first want to clearly define my subject and purpose. What are 'standards' and how are they used with reference to dogs?

Webster gives 25 definitions of the word 'standard' as a noun and five definitions as an adjective. When using the word 'standard' in referring to dogs, it is used as a noun. The first five definitions of the word 'standard' being used as a noun (according to Webster) are:

1. Standard — "Something elevated as a signal."
2. Standard — "A figure adopted as an emblem by a body of people."
3. Standard — "A standard-bearer."
4. Standard — "That which is set up and established by law as a rule for the measure of quality, weight, extent or value."
5. Standard — "That which is established by authority, custom, or general consent, as a model or example; criterion; test; viewed as that which is proper and adequate for a given purpose."

To me, the fifth definition applies 'standard' to the dog.

In The Complete Dog Book, by the American Kennel Club, 1975 Edition, the word 'standard' is defined as being, "A description of the ideal dog of each recognized breed, to serve as a word pattern by which dogs are judged at shows." The first edition of the book was published in 1929 and has no definition of the word 'standard'.

The World Encyclopedia of Dogs defines the 'standard', "The specification of a breed laid down by national or regional canine authority. The standard by which dogs are judged in the show ring."

The Encyclopedia of Dogs, by Fiorenzo Fiorone; the New Dog Encyclopedia, by Davis; the International Encyclopedia of Dogs; and the Book of Breed Standards, official publication of The Canadian Kennel Club, all have no definition for the word 'standard'.

Therefore, after checking all this information, I was left with the feeling that there still exists a need for a better definition of the word 'standard' when applied to the dog and I, hereby, propose one:

The 'standard', when referring to the dog, means a word-picture-blue-print of a given breed, written by authorities of said breed, setting forth the essentials of temperament, structure and movement to serve as a guide for breeders and judges who are interested in perpetuating and improving said breed.

To gain a true knowledge of the origin of the 'standards', I shall begin with the first attempts to use word pictures in commenting upon the comformation of the dog. The following is a chronoligical outline of writers whom I find to give word pictures of dogs through the ages.

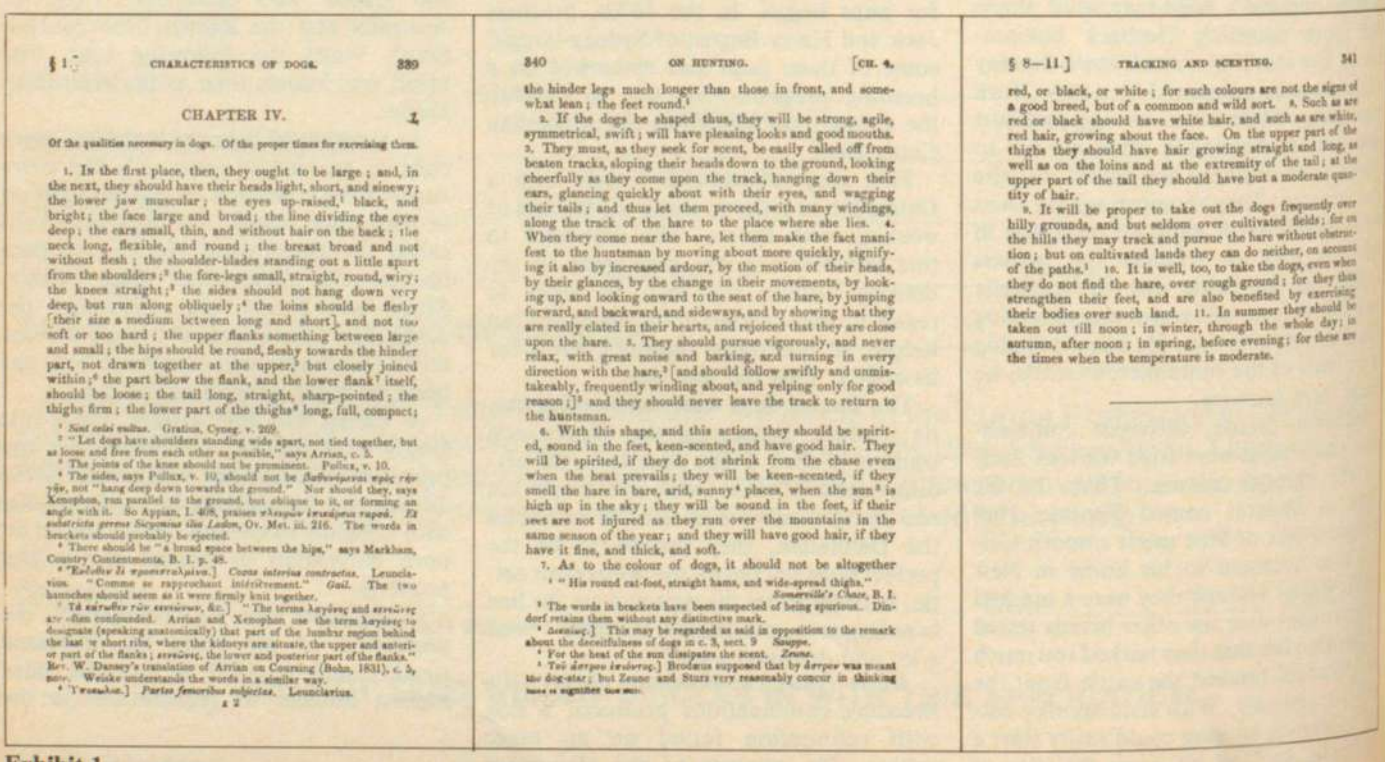
I. King Solomon (1000 B.C.).

King Solomon (1000 B.C.) gives the first recorded word picture on dog conformation we have in print. He says the Greyhound is 'comely in going'. Proverbs 30:29-31.

Webster defines 'comely' as being 'pleasing to the sight'.

According to the Hebrew Bible-Hebrew Lexicon by Gesenius, the literal translation of the word 'comely' is "well-doers of step."

Brown-Driver-Briggs give the literal translation to be "well-doers of going." I submit my translation as "beautiful movement."



§ 1.] CHARACTERISTICS OF DOGS. 339

CHAPTER IV.

Of the qualities necessary in dogs. Of the proper times for exercising them.

1. In the first place, then, they ought to be large; and, in the next, they should have their heads light, short, and sinewy; the lower jaw muscular; the eyes up-raised,[1] black, and bright; the face large and broad; the line dividing the eyes deep; the ears small, thin, and without hair on the back; the neck long, flexible, and round; the breast broad and not without flesh; the shoulder-blades standing out a little apart from the shoulders;[2] the fore-legs small, straight, round, wiry; the knees straight;[3] the sides should not hang down very deep, but run along obliquely;[4] the loins should be fleshy [their size a medium between long and short], and not too soft or too hard; the upper flanks something between large and small; the hips should be round, fleshy towards the hinder part, not drawn together at the upper,[5] but closely joined within;[6] the part below the flank, and the lower flank[7] itself, should be loose; the tail long, straight, sharp-pointed; the thighs firm; the lower part of the thighs[8] long, full, compact;

[1] Sint oculi exultes. Gratius, Cyneg. v. 209.

[2] "Let dogs have shoulders standing wide apart, not tied together, but as loose and free from each other as possible," says Arrian, c. 5.

[3] The joints of the knee should not be prominent. Pollux, v. 10.

[4] The sides, says Pollux, v. 10, should not be βαθυκάρηνα πρὸς γῆν, not "hang deep down towards the ground." Nor should they, says Xenophon, run parallel to the ground, but oblique to it, or forming an angle with it. So Appian, I. 408, praises πλευρὰν ἐπικάρσιον παρεδ. Et substricta gerens Sicyonius ilia Lacon, Ov. Met. iii. 216. The words in brackets should probably be rejected.

[5] There should be "a broad space between the hips," says Markham, Country Contentments, B. I. p. 48.

[6] Ἐκδεδιὸς δὲ πρυσταλήκινα.] Coxae interius contractae. Leunclavius. "Comme se rapprochant intérieurement." Gail. The two haunches should seem as it were firmly knit together.

[7] Τὰ καταῤῥέοντα τῶν ἐσχάτων, &c.] "The terms λαγόνες and ἐσχάτες are often confounded. Arrian and Xenophon use the term λαγόνες to designate (speaking anatomically) that part of the lumbar region behind the last or short ribs, where the kidneys are situate, the upper and anterior part of the flanks; ἔσχατες, the lower and posterior part of the flanks." Rev. W. Dansey's translation of Arrian on Coursing (Bohn, 1831), c. 5, note. Weiske understands the words in a similar way.

[8] Γνάθοι.] Partes femoribus subjectae. Leunclavius.

the hinder legs much longer than those in front, and somewhat lean; the feet round.[1]

2. If the dogs be shaped thus, they will be strong, agile, symmetrical, swift; will have pleasing looks and good mouths. 3. They must, as they seek for scent, be easily called off from beaten tracks, sloping their heads down to the ground, looking cheerfully as they come upon the track, hanging down their ears, glancing quickly about with their eyes, and wagging their tails; and thus let them proceed, with many windings, along the track of the hare to the place where she lies. 4. When they come near the hare, let them make the fact manifest to the huntsman by moving about more quickly, signifying it also by increased ardour, by the motion of their heads, by their glances, by the change in their movements, by looking up, and looking onward to the seat of the hare, by jumping forward, and backward, and sideways, and by showing that they are really elated in their hearts, and rejoiced that they are close upon the hare. 5. They should pursue vigorously, and never relax, with great noise and barking, and turning in every direction with the hare,[2] [and should follow swiftly and unmistakeably, frequently winding about, and yelping only for good reason;][3] and they should never leave the track to return to the huntsman.

6. With this shape, and this action, they should be spirited, sound in the feet, keen-scented, and have good hair. They will be spirited, if they do not shrink from the chase even when the heat prevails; they will be keen-scented, if they smell the hare in bare, arid, sunny[4] places, when the sun[5] is high up in the sky; they will be sound in the feet, if their feet are not injured as they run over the mountains in the same season of the year; and they will have good hair, if they have it fine, and thick, and soft.

7. As to the colour of dogs, it should not be altogether

[1] "His round cat-foot, straight hams, and wide-spread thighs." Somerville's Chace, B. I.

[2] The words in brackets have been suspected of being spurious. Dindorf retains them without any distinctive mark.

[3] Δακνίως.] This may be regarded as said in opposition to the remark about the deceitfulness of dogs in c. 3, sect. 9 Sauppe.

[4] For the heat of the sun dissipates the scent. Zeune.

[5] Τοῦ ἄστρου ἐπιόντος.] Brodæus supposed that by ἄστρον was meant the dog-star; but Zeune and Sturz very reasonably concur in thinking red, or black, or white; for such colours are not the signs of a good breed, but of a common and wild sort. 8. Such as are red or black should have white hair, and such as are white, red hair, growing about the face. On the upper part of the thighs they should have hair growing straight and long, as well as on the loins and at the extremity of the tail; at the upper part of the tail they should have but a moderate quantity of hair.

9. It will be proper to take out the dogs frequently over hilly grounds, and but seldom over cultivated fields; for on the hills they may track and pursue the hare without obstruction; but on cultivated lands they can do neither, on account of the paths.[1] 10. It is well, too, to take the dogs, even when they do not find the hare, over rough ground; for they thus strengthen their feet, and are also benefited by exercising their bodies over such land. 11. In summer they should be taken out till noon; in winter, through the whole day; in autumn, after noon; in spring, before evening; for these are the times when the temperature is moderate.

I will specify the indications of speed and good breeding in greyhounds,[1] and by attention to what points ill-bred and slow ones may be distinguished from them.

In the first place, let them be lengthy from head to tail;[2] for in every variety of dog, you will find, on reflection, no one point so indicative of speed and good breeding as length; and on the other hand, no such mark of slowness and degeneracy as shortness. So that I have even seen dogs with numerous other faults, that have been, on account of their length, both swift and high-couraged. And farther, the larger dogs,[3] when in other respects equal, show higher breeding than small ones on the very score of size. But those large dogs are bad, whose limbs are unknit, and destitute of symmetry;[4] being indeed, when so formed, worse than small dogs, with an equal share of other faults attached to them.

Your greyhounds should have light and well-articulated heads;[5] whether hooked[6] or flat nosed is not of much consequence: nor does it greatly matter whether the parts beneath the forehead be protuberant with muscle.[7] They are alone bad which are heavy-headed, having thick nostrils, with a blunt instead of a pointed termination. Such then are well-headed hounds. Their eyes should be large, up-raised, clear, strikingly bright. The best look fiery, and flash like lightning, resembling those of leopards, lions, or lynxes.[8] Next to these are black eyes, provided they are wide-open and grim-looking; and last of all, grey:[9] nor are these to be considered bad, nor indicative of bad dogs, provided they are clear, and have a savage look.

Let the ears of your greyhounds be large and soft,[15] so as to appear, from their size and softness, as if broken. Such are best: but it is no bad indication if they appear erect, provided they are not small and stiff.[16] The neck should be long, round, and flexible;[17] so that if you forcibly draw the dogs backwards by their collars, it may seem to be broken, from its flexibility and softness. Broad chests are better than narrow. Let them have shoulders standing wide-apart,[18] not tied together, but as loose, and free from each other, as possible—legs round, straight, and well-jointed—sides strong—loins broad, firm, not fleshy, but sinewy—upper flanks loose and supple[19]—hips wide asunder—lower flanks hollow—tails fine, long, rough with hair, supple, flexible, and more hairy towards the tip—haunches sweeping, and firm to the touch:[20]—with regard to their legs, if the hind ones are longer than the fore, the greyhound will run best up hill; if the fore legs are longest, down hill; but if both are equal, he will run best on a flat.[21] Since, however, it is more difficult to beat a hare on an acclivity, because she runs best up hill, those are deemed the better class of dogs, whose hind legs are longer than their fore ones.[22] Round and strong feet are decidedly best.[23]

Exhibit 2

Why is King Solomon commenting on the 'gait' of Greyhounds? Bear in mind that Solomon supervised the building of the Temple. The seating capacity of that Temple was more than any sports arena that we have today. The book of Proverbs from which I quoted above is a compilation of Solomon's sermons to his people. Many of them were given in the Temple. The overriding theme of all of Solomon's lectures is his exhortations to walk uprightly before the Lord. I believe Solomon was lecturing to a great throng of people one day when he noticed the 'doggy' people in his audience. He knew how strict they were about gait and movement of their dogs and he suggested to them (since they were so particular as to how their dogs walked according to their standards) why did not they, the people, walk more uprightly before the Lord? From the above we can deduct the following:

Dogs were very much a part of people then. They were very conscious of the correct conformation of their dogs. Movement and gait were their priorities. Therefore, judges who insist upon proper movement today are following a long established tradition.

II. Xenophon wrote the second word picture on conformation.

Xenophon, Greek historian and philosophical essayist, the son of Gryllus, was born in Athens about 430 B.C. He has left several literary works which are most interesting and give insight into the life of the Greeks of his time. In essays on horsemanship and hunting, Xenophon deals with matters of which he had a thorough knowledge. In the first, he gives rules on how to choose a horse and then tells how it is to be groomed and ridden and generally managed. The Cynegeticus deals chiefly with the hare, though the author speaks also of boar-hunting and describes the hounds, telling how they are to be bred and trained, and gives specimens of suitable names for them. In this particular essay called Cynegeticus or A Treatise on Hunting, Xenophon gives the first lengthy word picture ever written for any kind of dog. The dog he is describing here is his ideal Hound of the Chase. Exhibit 1 is a photo reproduction from his book:

III. Arrian wrote the third word picture on conformation.

Arrian of Nicomedia in Bithynia, Greek historian and philosopher, was born about 96 A.D. and lived during the reigns of Hadrian who appointed him governor of Cappadocia (131-137 A.D.). In his declining years, he retired to his native place where he devoted himself to literary work. He died about 180 A.D. Among his literary works is a book he labeled The Cynegeticus of the Younger Xenophon. This book is a treatise on Greyhounds and coursing. In this book, Arrian writes a lengthy word picture on the conformation of the Greyhound. Exhibit 2 is a photo reproduction of his comments on the Greyhound.

IV. Edward, Second Duke of York, wrote the fourth word picture on conformation.

The first book ever written in the English language dealing with dogs and hunting was written between the years of 1406 and

A running hound should be well born, and well grown of body, and should have great nostrils and open, and a long snout, but not small, and great lips and well hanging down, and great eyes red or black, and a great forehead and great head, and large ears, well long and well hanging down, broad and near the head, a great neck, and a great breast and great shoulders, and great legs and strong, and not too long, and great feet, round and great claws, and the foot a little low, small flanks and long sides, a little pintel not long, small hanging ballocks and well trussed together, a good chine bone and great back, good thighs, and great hind legs and the hocks straight and not bowed, the tail great and high, and not cromping up on the back, but straight and a little cromping upward. Nevertheless I have seen some running hounds with great hairy tails the which were very good. Running hounds hunt in divers manners, for some followeth the hart fast at the first, for they go lightly and fast and when they have run so awhile, they have hied them so fast that they be relaxed and all breathless, and stop still and leave the hart when they should chase him. This kind of running hounds men should find usually in the land of Basco and Spain.

1413 by Edward III's grandson, Edward, Second Duke of York. The book is titled The Master of Game and is a large book of 300 pages which covers every phase of hounds and the chase. Beginning on page 105, he has a word picture for what he calls "Running Hounds". See Exhibit 3.

V. Peter Beckford wrote the fifth word picture on conformation.

Peter Beckford was born in 1740, the only child of Julines Beckford of Jamaica and his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Solomon Ashley of Ashby St., Ledgers, Northants. At the age of eight, he was admitted to Westminster School and was there for four years, finishing his education under private tutors at his father's house at Stepleton, Iwerne, Dorset. In 1757, he matriculated at New College, Oxford University, staying there for a few years, after which he returned home and passed most of his time hunting in the vicinity of his father's property. He was a world traveller and was the greatest foxhunter England has ever produced. In 1781, he published his immortal book on Foxhounds and Foxhunting titled Thoughts on Hunting. This is without doubt the greatest book ever written on English Foxhunting and still stands today as the classic authority. Beginning on page 18 of this book, Mr. Beckford writes what is accepted as the first word picture ever written for the English Foxhound. It is photo reproduced as Exhibit 4.

VI. Dr. John Henry Walsh (Stonehenge), the father of bench show standards.

The coming of the first dog show in the world forced the writing of standards for dogs exhibited at the shows.

The world's first 'officially recognized' dog show took place on June 28-29, 1859, in the Town Hall at Newcastle-on-Tyne. This show was officially advertised to the public in a publication, The Field, May 28, 1859. It took official entries, published an official catalogue, had official judges, made official awards, and kennel clubs of dog authorities around the world refer to this as the "world's first dog show."

This show was organized by a sportsman, Mr. Shorthose, and a gunsmith, Mr. Pape, at the suggestion of a Mr. R. Brailsford. There were 50 entries — all bird dogs (23 Pointers and 27 Setters). There were three judges for each class. Mr. J. Jobling, Mr. T. Robson and Dr. J. H. Walsh judged the classes for Pointers; and Mr. F. Foulger, Mr. Brailsford and Dr. J. H. Walsh judged those for the Setters. One of the judges of the Setters succeeded in taking first prize in Pointers, while one of the judges of the Pointer classes took first prize in Setters. Mr. R. Brailsford's liver and white Pointer won the Pointer Class, and Dandy, a black and tan Setter (Gordon), owned by Mr. J. Jobling, won the Setter Class. Mr. Pape, the gunsmith, awarded the trophies which were guns from his own factory.

There were other shows which followed — Birmingham, England, December 3-4, 1860; Leeds, July 16-18, 1861; Birmingham, England, December 2-4, 1861; Manchester, 1861; Agricultural Hall, London, June 24-28, 1862; and Birmingham, England, December 1-4, 1862.

The first really large dog show was 'The First Annual Grand National Exhibition of Sporting and other dogs' which was held at the Ashburnham Hall, Cremorne, Chelsea, from March 23-28, 1863. There were 1,214 entries with 15 judges. The dogs were kept on benches during the five days and were judged on the benches —

THOUGHTS ON HUNTING

There are necessary points in the shape of a hound, which ought always to be attended to by a sportsman; for, if he be not of a perfect symmetry, he will neither run fast, nor bear much work: he has much to undergo, and should have strength proportioned to it. Let his legs be straight as arrows; his feet round, and not too large; his shoulders back; his breast rather wide than narrow; his chest deep; his back broad; his head small, his neck thin; his tail thick and brushy: if he carry it well, so much the better. This last point, however trifling it may appear to you, gave rise to a very odd question. A gentleman (not much acquainted with hounds), as we were hunting together the other day, said: "I observe, Sir, that some of your dogs' tails stand up, and some hang down; pray, which do you reckon the best houndi?" Such young hounds as are out at the elbows, and such as are weak from the knee to the foot, should never be taken into the pack.

I find that I have mentioned a small head, as one of the necessary requisites of a hound; but you will understand it as relative to beauty only; for, as to goodness, I believe large-headed hounds are in no wise inferior. Somerville, in his description of a perfect hound, makes no mention of the head, leaving the size of it to Phidias to determine; he, therefore, must have thought it of little consequence. I send you his words.

See there, with countenance blythe
And with a courtly grin, the fawning hound
Salutes thee cow'ring; his wide-op'ning nose
Upwards he curls, and his large sloe-black eyes
Melt in soft blandishments, and humble joy:
His glossy skin, or yellow-pied, or blue,
In lights or shades, by Nature's pencil drawn,
Reflects the various tints: his ears and legs,
Flecke here and there in gay enamel'd pride,
Rival the speckled pard: his rush-gown tail
O'er his broad back bends in an ample arch.
On shoulders clean, upright and firm he stands:
His round cat-foot, straight hams, and wide-spread thighs,
And his low-dropping chest, confess his speed:
His strength, his wind, or on the steepy hill,
Or far-extended plain; in every part
So well proportion'd, that the nicer skill
Of Phidias himself can't blame thy choice.
Of such compose thy pack.

THE CHOICE OF HOUNDS

The colour I think of little moment; and am of opinion with our friend Foote, respecting his negro friend that a good dog, like a good candidate, cannot be of a bad colour.

Men are too apt to be prejudiced by the sort of hound which they themselves have been most accustomed to. Those who have been used to the sharp-nosed fox-hound, will hardly allow a large-headed hound to be a fox-hound; yet they both equally are: speed and beauty are the chief excellences of the one; while stoutness, and tenderness of nose, in hunting,[1] are characteristic of the other. I could tell you, that I have seen very good sport with very unkind some packs, consisting of hounds of various sizes, differing from one another as much in shape and look as in their colour; nor could there be traced the least sign of consanguinity amongst them. Considered separately, the hounds were good; as a pack of hounds, they were not to be commended; nor would you be satisfied with anything that looked so very incomplete. You will find nothing so essential to your sport, as that your hounds should run well together; nor can this end be better attained, than by confining yourself, as near as you can, to those of the same sort, size, and shape.

A great excellence in a pack of hounds, is the head they carry; and that pack may be said to go the fastest, that can run ten miles the soonest; notwithstanding the hounds, separately, may not run so fast as many others.[2] A pack of hounds, considered in a collective body, go fast, in proportion to the excellence of their noses, and the head they carry; as that traveller generally gets soonest to his journey's end who stops least upon the road. Some hounds that I have hunted with, would creep all through the same hole, though they might have leapt the hedge, and would follow one another in a string, as true as a team of cart-horses. I had rather see them, like the horses of the sun, all a-breast.

the judges going from bench to bench making their examinations.

These shows continued without any governing body, without any rules and without any written blueprints for judging the dogs. All animals exhibited at shows prior to 1864 were judged by 'rule of thumb'; but in that year, an attempt was made by Mr. Esquilant to settle the points of the carrier pigeon. Since that time, the plan then proposed by him has been taken up and carried out in practice by the National Columbarian Society, the example selected by them being the carrier pigeon, which was described, and its properties numerically allotted, in The Field of March 18, 1865, although it is certainly one of the most difficult cases which could possibly be selected for that purpose. In that article, which is undoubtedly of the greatest interest to the pigeon-fancier, this variety of the bird has 25 properties assigned to it, with a numerical value attached to each, amounting in the whole to 119. This fact, in itself, will give some idea of the difficulty of the task undertaken by the society, and it will also afford encouragement to others to follow the example so laudably set. See photo reproduced of the standard for carrier pigeons. Exhibit 5.

Soon after the bird exhibitors came up with a standard for their judges, the dog show exhibitors wanted a standard for dogs. The first suggested dog show standard was patterned after the pigeon standard. See photo reproduced of the first standard for dogs. Exhibit 6.

The dog show standard, patterned after the pigeon standard, did not satisfy the exhibitors nor the judges. The exhibitors took their debate to Dr. John Henry Walsh, better known by his pen name "Stonehenge." Dr. Walsh was professor of anatomy at the Aldersgate School of Medicine as well as carrying on a private practice of medicine in London.

From 1858-1888 he became editor of what, at that time, was the world's foremost sporting magazine, The Field. From 1860-1865 that magazine was dedicated to airing the 'pros' and 'cons' for dog show rules, regulations and standards.

The five big issues debated in this magazine during those five years were:

1. Should the dogs be judged on their benches, or should the whole of each class be led out together to an open space or ring?
2. Should they be led out by their owners or keepers, or by the officials of the show.
3. Should the judging be done in public or in private.
4. Should there be written standards for each breed, or should the dogs be judged by rule of thumb?
5. Should there be one judge or three judges and how should they be selected?

Dr. Walsh took a strong stand, editorially, for a written word-picture-blue-print standard. He published proposed standards and invited his readers for comments.

In 1867 Dr. Walsh published a book, Dogs of the British Isles. This book contained 35 written standards for 35 breeds of dogs. These had been molded by Dr. Walsh out of seven years of fiery debates with breeders and exhibitors. The shows accepted the standards and guidelines in this book by which the judges and breeders were to abide. A second edition of the book came out in 1872 containing standards for additional breeds. A third edition came out in 1878, a fourth in 1882, and a final fifth edition in 1886.

The American Kennel Club was organized in 1884 and it accepted the third edition of this book (1878) as its book of standards which held until 1929. It was in 1929 that Dr. J.E. De Mund was president of the American Kennel Club and he pioneered in getting up a book of printed standards written by the breed clubs of America. It contained standards for 99 breeds.

The Canadian Kennel Club was founded in 1888. It adopted the 1878 edition as its book of standards. The Kennel Club of Canada adhered to this until the American Kennel Club adopted its book of standards in 1929 and then The Canadian Kennel Club adopted the edition of the American Kennel Club. The Canadian Kennel Club published its first book of standards in 1962.

The English Kennel Club was founded in 1873 and it followed for its standards the various editions of this book until 1904. That year the English Kennel Club published its first book of standards. Speaking in round numbers, The Canadian Kennel Club, the American Kennel Club, and the English Kennel Club each recognize about 125 different breeds, but have their own policy of developing and revising their standards.

There is however, one international body whose sphere of influence is wider than any one country. It began in Europe with its headquarters in Belguim and has spread to many other countries, including South America, and is known to everyone connected with dogs as the Federation Cynologique Internationale (FCI).

Thirty-one countries are federated within the FCI, and all the breeds recognized by those countries are accepted by the FCI, and are eligible for the award of the title 'International Champion'. A further 15 countries are associated with the FCI, though not federated, and in those countries the title of International Champion is not available. The FCI recognizes nearly 300 breeds of dogs, which is something like twice as many as any other individual country.

In February of 1978, the FCI sponsored a world conference of kennel clubs held in London, England. Its main objective was to start the ball rolling toward uniform international standards. The American Kennel Club sent a delegate and voiced the strongest objection to the idea of an international uniform set of dog show standards for all breeds. The American Kennel Club based its objection on the grounds that this might lead to the individual breed clubs losing control of their respective breeds.

This is a point well taken and should never be forgotten. The individual breed clubs should never lose control over their breeds. However, there is nothing more powerful than a new idea whose time has come. I feel the time has come for uniform international standards and for uniform international recognition of judges. Furthermore, I feel that this can be done without the breed clubs losing control over their breeds. I have had a research paper on my drawing board for the past four years dealing with the revising and internationalizing of our dog show standards. The article will be released soon. It will not have all the answers — it will not be the last word — it will not have immediate universal approval, but I feel it will contribute something positive to the great international 'doggy' debate.

Albinism Deficiency of pigment in skin, coat, nails, eyes, nose, or eye rims. Hereditary trait.
Almond Eyes Shaped by surrounding tissue into slightly slanted ovals.
Angulation Angles formed where two bones meet to create a joint e.g. shoulder, stifle, hock.
Apple Head Rounded, dome-shaped skull.
Apron Long hair or frill on chest of coated breeds.
Back Portion between withers and set-on of tail along spinal column.
Balance Overall, symmetrical proportion in relation of parts, bones, etc.
Barrel Ribs Ribs that curve evenly outward from brisket along spinal column.
Bat Ear Erect ear, broad at base with rounded or semi-rounded tip, directed forward.
Beard Profuse whisker growth on under jaw.
Beefy Overdevelopment of muscles in hindquarters.
Belton Mottled mixture of coloured and white hairs: blue, lemon, orange or liver.
Bitch Female.
Bite Alignment of teeth when jaws are closed.
Blaze White or light coloured streak down centre of face.
Blocky Squared box-like head.
Bloom The sheen of the coat in best condition.
Blue Merle Mottled mixture of blue, grey and black.
Bobtail Tailless or tail docked very short.
Bow-legged Front or hind legs curved apart at hocks. Hocking out.
Brace A pair or couple of similar dogs.
Bridge of Nose Bones between nostrils and stop.
Brindle Mottled mixture of black hairs with light brown, tan or grey.
Brisket Lower front of ribcage between forelegs.
Broken Colour Predominant colour with patches of another.
Broken-haired Rough, wiry coat.
Broken-up Face Receding nose, undershot jaw, deep stop and wrinkle. e.g. Bulldog.
Brush Full, bushy tail.
Bull-necked Thick, heavy muscular development in neck.
Burr Inside of the ear.
Butterfly Nose A light and dark spotted nose.
Buttocks The muscular part of the rear.
Button Ear Folding forward, tip close to skull.
Canines Two upper and two lower flesh-tearing teeth next to incisors.
Carpals Small bones forming pastern joint.
Cat Foot Compact, highly-arched foot.
Challenge Certificate Award of the English Kennel Club. (CC) behaviour and intelligence typical of a certain breed.
Cheeky Cheeks thick, rounded and protruding.
Chest Area of body enclosed by ribs.
China Eye Clear blue or white eye.
Chiseled Clean-cut in head, especially around eyes.
Chops Pendulous, fleshy jaws.
Clip Trimming style of coat for a particular breed.
Cloddy Low, heavy-set build.
Close-coupled Short in body from withers to hips.
Cobby Short-bodied, compact.
Collar Marking around neck, usually white.
Common Coarse, lacking elegance and type.
Companion Dog (CD), obedience title (CDX), Companion Dog Excellent.
Conformation Form and structure compared to breed standard.
Corky Active, lively, alert.
Corny Feet Thick, calloused pads.
Coupling Body between withers and hipbones.
Cowhocked Hock joints turn toward each other causing feet to turn out. 'Hocking out'.
Crabbing The body held at an angle to direction of movement so rear legs do not interfere with front legs.
Crank Tail Short tail bent down then away from the body.
Crest Upper arched portion of neck.
Cropping Trimming ear leather to a point so they will stand erect.
Croup Area of back over pelvis and set-on of tail.
Crown Highest part of skull.
Cryptorchid Adult male with undescended testicles.
Culotte Longer hair on back of thighs.
Cushion Fullness of upper lips and foreface.
Dappled Mottled marking of colours, no colour dominant.
Daylight "Too much daylight under a dog" means too high in the leg.
Dewclaws Claws on the inside of the legs.
Dewlap Pendulous skin under throat.
Dimple Depression on either side of chest.
Dish-faced Nose higher at tip than at stop with concave muzzle.
Disqualification Fault making dog ineligible to compete.
Distemper Teeth Discoloured or pitted teeth due to disease.
Dock To cut tail to comply with standard.
Dog Male. Often used for both males and females collectively.
Domed Rounded topskull or crown.
Double Coat Short soft undercoat with longer, coarser outer coat.
Down-faced Muzzle tilting downward from forehead to tip of nose.
looseness.
Dudley Nose Flesh coloured.
Ear Fringes Long silky hair on lower edges of leather.
Elbow Joint between upper and lower foreleg (humerus and radius-ulna).
Elbows Out Turning out. Not held close to body.
Erect Pasterns Showing no slope of front pastern.
Even Bite Meeting of front teeth with no overlap of upper or lower jaw (incisors).
Ewe-necked Top of neck is concave from skull to withers.
Expression Appearance of eyes, surrounding tissue, ears, mouth and head in comparison with the breed standard.
Fall Long hair over the eyes or face in some breeds.
Feathering Longer hair fringe on ears, legs, tail or belly.
Femur Thigh bone, extends from hip to tibia-fibula forming stifle-joint.
Fiddle Face Long, narrow foreface.
Fiddle Front Out at elbows, pasterns close, feet turned out. French front.
Flag Fringed long tail.
Flank Area between last rib and hip.
Flare Blaze that widens as it approaches the topskull.
Flat Bone Leg bones correctly elipitcal rather than rounded.
Flat Croup Not sufficiently sloping.
Flat-sided Lacking proper roundness through ribs.
Flews Pendulous lips, particularly at inner corners.
Fly Ears Ears flopping in opposite directions. A fault in some breeds.
Forearm Foreleg between elbow and pastern (radius and ulna).
Foreface Area of head nose to stop, muzzle.
Frill Long hair on chest. Apron.
Fringes Longer hair on ears, tail, legs. Feathers.
Frog Face Extending nose, receding jaw. Usually overshot.
Front Forepart of body (forelegs, chest, brisket and shoulders).
Full Eye Round, slightly bulbous eye.
Furrow Indentation down centre of skull to stop.
Gait Movement of dog.
Gay Tail Carried high.
Gazehound Hunts by sight rather than scent. Sighthound.
Goose Rump Croup too steeply sloping.
Grizzle Bluish grey colour.
Gun-barrel Front Absolutely straight forelegs.
Hare Foot Elongated narrow foot.

Heel Rear pad on feet.
High Stationed A dog that is high on leg but not necessarily unbalanced or too leggy.
Hock Joint Joint between tibia-fibula and metatarsal.
Hound-marked White, tan and black, stated in order of predominance.
Jowls Fleshy lips and jaws.
Kink Tail Sharply bent.
Knuckled Over Weak pastern joints causing forelegs to bend forward.
Layback Receding nose, undershot jaw. Broken-up face e.g. Bulldog.
Layback of Shoulder Scapula runs up, back.
Leather Ear flap.
Leggy Legs long for body.
Level Bite Edges of upper and lower incisors meet. Pincer bite. Even bite.
Loaded Shoulders Overdevelopment of shoulder muscles causing shoulder blades to be shoved outward.
Low-set Base of tail below level of topline.
Low-set Ears Attached to side of head rather than top.
Lower Thigh Stifle to hock.
Mane Abundant hair around back of neck.
Mantle Dark coat on shoulders, back and sides.
Mask Dark shading on foreface.
Median Line Furrow down centre of skull to stop.
Merle Black, blue and grey marbelized colour.
Monorchid Male dog with only one testicle descended.
Muzzle Foreface ahead of eyes.
Muzzle Band White marking around muzzle.
Occipital Protruberance Tip of back point of skull.
Occiput Upper, back point of skull.
Otter Tail Thick at base, tapering.
Out at Elbows Elbows turn out from body.
Out at Shoulder Shoulder blades set loosely so that joints protrude.
Overhang Pronounced brow.
Overshot Incisors of upper jaw overlapping those of under jaw when mouth is closed.
Padding Picking up front feet higher than necessary.
Paddling Moving with forefeet wide, inducing body swing.
Pads Soles of feet.
Paperfoot Thin, often tender pads.
Parti-colour Variegated patches of two or more colours.
Pastern Joint between wrist or hock and toes.
Pencilling Black lines dividing tan on toes.
Pied Patches of two or more colours. Piebald, parti-coloured.
Pig Jaw Exaggerated overshot jaw.
Pigeon-breasted Chest with protruding breastbone.
Points Colour on face, ears, legs and tail when correlated. Usually black, white or tan.
Pompom Rounded tuft of hair left on tail in poodle clip.
Prick Ear Carried erect, usually pointed at tip.
Racy Lean, long-legged build.
Ram's Nose Arched muzzle.
Rangy Long-bodied, lacking depth of chest.
Rat Tail Thin tail with soft hair covering all except tip e.g. Irish Water Spaniel.
Ribs 13 pairs, 9 'true' ribs, 3 'false' and 1 floating.
Ring Tail Curves in a circle over back.
Roach Back Convex curvature of spine towards loin, e.g. Whippet.
Roan Mixture of coloured with white hair. Blue, orange, lemon.
Roman Nose High bridge arched from forehead to nose tip.
Rose Ear Small drop ear folding over and back so burr is visible.
Ruff Profuse hair around neck.
Saber Tail Carried in a low semi-circle.
Sable Black hair over lighter ground colour.
Saddle Black marking over back.
Scapula Shoulder blade.
Scissors Bite Outer side of lower incisors touches inner side of upper incisors.
Screw Tail Naturally short tail in spiral form.
Self-colour Solid colour or one colour with lighter shadings.
Semi-prick Ear Erect with tips bent forward.
Septum Cleft extending vertically between nostrils.
Shallow Brisket Lack of depth in rib section.
Shelly Narrow, shallow body lacking bone to balance size.
Short-coupled Short body relative to height.
Sickle Tail Carried out and up in a semi-circle.
Skully Thick coarse skull.
Slab-sided Flat-ribbed.
Slew Foot Outward turning foot.
Sloping Shoulder Scapula set obliquely or laid back.
Smooth Coat Short, stiff hair laying flat against the body.
Snipey Weak, pointed muzzle.
Snowshoe Foot Webbed toes.
Soundness Firm and strong with normal physical and mental health.
Spayed Female whose ovaries have been removed surgically.
Spectacles Dark markings around eyes.
Splashed Irregularly patched colour on white, or white on colour.
Splay Foot Flat foot with spreading toes.
Spread Width between forelegs.
Spring of Ribs Degree of roundness in rib cage.
Squirrel Tail Carried up, curving forward over back.
Stern Tail of sporting dog or hound.
Straight-hocked Lacking angulation at hock joints.
Straight in Pastern Little slope between joint and foot.
Straight in Shoulder Insufficient angulation at shoulder.
Substance Good bone structure.
Superciliary Arches Prominent brow.
Swayback Sagging back between wither and hip bones.
Team Four of same breed.
Teeth 'Milk' teeth are replaced by 42 permanent teeth.
Tendon Sinewy tissue connecting muscle to bone.
Throatiness Excess loose skin under throat.
Thumb Marks Black spots on pasterns.
Ticked Small areas of black or coloured hair on white ground.
Tilted Jaw Lower jaw to one side or another when viewed from the front. Wry mouth.
Timber Bone, especially of legs.
Topknot Tuft of longer hair on top of head.
Topline Profile of dog from top of skull to base of tail.
Trace Dark stripe down back e.g. Pug.
Triangular Eye Set in surrounding tissue of triangular shape.
Tricolour Three colours; black, white and tan.
Trousers Shaggy leg hair e.g. Afghan.
Trumpet Slight depression on side of skull behind eye, similar to temple in man.
Tuck-up Body depth at loin.
Tulip Ear Carried erect with slight forward curvature at sides.
Turn-up Up-tilted foreface.
Type Characteristic qualities of a breed.
Undershot Incisors of lower jaw projecting beyond incisors of upper jaw.
Upright in Shoulder Insufficient layback (angulation at shoulder and upper arm).
Upsweep Lower jaw turns up and is undershot.
Utility Dog (UD) Obedience title.
Vent Light hair surrounding the anal opening.
Walleye Blue, fish or pearl eye.
Weedy Lack of sufficient bone.
Well Let Down Desirable angulation of stifle and hock joints.
Wet Neck Loose superfluous skin, or dewlap.
Wheaten Pale yellow or fawn colour.
Wheel Back Back arched from withers to hips. Roach back.
Whip Tail Stiff straight tail e.g. Pointer.
Whiskers Long hairs on chin and muzzle.
Wire-haired Hard, coarse coat.
Withers Highest part of body between tips of shoulder blades.
Wrinkle Loose folding skin on forehead and foreface.
Wry Mouth Lower jaw tilted from one side to another. Not aligned with upper jaw.

On judges' fees and ethics

Should judges be paid, plus 11 other thoughtful questions, answered by popular judge Maxwell Riddle

When Dogs in Canada asked me to write this article, I was hesitant. What right have I to tell other judges what to charge or how to act? And what right do I have to tell show committees how to select judges? But I am a judge, and I do judge world wide, so I know some of the problems. As for the answers, they are personal. They deal with my conscience and my conception of my duty to the game and to the clubs, and they are not based on what other judges do.

I am also a show chairman. So I know the problems from the other end as well. And having thought it over, I agreed to write the article.

The most puzzling questions for judges, both experienced and beginners, deal with what to charge. And then there are those endlessly argued questions of relationships to exhibitors at the show, and whether or not a judge should withhold ribbons.

Can, and should, everyone charge for judging?

Well, when dog shows were just beginning, judging was considered to be a gentleman's sport. To be asked to judge was an honour. A gentleman did not charge. To do so would make him, or her, a hired hand, one not entitled to be called a gentleman or lady.

You did not, for example, call a jockey Mister. He was a menial, and so not entitled to be given the title of a gentleman. This idea still holds to some extent. For example, professional judges cannot be delegates to the American Kennel Club. And delegates are expected to abide by the rule not to charge beyond their expenses. That many inflate their expenses outrageously is beside the point.

I remember a very wealthy man who refused to charge even expenses. For him, this was prostituting his honour. Perhaps there have been others. On the whole, however, I go under the assumption that "the labourer is worth his hire."

Should permit, or provisional judges charge?

Many need assignments. If they live close to the show-giving club, then I think no charge is indicated. But if they live a great distance away, then expenses should be charged.

Do judges charge in England, Australia, and other countries?

It is difficult to answer this. England is a small country. The expense is not great as compared to the distances which Americans and Canadians may have to travel. I remember that a judge charged $700 to come over for Ravenna and Chagrin. Sometime later I was asked to judge at his show. I was offered one night's lodging and a Continental breakfast.

Of course, Canadians and Americans have spoiled the British by scheduling vacations over there, and then announcing in Dog World or Popular Dogs that they will be available at no charge.

Are judges for other sporting events paid, e.g. tennis, football, etc.?
Yes. For instance, football referees may earn as much as $800 a game. I remember that recently, in crossing over to Canada to judge, immigration officials demanded my work permit. But upon review, it was ruled that dog judges are not different from umpires and referees. And Canada does not require them of the Big League umpires and so decided to exempt dog judges, too.

Should judging be looked upon as a primary source of income when one retires from business?
I do not think so, although I realize that some judges feel that way. To do so leads to solicitation of shows, to trading assignments, and to other forms of true, and undersirable, professionalism.

Is it a privilege to judge?
Certainly. And it should always be regarded as such. Yet it is also work when one must judge 175 dogs, plus groups, under often atrocious weather or other conditions. Moreover, some judges are in constant demand and may judge 40 to 50 shows a year.

They then have to consider 'family.' They must be away weekends. And weekends are the times when people get together socially with friends. So those weekends away make hermits of wives and destroy friendships. This certainly must be considered in deciding what, and how much to charge.

Should a judge charge for a charity show?
Yes. He might reduce the fee, if it is a charity in which he, or she, believes. But the judge may, and should, have his own charities to which he should contribute. And he does as much work whether or not the show is a charitable event.

Also, probably more than half of the shows given in Canada and the United States give a portion of their profits to charity, and so may be called charitable events.

How many shows would rate having a judge waive the fee because of the prestige of the event?
So far as I am concerned, none. Probably all shows in Canada and the United States show a profit today. As a show chairman, I resent those judges who will waive fee and expenses to judge at Westminster and Santa Barbara, or similar events, while charging both a fee and expenses for clubs far less able to afford them.

However, there is a public service element involved. And in many cases, there are heavy expenses. Here I have to inject my own personal solution. I would not charge above expenses for Bermuda, Mexico, Barbados, South America, Europe, Australia — for both reasons. That is, we owe our sport some public service. Often the clubs are small, and they cannot afford to pay more than the heavy expenses involved. Nor should they have to do so.

I believe that the major British shows can afford to pay the expenses of a Canadian or American judge. And so I wll not accept shows there unless they do. A Swedish club is paying all my expenses, as is one in Spain. If Spain can afford to do so, so can England.

I have no way to know what other American judges charge to officiate in Canada. I can only say that I try to make my own charges about what Canadian judges would charge.

How much have fees escalated in the last ten years?
My guess is that they have doubled, and in the case of some judges, tripled. If, as is asked, American judges have escalated their fees far above those of Canadian judges (in some cases), then there may be several reasons. American shows have strongly escalated entry fees. And they are making money.

Some judges will tell you that they are the world's greatest. And so they have elevated their fees above those of others and charge all the traffic will bear. Although I detest those clubs which obviously are trying to put together the cheapest possible panel, without regard to the quality of the judges, they may be justified in rejecting those who charge excessive fees.

I believe it can be demonstrated that exhibitors do not enter a show because it has a rich prize or trophy list. They first check the judges' list. If they do not like the judge of their breed, not even a $100 cash prize will get them to enter.

The show chairman should be trying to put together the finest panel possible. New faces in the area are usually beneficial, since exhibitors cannot blast them beforehand. Also judges should be selected who have not judged the breeds for which you want them in your area for a year or more.

How much of the show budget should be for judges?
Although I have been a show chairman for one or more clubs for 40 years, I cannot answer this. I have never budgetted judges since I believe that if the judges are highly competent and well respected, and are reasonably fresh for the breeds they are to judge, entries will more than make up for their charges.

Clubs in isolated areas may be justified in doing so, since entries will be small. But in such cases, I believe that judges owe it to the game to charge expenses only. And clubs are justified in asking them to do so.

Should a judge withhold ribbons?
This can bring on endless debate. It certainly can be argued than an unworthy dog should not receive a blue ribbon. For example, dogs of very poor type, and dogs which are very shy.

A judge might give such a dog a second ribbon, if alone in the class. A diplomatic way to handle it is to explain to the exhibitor that while the dog seems to be a nice pet it is not quite worthy of a first prize.

If the dog seems to be of good type, but is too shy to be handled, it should be excused. The judge can explain that if it can be cured of its shyness, then it is a very nice dog and might win at future shows.

Dogs which bite the judge, or try to do so, should be chased out immediately. If the standard permits it, the dog should be disqualified. The reason for the dismissal should be noted in the judge's book. A major fault with the American system is that fear biters can be disqualified or dismissed. But they can be taken home to breed more fear biters. Someday, perhaps, national registration bodies will wake up, and will destroy the papers of such dogs.

Some judges are afraid to dismiss dogs for lack of quality, or to measure them, fearing they will not get future assignments. My experience is that they will be praised instead of damned.

Yet there is another reason for not withholding ribbons. Our points system is based on the number of dogs competing. Dismissing a dog may rob a very worthy dog of deserving championship points. Major points are often difficult to find. Recently I dismissed an Irish Setter for trying to bite. It destroyed a four points major.

Should a judge fraternize with exhibitors pre-show?
No. Too many people will howl 'fix' immediately even when the conversation is about the weather. I try to arrive at the show just before judging time to avoid this. But many clubs try to get you to the show an hour ahead or more. When that happens, you have to hide — at the superintendent's table, the club's table or private office.

Most judges get extemely angry when greeted in the ring with: "Good morning, judge. It is good to have you back in our area." Or similar words. But you are helpless, and you can't take it out on the dog.

Then there are those exhibitors who will whisper that: "He just needs this one to finish," or "He was best of breed yesterday." When this happens, you aren't helpless, and you can make certain that that exhibitor will never try that again with you, or any other judge.

Write in your judge's book: "Exhibitor of dog No...said: "This dog just needs this one to finish. This will not affect my judgment of the dog."

Then, if the dog deserves to win, he does. But the exhibitor knows that he was unable to influence you, and the entire show will know that that person tried to pull a dishonest trick.

One opinion of all rounders V.I.P.'s

You may agree that all-round judges aren't lousy, just some of them. The rest are great.

By R. H. Oppenheimer

Some months ago I was introduced to a distinguished Australian all-round judge who remarked "You're the chap who thinks all-round judges are lousy." I hotly denied the charge!

My companion then went on "but you say that groups and Bests in Show are a farce which must mean that judges don't know their job." Very politely I explained that the conclusions he had drawn were a perfect 'non-sequitur' and that my views had nothing whatever to do with the judges for many of whom I had indeed the greatest admiration: May I explain?

We have on T.V. in Britain, (I do not know if you have it in Canada) a program called 'The Superstars'. In this, various athletes, swimmers, boxers, footballers, cricketers and so on, all compete in a series of sporting events at the end of which one man is declared 'Superstar' of the year. The program draws immense audiences and I myself never miss it. It is the greatest fun, but nobody takes the view that the winner is, by his victory, the greatest athlete in the world.

This is exactly how I feel about Bests in Show. I find them great fun, I thoroughly enjoy it when I win but the victory to me is similar to a victory in a Christmas raffle and does nothing to make me think more of my exhibit since the judge is asked to do the impossble. To judge six dogs ranging from a Great Dane down to a Mexican Hairless seems to me as devoid of basic significance as it would be to get one distinguished critic to say whether Nicklaus, Connors, Juantorena, Pele and a dozen other great games players was the best. The decision would be totally devoid of any real meaning.

To say that I consider all all-round judges to be useless is an absurdity. Of course there are bad all-round judges but there are plenty of ghastly specialists and for good all-rounders, as I have said, I have immense regard.

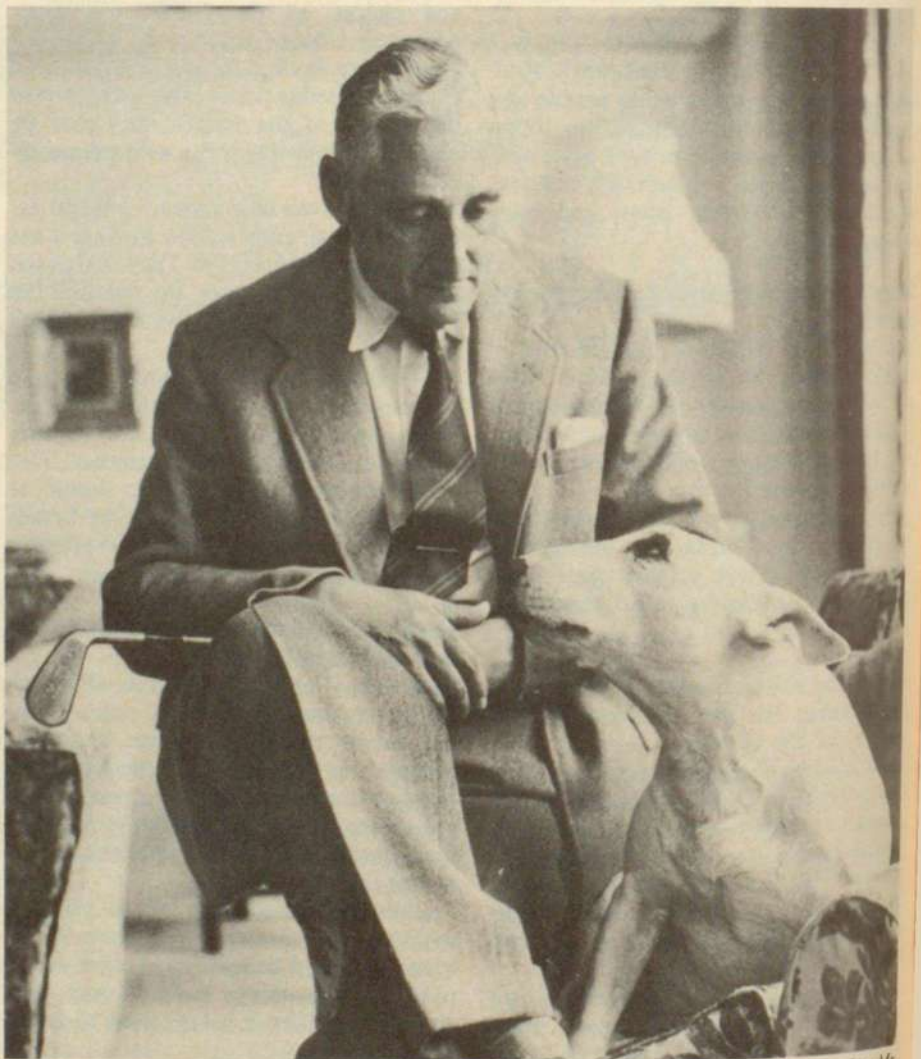
Ten years ago I had the pleasure of sitting with the great Alva Rosenberg at Windsor show here in Britain while an outstanding specialist, Mrs. Yearsly, judged the breed. In something under one minute Mr. Rosenberg picked out the winners in each class, finishing by naming the two certificate winners as they entered the ring and from these two are descended most of today's winners in Britain and a vast number of those in U.S.A., too!

By contrast, I watched another famous all-rounder, or should I perhaps say notorious all-rounder, miss, as clean as a whistle, an outstanding dog which has since proved his worth by producing top class sons and daughters in profusion.

That same day, another well known all-rounder sitting watching at the ringside, leant across to me and said, as Open Dog was judged, "Surely you would not have put that dog up", to which I answered "No." "I should hope not", remarked the critic, "with that pink on its nose!" I had, in fact, not noticed the pink on its nose but I had noticed a poor front, a bad back line and indifferent hindquarters!

For all-rounders such as these I have no respect at all, for the Alva Rosenbergs my respect is unlimited.

To conclude this little piece, I find it impossible to answer when I am asked the frequently posed question "which do you consider the more important — soundness or type?" The truth is that both are of the greatest importance and the top class judge is the one who takes a balanced view of all the exhibits before him, weighing dispassionately the virtues and the faults of each but bearing in mind the eternal verity that there is not more useless animal, so far as breed progress is concerned, than the blameless nonentity, a mere absence of obvious faults is no virtue but the presence of obvious virtues is of great potential worth.



It is doubtful that any single man or woman has had a more profound influence on dogs than Mr. Oppenheimer has had on Bull Terriers. Two subjects caught his fancy at an early age, golf and Bull Terriers. He obtained his first Bull Terrier in 1934; since then, has written two books on the breed, judged the breed all over the world and writes for numerous magazines and organizations. Mr. Oppenheimer lives in England, still actively engaged in breeding his world famous Ormonde Bull Terriers.

Requirements for approval to judge in Canada, the U.S.A. and England

Some substantial differences exist in their systems

By Mrs. J. H. Daniell-Jenkins

The recently established systems of 'permit judging' in Canada and 'provisional judging' in the United States (which must be completed before candidates can be approved for the permanent list of judges), while appearing fairly similar at a casual glance, in fact present some interesting differences.

In Canada, the Chapter Seven Committee of the CKC handles all applications; the form to be filled out includes a questionnaire testing the applicant's knowledge of the Dog Show Rules (eight questions), and requires a description in 150 words of the candidate's ideal specimen of the breed(s) applied for, a description of the breed's important characteristics and most serious faults; and he/she must also give proof of having had at least ten years experience as a breeder and as an exhibitor, must have judged at three sanction matches in Canada within the last five years, must have been a resident of Canada during that five years, and must not be under 21 years of age. He/she must have sound knowledge of the breed or breeds applied for, limited within one group, and not more than half a group, except for Group 6. If a permit is refused, the Committee must state its reasons for the refusal, and the applicant must wait at least a year before re-applying. Notice of the approval is posted in Dogs in Canada; three observers will be appointed to report on the first assignment, depending on which report the Committee will base its decision to issue a second permit. After the second assignment the Chapter Seven Committee will decide whether the applicant's name will be placed on the approved list; no further assignment can be negotiated until that decision has been made and posted. These two assignments must be completed before an applicant may seek additional breeds.

Judges already approved may apply in the same way for half a group, and two assignments must be completed before further application can be made; if he/she already has three groups, a whole group may be applied for, and only one assignment is necessary before asking for another group.

Dorothea Daniell-Jenkins.

In the United States, the entire process takes longer. Although an exact period of years is not required, and the applicant must have owned several dogs of the breed applied for, give evidence (listing all litters) of some breeding experience in the breed, have stewarded at a number of AKC member shows and judged a number of sanctioned matches, sweepstakes, or futurities, compiled a record of exhibiting over a substantial number of years, have 'a strong overall background and involvement in the sport of dogs', and an applicant must meet an occupational requirement which disallows any person connected with any publication as solicitor for kennel advertisements, persons concerned with dog food, dog remedy, or kennel supply companies, persons employed in kennels or who in any way trade or traffic in dogs as a means of livelihood, and professional show superintendents. By a recently instituted service a personal interview with an AKC Field Representative may also be required and is generally advised. The paperwork, like the CKC forms, includes a description of the ideal specimen of the breed applied for, important breed characteristics and faults, and a test (but with 25 questions) to show knowledge of Dog Show Rules.

After initial screening of the applications, they are submitted to a staff committee and then to a Committee of the Board, then to the Board of Directors for consideration for publication in the American Kennel Gazette as Provisional Judging Applicants. Two months later (allowing time for possible letters from the general public) the application is again submitted to the Board for final approval and publication. Three judging assignments in each breed must then be completed, after which the Provisional must notify the AKC in writing that he/she has completed the assignments (listing each assignment), and only then will the Provisional's record be submitted for approval and granting of regular judging status.

Established judges must complete at least three, and preferably five, assignments in each breed for which they were most recently approved before applying for further breeds; such applications then go to the Board of Directors, without further publication in the Gazette until approval is posted; the applicant must supply details of assignments and all show activity in exhibiting in the past three years, and justify his/her application for further breeds by describing his experience with and knowledge of them.

The AKC very rarely grants a whole group at a time, even to judges already licensed for three or four groups. One result of this is that there are currently some 15 all-breed judges licensed by the AKC, as against over 60 Canadian all-rounders.

By contrast, the English Kennel Club does not license judges and does not even maintain a list of judges. Approval is granted for each individual assignment regardless of previous experience. Some comments on the situation are of interest. From Stafford Somerfield, columnist in the (English) Dog World weekly: "There is still so much to be done (and the Kennel Club does nothing in this respect) to train and test judges. If you have to be tested to see if you can drive a car, why not a test to see if you can judge a dog?" From R.H. Oppenheimer (Chairman of the Judges Committee of the Kennel Club), speaking as Chairman of the session on 'Recognition of Judges' at the World Conference of Kennel Clubs in February 1978: "...We are often asked why there are no examinations ...Many judges who are quite superlatively good at answering things written down, are perfectly hopeless in the ring...It is very easy for the Judges Com-

What you should know before buying your recreational vehicle

With more and more exhibitors taking to the road, taking your home with you could be the answer

By Mike Macbeth

In Britain, not too many years ago, most exhibitors would box their dogs and travel by train to distant dog shows. In America, the station wagon became de rigeur for the afficionado. But today, behind arenas all over the U.S. and Canada, more and more expensive motor homes regally occupy three or four parking spaces. Increasingly, diehard exhibitors are discovering that the only way to survive the long showing season is in comfort and style. And motor home manufacturers are jostling for this new market, offering a wide selection of vehicles, suitable for every pocketbook.

These 'land yachts' lure the buyer with luxurious options such as trash-mashers, ice makers, air conditioning, colour TV, and microwave ovens. One can spend as much on a motor home as on a sailboat. In fact, keep a sailboat in mind if you're considering purchasing a motor home. Like boats, these land crafts can be bought bare bones or custom outfitted to the buyer's specification. They depreciate little, if any, and sometimes even appreciate in value. And like a sloop or ketch, one must assume a caveat emptor approach to its purchase. Remember, you're buying the steak, along with the sizzle.

Generically, recreational vehicles cover a wide range of trucks, vans and four-wheel drives. The converted van is popular with the young and the self-contained camper, that fits into the back of a 1/2 ton pickup truck, is useful to hunters, fishermen and small families. Sometimes people create their own motor home, using anything from a lowly used schoolbus to a magnificent $100,000 Provost motor coach. But most of the dog fancy are turning to the Junior motor home, which is a truck chassis with a box built on behind it, or the Senior motor home, the luxurious all-in-one component. Juniors and seniors can be distinguished from one another by the number of doors the vehicle possesses. The juniors have the two doors of the truck, with another entrance behind, while the senior motor homes have one entrance only, usually at the side.

Winnebago Brave. The 23-foot model is so popular that the 1978 Brave was priced $27 less than the 1977 21-footer. Manufacturer's suggested base retail price, $13,199 (U.S.), (F.O.B. Forest City).*

Dogs in Canada looked at some of the motor homes that are available to the dog fancy, from the popular and relatively inexpensive Winnebago, to the imperious Foretravel motor yacht. Curiously, no major car manufacturer makes a motor home. General Motors did produce the exquisite GMC until last year, when the large front wheel drive chassis on the Cadillac Eldorado, which formed its backbone, was scaled down to the new car size. However, most RV manufacturers use GM, Ford or Chrysler truck or van-chassis to construct their product.

Ironically, unlike automobiles, Canadian manufacturers dominate the motor home market in this country. A 30% import duty freezes out most of the major American companies, with the exception of the ubiquitous Winnebago, which is mass produced so reasonably that it is competitively priced with our Canadian models, despite its disadvantages of duty.

Dog people who have succumbed to the lure of arriving at a show refreshed and relaxed cite the many advantages of owning a motor home. "We look upon our Triple E as a travelling home", says Fred Peddie, who co-owns the RV along with his Bu-Dynasty Chow Chows with Herb and Joan Williams. "We looked for quality of workmanship, how corners were mitred, for example. There's a lot of lipstick and polish to these motor homes, but if they're well built you won't get rattles. It drives you crazy if things are banging around during the entire trip."

Two options that Fred considers necessities are cruise control and an awning. "The awning is a must for outdoor shows. It keeps the dogs cool and shaded, and provides a dry area to exercise the dogs in the rain." The cruise control, and the high driver's seat with its excellent visability, makes long distance driving infinitely easier.

Relaxation seems to be the key appeal of the motor home. "If the breed is judged at 9:00 a.m. and the groups and Best in Show are at the end of the day, both you and your dog are more relaxed if you return to the motor home to eat, read, or perhaps have a nap," says Fred. "We've all been more rested since buying the Triple E." Another advantage is the splendid galley that most RVs offer. If you are sick of dog show arena hot dogs, and prefer quiet gourmet dinners, maybe you should consider a motor home.

What should the prospective purchaser look for? First, decide your priorities. Is this a travelling kennel, or motorized hotel room? If you have more than a couple of dogs, you may consider a separate living and kennel area. Check that the unit you are contemplating has enough storage space for your crates and grooming equipment. Make sure the generator has enough power to supply your needs; most batteries will not operate elements in elec-

And talk to dog owners who hav the model you are considering — havin lived with the unit, they may have som helpful suggestions for modifications.

Finally, if you are toying with the ide of a motor home, but concerned abou the $15,000 + price tag, consider this: recent Dogs in Canada article suggeste that it costs almost $70 for the averag weekend dog show. An afficionado migh attend 20 or 30 weekend shows each year $15,000, financed over five years, is a outlay of $80 per week. Since depreciation is slower in a motor home than a car, which is used constantly, bank managers are often willing to finance the RV over a longer period than 60 months. And often, if well maintained, a motor home will appreciate. The 1973 GMC, that cost $30,000 new, will sell for that amount today. A 1978 model costs almost twice that amount. It's a canny hedge against inflation, while reducing the accommodation and wearying costs of your showing weekends. Just be sure that the motor home you buy has enough shelf space. With you and your dog so refreshed and rested, you'll need extra room for all those trophies!

Check list for potential motor home buyers

* Determine your space needs.
* Check maintenance and parts availability
* Make sure electricity source is powerful enough
* Be certain water capacity is sufficient for your needs
* Check storage area. Is the roof flat, to allow extra storage there?
* Make sure air conditioning and heating systems are adequate
* Check carefully for good workmanship and solid construction
* Is the layout practical?
* Determine your financial priorities. Will it be a saving or an encumbrance?
* Buy from a reliable dealer
* Remember, you always get what you pay for

We love New York!

And so should every Canadian, for it was there that a magnificent Irish Water Spaniel became the third Canadian dog in the history of Westminster to capture Best in Show

By Joan Morden

On February 13 the crowd at Madison Square Gardens loved a dog dubbed 'Dugan', an Irish Water Spaniel bred and owned by Anne Snelling of Ottawa who triumphed over an entry of 3,127 to win Best in Show at the Westminster Kennel Club dog show. It was the 103rd consecutive year for America's most prestigious dog event, the third time that a Canadian dog had triumphed and the first BIS win for an Irish Water Spaniel. According to BIS judge Henry Stoecker, Dugan is "the best specimen of the breed I've ever seen." Winning the breed under A. J. Stern, Dugan placed first in the group under Ellsworth Howell and then it was into the strongest BIS line-up of his career for the big win.

This was a sweet triumph for Dugan who had headed the Sporting Group at Westminster in 1977 but failed to earn a placing in 1978. In another way it seemed a 'natural' win for him. Dugan was conceived exactly five years ago when his parents were mated in New York during Westminster weekend, the super pup of every breeder's dreams come true.

Calmest person in the Gardens that night seemed to be his breeder-owner Anne Snelling as she expertly fielded questions from the press.

"Will the dog be shown again?"

"That all depends on his co-owner," answered Anne.

"Co-owner?"

In gratitude for the win Anne has given a half-interest in Dugan to his friend and handler Bill Trainor, with whom he's lived throughout his show campaign.

It was a BIS line-up to make the heart beat faster. From California, representing the Hound Group, was the Norwegian Elkhound Ch. Vin Melca's Nimbus, America's top winning hound of the year, showing the superb movement that has won him 46 Best in Show awards. Only lady in the line-up was the Doberman Pinscher Ch. Marienburg's Mary Hartman, a black and tan, who is also owned in California. And again from California, the Lakeland Terrier, Ch. Cozy's Mischief Maker was in there representing terriers. Toy Group winner was the Pomeranian Ch. Lennis's Tar Lacy Foxfire, a two-year-old red sable from Illinois. While from New Hampshire, the white Miniature Poodle Ch. JLC Critique was the representative from the Non-Sporting Group. It was power all the way. Said Julie Gasow of Salilyn Springer Spaniel fame: "I've watched lots of Westminsters but never a Best in Show as exciting as this!"

Close behind Dugan was another Canadian bred, the Irish Setter Ch. (Can & Am.) McCamon's Marquis, bred and co-owned by Sue Korpan. Superb style and movement earned this dog third place in the Sporting Group.

Altogether, about 50 Canadian bred and/or owned dogs were in competition at Westminster and over 40 percent of these made significant wins. These included Best of Breed to Ch. (Can. & Am.) Cedarpark Storm Warning, German Shorthaired Pointer, bred, owned and handled by Mrs. Clare Park, Deep River, Ont.; the Clumber Spaniel, Ch. (Can. & Am.) Frastan Harvester, owned by Arline Lloyd, Milton, Ont.; Best of Breed in Borzois to Ch. (Can. & Am.) Kishniga's Desert Song owned by Drs. R. Meen and J. Reeve-Newson, Campbellville, Ont., while a male of their breeding, Kishniga's Hermes, was Winners Dog and Best of Winners in Borzoi; Ray Smith's Dachshund, Standard Smooth female Ch. Tanaray's Topaz, was Winners Bitch and Best of Winners; in Bloodhounds, Winners Dog went to Limier Hills Major Oracle owned by Sidney Domina and Tina Major, Brockville, Ont.; in Newfoundlands, Ch. Arval's Nanook, owned by Paul and Carol Hodgkinson, Palgrave, Ont., was named Winners Dog and Best of Winners, while the beautiful bitch Ch. Anastasia's Magic Marker was Reserve Winners. From Beaverlodge, Alta., came the Akita bitch Langan's Amatera Su-O-Mi-Kami, owned by Andy Russell, to take Winners. In the Terrier Group, three Canadian breds won their breeds. These were the Cairn, Ch. (Can. & Am.) Rogerlyn's Sea Hawk's Salty Sam owned by Mrs. Betty Hyslop, Brockville, Ont., also in Cairns Mrs. Hyslop's homebred Cairndania Targon's Thomas was named Winners Dog and Best of Winners; the top-winning Kerry Blue Terrier, Ch. (Can. & Am.) Bluestone's Devil's Duplicate owned by Irene Smith and E. Fieldhouse, Winnipeg, Man.; and the Meen-Reeve-Newson homebred Skye, Ch. (Can. & Am.) Kishniga's Going Strong. It was a double breed victory for Dr. Meen who handled both the Skye and the Borzoi to their wins, the only time in anyone's memory that two breeder-owner handled dogs have scored breed wins at the same Westminster — another record for Kishniga. Also winning well in Terriers were the Australian, Sprite Lea Aaron, owned by A. Hale, Ottawa, who won Winners Dog; the Fox Terrier (Smooth), Strathrobin Jackolynn, bred by Sam Mitchell, Brampton, Ont., who was named Winners Bitch; and in Bull Terriers Best of Variety went to the white bitch Ch. Cannoro Claret, bred by Bernard McCann.

In the Toy Group the Pekingese Ch. (Can. & Am.) St. Aubrey Dragonora of Elsdon, a bitch also owned by Anne Snelling, Ottawa, was Best of Breed. And in Papillons, Jack Babbidge's homebred male, Jaclair's Major, went Winners Dog and Best of Winners.

In the Non-Sporting Group, co-owner Herb Williams handled the Chow Chow, Ch. (Can. & Am.) Mi-Tu's Han Su Shang, to Best of Breed and third in the group; while Canada's top winning Bichon Frise, Ch. Myworth's Enchantement, was named Best of Winners.

With approximately 50 Canadian dogs in competition, 22 of them made significant wins. That is some record and 22 good reasons why Canadians love New York!

AUSSIE IMMIGRANT DOBES: Mrs. Susan Berst, Thunder Bay, Ont., admires the determination of Mr. and Mrs. Noel Tierney of Samford, Australia, for waiting 19 months for their Doberman stud, Pyrmont Portrait von Marnix, to arrive. Porsche spent ten months in Hawaii en-route, four in quarantine and six in residence, then a further nine months in quarantine in Brisbane, Australia. A cropped dog, Porsche cannot be shown in Australia, but the Tierneys have also purchased a black uncropped bitch from Mrs. Berst, Pyrmont Ultima von Nereus, who is presently undergoing the same shipping procedure. They look forward to showing her. (Porsche is pictured above.)

Breeder's viewpoint

By Ariel Sleeth

Frequently, there are articles bemoaning the fact that the novice does not get enough help from the established breeders. When there are publications such as Dogs, and countless breed magazines, it is my belief that the novice never before had it so good. Many breed clubs hold symposiums or bring in speakers for the benefit of their members and then, of course, there are the dog shows. This is one area that has not continued to be the source of knowledge that it once was. Benched shows presented dogs, identified in the catalogue, that could be studied individually and as a part of a bloodline. Successful breeders, sitting by their entries, could be identified and approached, a wonderful opportunity for the novice. To put in the long hours, established breeders would chat and compare notes.

In this day of instant cake, cookies and even breakfast, it is easy to fall into the trap of expecting results without the required input of knowledge and thought or without 'paying your dues'. I suspect there is so much available help and information that many breeders do not go beyond this and do their own thinking. The material you read is merely to give you a foundation on which to build, not to lead you by the hand to your place in the sun. Read all that is available, learn all that you can, but use this information to think for yourself. This, after all, is the purpose of accumulating knowledge so that, combined with the thought process, you may use this knowledge to do more than you were capable of before and to go beyond any facts that were available to you.

I would like to relate an experience I had recently that demonstrates the value of knowledge of dogs to give me a foundation for making sound decisions in an area where I had no previous experience. After judging the Sheltie specialty in El Paso, Texas, our hosts took the sweepstake judge, Mrs. Devine from Hawaii, and me to the dog races in Juarez Mexico. I had not bet on dogs before and was looking through the race program for names that had some meaning when I thought that, with my experience in dogs, I should be able to draw on some knowledge that would help me make decisions with value and not complete chance.

After some thought, and treking to the winner's pay window for the first three races, all in our party bet on the dog I chose and all won in the fourth race. No, my selections did not win every time, but they did win more than two out of three times — not a bad average, I understand. Please — this is not a column on how to beat the horses or the dogs but how to apply what you know to situations you have no experience in.

My first decision was to make all bets to place. This was to allow for my inexperience and to give me double the opportunity to choose a winner. Secondly, I decided that when I am showing a dog one with some show experience is steadier and more dependable than a youngster, so I chose dogs no younger than two years and no older than three. This narrowed my selection to almost half of the entries. Next, I eliminated the dogs in my selected group who had no staying power, as was stated in the program. Of the dogs remaining for my consideration, I next eliminated those that were heaviest. This usually left two or three dogs for my consideration. When these dogs were paraded on the track, I chose to place my bet on the one who had the best rear angulation. I had four straight wins before encountering my first defeat.

The fourth race was of a greater distance and I made no adjustment for this. On checking the winners of the fourth race, it was apparent that the dogs finishing highest had greater weight for endurance. Using this knowledge for the next 680-yard race, I again had a winner.

Considering that still another dog of my choice was bumped and rolled across the track to find himself at the end of the pack by some distance, and was still able to complete the race and recover third position, also confirms he was a good choice. Accidents of this kind cannot, of course, be predicted.

My 'luck' at this dog race confirms my belief that we often make our own luck by how we use information that is available to all of us — that is this breeder's viewpoint.

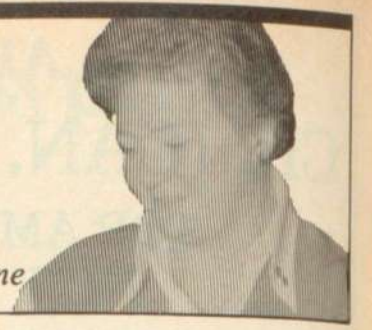
In the ring



Martha Covington Thorne

Judges and breed standards — these are the dual themes of this issue. More cussing and discussing is done about standards and their effects on judges than one might believe. Let's take a hypothetical dog show.

In Ring One, the judge approaches an exhibitor. "I'm very sorry, sir, but according to the standard of your breed I am forced to disqualify your dog." In Ring Two, exhibitors are marking time while the judge sends for the CKC Book of Standards. One handler whispers to another: "Any judge who doesn't know the standard of a breed he's licensed to judge should have that license pulled!" Outside of Ring Three, one exhibitor says to a friend: "Win or lose, I really don't care as long as the judge goes by the standard!" In Ring Four, a lady has questioned the judge's decision only to be told: "I don't care what the standard says, Madam, no dog without rear angulation is going to win in my ring!" In Ring Five, a frustrated judge mumbles as he marks his book: "Awful mouth, but the standard doesn't even mention teeth!" In Ring Six, one dog's topline slopes and the exhibitor is sure she will win because that's what the standard calls for. The next dog in line has a topline that slopes even more and his handler is equally sure his dog is the most correct according to the standard. What the standard says is: "While the topline should have some slope, the angle should be neither too much nor too little."

Far from being exceptions, these situations take place every single weekend at dog shows all over the world. Judges who try to stick to the standards get little credit, particularly when some dog must be excused or disqualified because of that standard. Most people insist they want judges to go by the standards but if, in an effort to be fair, the judge calls for the book he's obviously incompetent. Never mind that you and I have trouble recalling our own particular breed standard, and that the all-rounder has to be familiar with over 100! Speaking for myself, if a judge in my ring calls for his standard I give him credit for caring enough to make sure he's right and for being honest enough to admit he's not sure, in spite of the criticism he invites by admitting it. (Judges, you know, can be blind, inaccurate, political, two-faced and unqualified, but they 'gotta' be perfect!)

In defense of judges who get casual about adhering to breed standards, I suggest you riffle through the ambiguous, contradictory terminology. It just might arouse in you a twinge of sympathy for judges who become fed up with trying to translate 'moderate' stop, 'profusely but not excessively coated', a 'deep but not too deep' chest, and 'slightly rounded over the rump' into something fair and uniform! (There is one standard that asks the judge to evaluate the dog's bark in the ring; another wants him to define the expression in a dog's eye!)

Month after month the centre section of Dogs in Canada presents proposed revisions in breed standards. Critics and supporters alike are urged to write in their comments. But according to CKC officials, if a single proposed standard change draws ten letters this is considered a landslide!

Judges who ignore or don't know breed standards are bad news. The only way to combat their influence is not to give them an entry. But judges who know their standards and care enough to stick by them, even when they don't necessarily agree with them, are people to be treasured. And if your breed standard is unclear, or vague, or too wordy, or ambiguous, there's only one person who can do anything about it, my friend!

Oh, by the way, you there — the lady who lost because of her dog's topline? And you, sir — the gentleman who was going to report the judge for not knowing the standard by heart? I don't mean to get personal, honestly, but tell me — when was the last time read your OWN breed standard, hmmmmmm?

Do you have questions? Comments? Write Martha Covington Thorne, a widely respected professional handler, at Box 119, Fournier, Ontario K0B 1G0.

"Okay — so I'm in a bad mood today!"

Pacific action

By John and Stella Loftus

Recently, we were fortunate to be able to spend an enjoyable and informative afternoon with Mrs. Elsie Murray, president of the Ladies Kennel Club of B.C. Her residence in Vancouver has been home to Elsie for the past 50 years. At present her sole companions are Flip, a five-year-old male American Cocker Spaniel and Cindy, a four-year-old female Welsh Corgi (Pembroke), both of whom have attained champion status. Elsie maintains she truly enjoys the dog game and, over the years, has met so many fine people and developed a remarkable number of staunch friends.

Several years ago, Mrs. Murray nurtured the idea of a canine building project but drew scant attention. Recently, the idea has re-surfaced as The Elsie Murray Canine Educational Centre project. Undoubtedly, this has been brought on by the increasingly high rents show-giving clubs are forced to pay. Buildings with adequate facilities to hold a show are in short supply. Of course, the big problem, in view of increasing costs, is whether to build or buy. At present, the availability of property, whether lease or purchase, is under investigation.

The centre, considered unique in its conception, will be designed to include adequate facilities for parking, loading areas, spectator seating and a canteen or cafeteria. Here, the needs of the exhibitors and handlers will be of prime consideration. The building, of multi-purpose configuration, will be available not only for all breed shows but sanction matches, obedience and handling classes, lectures, symposiums and social functions.

Obviously, with a project of this magnitude, we had questions. Two that were uppermost in our minds were answered. Are all lower mainland all breed clubs in support of this venture? Presently all but one of the five clubs have agreed in principle. One member from each club is to be selected and classified as directors of the board. Will the all breed clubs be sufficient or do you intend to increase the scope? Project members are in the process of approaching the obedience and specialty clubs, with considerable interest and success. Each club will be allowed one delegate plus an alternate delegate to attend the meetings. The reason for the alternate is to provide continuity in the event of absence of any of the delegates. It is also anticipated that fees will be levied for each of the clubs and payment will be required for voting powers.

The Elsie Murray Canine Educational Centre is legally incorporated under The Societies Act. All legal fees have been paid and their books set up by a lawyer. Current funds are deposited and drawing a good bank interest. Taking an impartial view, it would appear that this is an ambitious undertaking. However, such a program warrants merit and, undoubtedly, is the first strictly designed for dog clubs and related interests. Therefore, it is our hope that this venture will have the support of all B.C. breeders and exhibitors and prove successful.

Donations have already been received. Further contributions will be gratefully accepted and duly recorded for income tax purposes, where necessary. At present, plans are being processed for the Elsie Murray Canine Benefit Show, sponsored by the Fraser Valley Dog Fanciers in the form of two all breed championship dog shows and obedience trials to be held in Vancouver on May 19 and 20. In aid of the cause, truly an admirable gesture, all judges and ring stewards have agreed to donate their services, with all proceeds from the show going to the building fund. All donations will be welcome, whether money or trophies. Hopefully, this event will garner strong support from exhibitors, handlers and spectators alike. Further information on any of the foregoing may be obtained from Mrs. Elsie Murray, 4854 Lanark St., Vancouver, B.C. V5N 3S2.

Susan Sadler, Victoria, B.C., reports a nice win on January 20. Her Ch. (Can., Am. and Bda.) Clayhanger Active was awarded BB at the Basset Hound Club of Portland specialty under judge Dr. Skolnick. This was particularly pleasing since Dr. Skolnick is a breeder under the Slippery Hill banner. Probably one of the finest Bassets in recent years is their Ch. Slippery Hill Hudson who under the capable handling of Bobby Barlow, attained the status of No. 1 Hound in the U.S. a couple of years ago. Not only do the Skolnicks breed for conformation, but they are also instrumental in reviving the current interest in Basset field trials and have bred and shown several dual champion hounds.

Susan also sends news that Doreen Hubbard, Yorkboro Kennels, formerly of Montreal, now resides in Edmonds, Wash. At the Longview-Kelso show on February 11, her new Yorkie puppy, Yorkboro's Foreign Exchange, managed a Reserve Winners Dog from the junior puppy class under judge Elsworth Gamble. Susan claims he will be a joy to handle as soon as he realizes he is not a German Shepherd, as he literally went around the ring like a tornado.

Dogs West

BY FRED EDGE

It came as no surprise when Winnipeg City Council recently set up a special committee to study more restrictive dog controls, including a suggestion that ownership be limited to two to a household.

A similar draft bylaw was introduced in Toronto just a few months earlier, and while it was scrapped by a decisive 13-3 vote by City Council, it is obvious that the anti-dog movement is gathering momentum in communities throughout Canada.

The people who prompted the Winnipeg study call themselves the St. James-Assiniboia Residents Advisory Group — St. James-Assiniboia being a generally residential part of the Winnipeg community complex.

The group asked for a ban on dogs from playgrounds; a 'rotating blitz' by the Pound patrol in each district; a reduction in the impounding period, from five days to four, before a dog is destroyed; confinement of a bitch by its owner 'for the whole period she is in heat'; higher licence fees for larger dogs; and an ownership restriction of two dogs to a household.

In the Toronto experience, City Council passed an intent motion on similarly restrictive dog controls 16-2, and it was only through a well and intelligently organized and presented lobby that the majority of councillors were persuaded to about-face when the draft bylaw came to a vote.

Prime mover of the lobby was The Canadian Kennel Club's special committee on dog control legislation, under chairperson and CKC president Hilda Pugh.

A similar lobby was launched in Winnipeg, beginning with a 'town hall' meeting of the Manitoba CKC membership (see March Dogs), called by provincial director Ellwood Smith and addressed by Ms. Pugh, who flew in for the occasion.

As the CKC president pointed out at that time, responsible dog ownership is a necessity.

Irresponsible controls on dog ownership, such as those suggested in the Winnipeg study, are (as noted by one Toronto city councillor who opposed that city's draft bylaw) persecution of one segment of society by another.

As in Toronto, there already are enough Winnipeg bylaws that cover irresponsible dog ownership, such as anti-noise, pollution and health, were these existing laws more effectively enforced.

The 'rotating blitz' by Pound patrols suggested in the Winnipeg study is agreeable, providing the juvenile squad also sets up rotating blitzes, the police generally come down harder on drinking drivers, and the courts start handing out stiffer sentences for crimes of street violence.

The point is that personal responsibility in dog ownership, parenthood, or any other aspect of one person's relationship to another, is the answer to Winnipeg's, or any other community's problems.

And personal responsibility is engendered by education, not legislation.

Winnipeg dog people, spearheaded by members of The Canadian Kennel Club, under their provincial director, fought to get that point across to City Council, through a massive write-in campaign and sitdown talks with councillors.

Think about it.

Your community may be next.

At this writing, the initial City Hall public meeting of the two-man committee on increased dog controls, and interested Winnipeg citizens, has been held.

Don Agland and Omar picket Winnipeg City Hall. The sign reads, 'I am my owner's 3rd dog! Will City Council send me to death row?'

So many dog people attended (more than 80, at 9:30 on a Friday morning), that the meeting had to be moved from a small committee room to the main council chambers. So much public notice had been aroused by lobbying dog people that all three Winnipeg TV stations covered the meeting, as well as major radio stations, and both The Winnipeg Tribune and The Winnipeg Free Press.

Results of the meeting got prime coverage in all media that evening and the following day, with a somewhat astonished two city councillors stating that "few changes would be made" in the existing dog control bylaws.

Nevertheless, concerned Winnipeg dog people are standing by, with an eye on the forthcoming public City Council meetings — prepared to mass and meet again when the actual draft bylaw, whatever its changes in dog controls, is prepared for vote.

The Winnipeg protest theme was a simple one: The city already has good dog control laws, enforce them. Responsible dog people are as concerned as anyone about the problems caused by irresponsible owners, but they will not be persecuted or penalized for the actions of others.

And responsible Winnipeg dog people came out in force, presenting a united front, when their rights and the rights of their dogs were threatened.

When I rallied the readership of my weekly column, Your Dogs and Mine, in The Winnipeg Tribune, I received 1,814 letters, cards and signatures opposing the proposed increases in Winnipeg's dog controls, which I personally presented to City Council.

There are 24 members of the St. James-Assiniboia so-called Citizens Advisory Group.

Readers are invited to send their western news to Fred Edge, The Croft at River Hills, River Hills, Manitoba R0E 1T0.

Atlantic action

By Jay Underwood

Fanciers in Nova Scotia were saddened to learn of the death of Dr. Jim Lewis in January. Jim and his wife Sybil bred Bloodhounds and Bassets in River John, Pictou County, and were members of the Pictou County K.C.

RCMP officers in Newfoundland destroyed a total of 34 dogs that were roaming wild near the southern Labrador town of Northwest River, after the mauled body of a woman was found. RCMP say the 50-year-old woman died of exposure; her body was later attacked by the pack of wild dogs, who live off what they can forage. The dogs had been a nuisance to the community for some time.

A large pack of dogs caused similar concerns last year in Trenton, N.S., although no one was hurt and only a small number of the domestic 'wild' dogs were destroyed by authorities. Dog packs are a constant problem for the Maritime provinces' Departments of Lands and Forests, because they attack deer herds.

Rumours that the Antigonish Highlands Kennel Club has disbanded are not true, according to Brendan MacInnes. He told me that although there will not be an Antigonish show this year, the club has no plans to fold. The decision not to hold a show this year was due to the small membership of the club. It will concentrate on reorganizing and building membership this year with hopes of holding shows next year. However, Mr. MacInnes indicated that if membership does not increase, the club may be forced to close.

Barbara Townshend of Labara Kennels was talking to me recently about the complete lack of Tracking Dog tests in the Maritimes. It would appear that the only way a dog from this region can get its TD is to go to Quebec or Ontario and although it has been done, it can be expensive. Perhaps we can get a few Tracking enthusiasts together through Atlantic Action.

Carole Long wrote to say she is concerned about the amount of trimming going on with Cairns in our show rings and, as a Cairn owner, I can sympathize. It worries me that too many handlers are perhaps unintentionally 'poodlefying' our towsy tyke, but then this trend toward faddish grooming seems to be plaguing a number of breeds in all the groups.

This month we salute the Tantramar K.C. up in Amherst, which will be holding its show on the Victoria Day long weekend. Amherst always promises to be a pretty lively weekend and, being so close to New Brunswick and P.E.I., there is some good competition between Maritime dogs, spiced by the number of dogs that come in from the States and Upper Canada (and of course Newfoundland).

Speaking of Newfoundland, a few exhibitors here on the mainland have mentioned that the travel costs to attend the Newfy circuits often prohibit them from going, what with gasoline for cars, a two-way ferry cost and overnight accommodation. I have a modest solution. Perhaps those of us hoping to go to the Newfy shows should look into the cost of renting a van or mini bus. That way, a number of us can go for the price of one ferry ticket and gasoline for one vehicle, and split the driving. Think about it — those shows in Newfoundland are really worth seeing.

Elma Lewis-Watts, secretary of the Terrier Breeders Association of Canada, tells me that there is only one member of the T.B.A. in the Maritimes, which is a pretty poor state of affairs; there are a lot more terrier breeders than that. National breed / group associations can do a great deal of good, but only if breeders get active! Elma was replying to a letter I wrote two years ago, but it only reached her in January of this year!

Keep everyone up to date by writing Jay Underwood at R.R. 1, Eureka, Pictou County, Nova Scotia B0K 1B0.

Theldorland's Cobra

Bred by Mrs. Dorothy Gilligan, Pickering, Ont., by Ch. Mayoral's Vince (U.S.) ex Veruschka Sabra von Havelberg, Cobra is proudly owned by Robert and Blanka Staher.

'Cobra' made her debut as a junior female at the K.W. Hundefest show, November 11, 1978, winning her class and Best Puppy in Breed under judge Langdon Skarda. At Brantford in December, 'Cobra' won her class and Best Puppy in Breed both days under judges Mrs. Francis Crane and Mr. S. Hubbell. Just eligible for senior puppy competition, 'Cobra' also went Reserve Winners Female under Mrs. Crane.

We believe 'Cobra' has a great future and are grateful to the judges to date who have recognized the quality in this young female. Our thanks also to John F. S. Fabian for his expert handling. 'Cobra' will be shown during 1979 and handled exclusively by Mr. Fabian.

Obedience

By Jake Giacomelli

Every once in a while an exhibitor or a reader will ask me why the signal to sit from the down position in the Utility Class seems so difficult for their dog to learn. Perhaps this is worth covering at this time.

Personally, I feel that one of the reasons is that the exercise is a completely new one. In most cases, up to this point the dog has never been asked to sit from a down position and especially so from a distance; whereas the signal to drop or to come are closely related to the Recall or Drop on Recall exercises performed in the Novice and Open Classes and therefore much easier to teach.

For those of you still in Novice or Open and who hope one day to be in the Utility Class, there's a lot of simple ground work you can do to make the signal sit a relatively easy exercise, long before you get to Utility.

From this day on, whenever you return to your dog in the Down position and you've decided the exercise is finished — or your trainer has said "exercise finished" — immediately drop to one knee or squat beside your dog and praise him for what he's just accomplished, then give him an additional stay command (in case he's ready to break position after your praises). Then stand up straight beside your dog and while your dog is looking at you give him the signal to sit, followed by the verbal command to sit. Probably your dog may not move at all, especially if you're not giving the command to heel and taking that usual step forward that so many handlers do. Don't be discouraged, Repeat your signal to sit, then follow it once more with the verbal sit, plus any coaxing or patting of your leg to get your dog to sit up. When he finally does sit up from the down position, make a big fuss over him. You'll be surprised how easily your dog will learn to sit from the down position by either signal or verbal when there's no time or training pressure involved. Just do it every chance you get. In fact, you can also create a couple of chances each day by merely giving your dog the down command while you're standing beside him and then going through the above routine. As time goes on, your dog will start to sit on either signal or verbal without the coaxing. Whatever way he does it, never forget the praise. Eventually, drop the verbal and just use the signal but make sure he's looking when you give it.

When your dog has become quite steady in sitting on signal beside you, you can now start to very gradually edge towards the front of your dog so that he'll learn to sit on signal while you're facing him.

I know the above may seem like a long-winded narrative, but it's really much easier done than explained.

Can you imagine how many chances you'll get to repeat this before you get to Utility. By the time you reach the point when you are ready to formally teach this exercise to your dog in Utility it'll almost be a fait accompli.

There are many exercises you can do early, gentle ground work in, without affecting what you are formally training at the moment. It is surprising how easy some exercises can be taught when the pressure of trying to accomplish it within the time frame of a class schedule is removed.

Hunting dogs

By Gord McIntyre

It was originally intended that field trials and bench shows would work together to improve the all-round quality of the hunting breeds. The result would be dogs that hunted as good as they looked, looked as good as they hunted, and could double anytime as beloved family pets.

Shows would be demanding in the areas of conformation, soundness, movement and temperament; trials would further test these areas through field performance, and require a superior demonstration of trained, natural hunting ability and intelligence. Together they would test the whole dog, and those that measured-up could place in a field trial on Saturday, win on the bench Sunday, hunt well any day of the week, and play with kids when home.

That wasn't asking too much of the dogs then — why should it appear so demanding now? All these old-timers were seeking were complete dogs that best expressed 'breed integrity', and which would be worthy sires and dams of even better dogs. It's so simple and sensible.

'Breed integrity' was all to them then — as it should be to us in the hunting breeds now. Our single concern should be with producing dogs that are true to the ideals and vision of those who originated or developed our breed: intelligent animals with pronounced natural hunting ability, the necessary conformation to hunt long and hard when conditioned, and of excellent temperament.

Surely, with more dogs being hunted by more hunters than ever before, such dogs should be commonplace. But they're not.

Within a couple or so generations, an ever-widening split has developed among many trialers, show people and hunters in most popular hunting breeds. Too many trialers ascribe to the view that "handsome is as handsome does" and think only in performance terms. Too many show people are simply content with 'pretty dogs' that collect ribbons. Too many hunters are happy with barely typey mediocrities that bring home bacon in a so-so way.

The result has been that many breeds have split, or are in the process of splitting, into three lesser sub-species: trial, show, hunting. So often, what was once a great breed is now three inferior approximations.

A champion hunting dog is a champion hunting dog — not a show champion or field trial champion. Those are flip sides of the same coin. And that coin is the complete dog that expresses breed integrity.

Many European countries are still producing such champion dogs because hunting dog enthusiasts there have refused to betray their trust to the breed or to past or future breed fanciers. They know they don't own their breed; that they've only been entrusted with its safekeeping and what improvements are possible. Such selfless breed dedication must be admired, emulated.

We can do so. CKC hunting breed clubs who consider their breed worth saving, can encourage their members to subordinate their private concerns to the single, great concern of saving their breed. Then they can press CKC for the needed changes in rules and regulations that will force any present or future member to toe-the-line. Of course, there will be problems. The only easy thing in dogs is breeding poor quality ones.

Things will be relatively easy for the continental pointing breeds, somewhat less so for the retrieving breeds with the exception of the Chesapeake. It will be tough sledding for the English and Irish Setters, Springer Spaniels and Beagles, and even more so for English Pointers and Bassets. Forget American Cockers. (Those breeds omitted here are too few a number, or so seldom hunted, that fair judgment can't be passed on them. Nor for the purposes of this article were breeds registered with other bodies considered.)

There may well be need for new and more clearly worded breed standards, and changes in show and/or trial rules. Certainly no dog should be awarded a F.T.Ch. that is not a very typy representative of its breed, and all dogs granted a show Ch. must have demonstrated a satisfactory degree of trained, natural hunting ability.

Naturally, shows and trials for these breeds will be thrown out of whack with those AKC. No matter. Here's a Canadian solution for a Canadian problem. Given time, it's probable that AKC's hunting breed members will force it to come in line with us, and for the same purpose — to save the hunting breeds worth saving.

Questions and comments should be directed to Gord McIntyre at R.R. 4, Bolton, Ontario L0P 1A0.

Mr. R. Briton of Edmonton has brought a Bull Terrier bitch from England. Royal Fern of Jobrulu was sired by Eng. Ch. Jobrulu Jacqueminot ex Redbranch Saucy Sue whose sire is Eng. Ch. Hollyfir's Dog in a Doublet. Mindy is white with a red eye patch.

Humane Society funds

On March 7, the Toronto Humane Society received a cheque for $5,000 which represents the minimum amount of support Romar 90 Pet Foods expects from their joint advertising campaign. For every Romar 90 pet food label returned, the company will donate 5 cents toward the building fund to replace the old Wellesley Street location. Romar is one of the two pet foods fed to the 23,000 cats, dogs and wildlife quartered at the Society each year. Presenting the cheque on behalf of Romar 90 was Bob Hesketh and his buddy, Spats. Also present was John L. Stuart, president of Stuart House International, owners of Romar 90.

Canine contraception

A theory is being tested by University of Pennsylvania scientists, Dr. Benjamin G. Brackett and Dr. V. K. Ganjam, under a grant from the Morris Animal Foundation. The investigation centres on gonadotropin-releasing hormone (GnRH), which causes the pituitary gland to release other hormones, which activate the reproductive glands. It may be possible to render a dog immune to its own GhRH by forming antibodies to destroy it as a result of an injection. Further research is being done to determine the feasibility of temporary and permanent sterility by this method and possible reversal techniques and side effects. A special birth control fund, set up by the Morris Animal Foundation, has given priority to finding answers to the pet overpopulation problem.

Heart victim aid

Pet owners are more likely to recover from a heart attack than those without pets, stated Dr. Erika Friedmann at an American Hearts Association conference in Dallas, Tex. Co-researcher Margaret Noctor added: "The patients now have someone else to live for . . . they feel needed." She said 11 of 39 patients without pets died within a year after being admitted to hospital, while all but three of 53 pet owners were still alive.

On honours list

Probably the first dog to be so recognized, Otis P. Albee of South Burlington, Vt., has been listed in the latest volume of Community Leaders and Noteworthy Americans. University of Vermont professor George Albee, upon receiving an invitation to submit biographical material for the book's roster, completed the forms in his family dog's name.

Shih Tzu club match

The Northern Ontario branch of the Canadian Shih Tzu Club held a successful all breed sanctioned dog show and obedience trial in January in Sudbury, Ont. Judges for the event were Jim and Marie Tinlin of Burgundyrun Kennels, Codrington, Ont. Over 100 dogs competed with Best in Match taken by an Afghan owned by Phyllis and Joe Pancel, Sudbury, and Best Puppy won by Shirley Bell's Boxer from North Bay, Ont.

Saluki bitch, Ch. (Can. & Am.) Counterpoint Hillell Astraea finished her American championship taking major wins at two of the first three shows on the Florida circuit, finishing with three majors. She is owned by John and Lynn Ross, Counterpoint Reg., Saskatoon, Sask.

At the American Miniature Schnauzer Club specialty (101 entries) held in New York, February 11, Canadian bred Ch. Frontenac's Big Foot was RWD. Previous to this specialty, Footsie took WD and BW at the Carroll County K.C. in New Hampshire, N.Y., for two points. Bred and owned by Jacline and Armand Gratton of Les Cedres, Que.

Owned by Mrs. Stephanie Horan, Cochrane, Alta., the Puli, Ch. Immerzu Moorva Can. & Am. CD, went second in the Open Bitch class at the Puli Club of Southern California specialty. Her sire and dam won their Veteran class, Ch. (Can. & Am.) Immerzu Belzebub Csurora taking VD and Ch. Belzebub Csibi at Immerzu VB. Eighty Pulis were entered. At the Kennel Club of Pasadena show Csibi won VB and Moorva took Open Bitch and RW. Her daughter, Ch. Immerzu Urchin, won third place in the Bred by Exhibitor Bitch class.

Michael and Rosemary Shoreman, Roschell Weimaraners, Schomberg, Ont., report their Ch. (Can. & Am.) Colsidex Roschell's Premiere won Best of Breed at Jacksonville under Ray Beale, and a second BB at Manatee. Their female, Ch. (Can. & Am.) Roschell's Fashion Impact, took three BBs, the first under judge Barb Heller at Daytona plus a third in Group (346 entries) under Arlene Thompson. The third was at the Miami Combined Specialties where she won under breeder/judge Jean Ann Webb at the Weimaraner Club of South Florida.

The Basset Hound, Ch. Bow-Ridge's Chauvinist (Andy), was overall Best in Junior Sweepstakes under breeder/judge Barbara Borschow at the Basset Hound Club of America annual specialty. He had earlier picked up a 2-pt. major under breeder/judge James White at Tonawanda, N.Y., and a major under breeder/judge Robert Norton at the Basset Hound Club of Greater Detroit specialty held at the Genessee County K.C. show, Flint, Mich. Both wins were from the Puppy Class. Chauvinist has finished his championship titles on both sides of the border at 12 months of age. He also won the South Florida Basset Hound Club specialty at Miami January 20 under breeder/judge Robert Arbs of Texas and the Sweepstakes under judge J. Clark. Bred and shown to his early wins by Roxanna Bowman, Bow Ridge Kennels, St. Catharines, Ont., he is now owned by Robert Hauslohner.

E. Ann Webster, Aldergrove, B.C., reports that the Greyhound, Ch. Windwood the Windjammer, went south of the border for the first time last December. He took a 4-pt. major in Portland, Ore., and continued on to take the breed over top winning specials including the 1978 Santa Barbara specialty winner. Shah has made two more trips south since then, picking up his second major (and another breed win) and two more points. His brother, Volley, Ch. Windwood Vol Au Vent, took Reserve to Shah in Volley's only two shows.

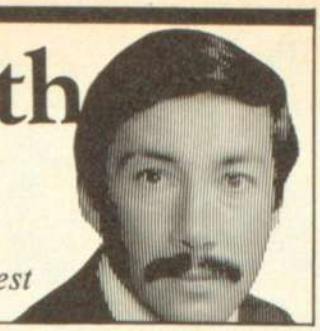
Your dog's health



By Dr. Martin DeForest

QUESTION: What is canine pyoderma, and how is it best treated?

ANSWER: Pyoderma, or bacterial infection of the skin, is one of the most frequently seen dermatologic conditions in dogs. A constant state of change occurs on the normal canine skin. To maintain this normalcy, there is a delicate balance of micro-organisms, moisture, pH, and other factors. Any insult to the skin, be it internal or external, which interrupts the integrity of skin surface produces conditions suitable for the growth of pathologic (harmful) bacteria.

Trauma, either from an external source, or self-inflicted by the animal, is probably the most common cause of a disruption of the normal balance of canine skin. Factors which upset this balance can be internal also, such as hormonal imbalances or variance in sebum production. Allergies often predispose to self-trauma by scratching and may lead to eventual pyoderma, and external parasitism (e.g. demodectic mange) may drastically alter the skin, resulting in a deep pyoderma.

Many different bacteria can be involved in pyoderma, although Staphylococcus aureus is believed to be the major bacterial pathogen of canine skin. Deep pyodermas in which Staph. aureus is present may also be secondarily infected with other bacteria such as E. coli, Pseudomonas, and Proteus.

The most useful classification of pyoderma is made on the basis of the depth of infection. This is important both with regard to prognosis for recovery and duration of treatment. That is, the deeper infections carry a poorer prognosis and will require a much longer course of antibiotics.

After making the diagnosis of pyoderma, your veterinarian must first aim treatment at eliminating the primary cause of the problem. Following this, proper antibiotic therapy is necessary. In cases of recurrent pyodermas, deep pyodermas, and those which fail to respond to treatment, bacterial culture and sensitivity testing will help to elucidate the antibiotic of choice to eliminate the infection.

QUESTION: Can the fertility of stud dogs be evaluated in an accurate manner?

ANSWER: The best evidence of fertility in the male dog is the ability to consistently sire normal litters.

To get a more accurate picture of the reproductive status of the dog with respect to fertility your veterinarian can examine a semen sample from the dog in question. Although semen collection is easily performed, its evaluation has limitations. Following collection, the seminal fluid must be protected from physical insults such as harsh chemicals and marked temperature changes which alter the structure and motility of sperm. The total number of progressively motile, normal-appearing sperm per ejaculate is the best criterion of semen quality. Standards for the minimum number of motile, structurally normal sperm per ejaculate to produce maximal conception have not been established in dogs. Sperm production is related to testicular weight. Hence, there is extreme variation in total numbers of sperm per ejaculate between various breeds of different sizes.

QUESTION: Our seven-year-old poodle has recently shown signs of increased thirst. In addition, she seems to be urinating more frequently, and often asks to be let outdoors at night. She appears otherwise healthy. Do you think that she might have a medical problem?

ANSWER: Yes. The clinical signs you describe are known as polydipsia (increased thirst) and polyuria (increased urination) and these are associated with several serious disease processes (e.g. diabetes mellitus (sugar diabetes), kidney disease, Cushing's disease, etc.). I would suggest that you have your dog examined by your veterinarian as soon as possible.

JUDGING APPROVAL

mittee, individually or collectively, to watch any given judge, because it is possible, in a car, to go from north to south of the whole country in eight hours, and from east to west, at the widest point, in four." He pointed out that although there are very many Open shows with large breed entries, every week, judged by breed specialists who gain extensive knowledge and are often virtual all-rounders, there are only some 30 championship shows a year (the only ones for which the Kennel Club approves the judges) plus breed specialist shows, so only a few judges get a chance to award Challenge Certificates, and only these judges are presently considered eligible to be asked to judge at AKC and CKC shows. "We are asked another question — why we do not issue judging licenses. Under our laws, if we had licenses, the removal of a license could lead to a court case, and so..it is made absolutely clear that approval of the judge is for that one show and that one breed or that one occasion."

Returning to the North America scene; in their search for better qualified judges both the CKC and the AKC have made definite progress by the establishment of the permit/provisional systems, and with their requirements of background years in breeding and showing, and approval only after provisional assignments have been reported on as satisfactory. But in neither country is any proof required (as it is for would-be judges in France and Belgium) of a study or knowledge of canine anatomy. Nowadays, so much technical equipment is available that it is easy for anyone to take movies of a dog's gait and to study it by tracing the successive 'frames' of film projected against a wall and in that way, and by slow motion film, to learn to identify good and bad gait; by lectures on musculature and by handling a dog's skeleton and seeing the layers of muscle removed on laboratory specimens one can understand the build-up and interplay of muscle; by measuring bone lengths and joint angles one can train one's eye to observe structure and movement even under a long-coated dog. Having had the benefit of all this experience personally, through taking all four levels and graduating from the 'Pure-Bred Dog' course at Humber College, I know how it has helped to develop my own eye in judging. I wish it could be made mandatory for all intending judges' training.

Judging, which is both an art and a science (you must have the knowledge of the various standards, but you must also learn to evaluate the flesh-and-blood dogs before you), is a discipline and a challenge. One plays God in the ring, which is a heady experience, but it is also humbling, because one has to live with one's mistakes, if one makes them, and one really never stops learning.

New products

Bright new safety idea

The Luma-Leash, introduced as the world's only illuminated dog leash, is four feet long and powered by two 9-volt batteries in the handle. It protects the pet and owner from oncoming traffic while walking at night — and makes a unique gift for the pet owner who has everything, according to the distributor. It is constructed of tough vinyl in assorted colours and covered by the manufacturer's limited guarantee for two years against any defects. At $8.95 plus 75c handling and postage, it could be a good investment in your safety and your pet's. International Distributors, 1 Tay Ave., Dartmouth, N.S. B2X 1K5.

Canadian wagon barrier

The Joel station wagon barrier is Canadian designed and manufactured to fit all models with adjustments up to 66" wide and 36" high. According to the manufacturer, it is steady, sturdy and easy to install with a non-toxic finish. It costs $39.95 including postage, plus tax for Ontario residents. Pets & Gardens, 834 Brant St., Burlington, Ont. L7R 2J5.

Chewable heartworm pills

Filaribits, recently introduced by Norden Laboratories, is a chemical compound in chewable tablet form, indicated for the prevention of heartworm disease and as an aid in the treatment of roundworms. Palatability and precision of dosage are special features of this product, according to the manufacturer. The recommended daily dosage of 3 mg./lb. of body weight is possible since each 60 mg. and 180 mg. tablet is quarter scored. The treat-type medication is readily accepted by the majority of dogs, according to their studies. Norden Laboratories, 601 W. Cornhusker Hwy., Lincoln, Neb. 68521.

Attack training aids

Edlyn Kennels Ltd. announces the availability in Canada of Las-Sana/Argus attack training equipment. According to the distributor, these supplies utilize a totally new concept and provide a full range of tools to fill every need in each phase of the dog's training. Edlyn Kennels Ltd., Talbot St., Canfield, Ont. N0A 1C0.

Illustrated breed standards

Dogs in Canada takes pleasure in presenting, for the first time since 1963, standards for the 144 breeds officially recognized by The Canadian Kennel Club. One hundred and one distinguished dogs are illustrated and these appear in alphabetical order by breed name. The balance of recognized breeds follow the illustration and standard of the Yorkshire Terrier, in the form of Essentials of the Standards. Without these 'blueprints' of the breeds to provide a word picture of the ideal dog, no objective method of assessment would be possible nor would the breeder have a yardstick against which to measure his stock.

Ch. Osmar's Wolfman of Wicksteed. Canada's group placing Affenpinscher, Baron has been praised by many judges for his superb movement and excellent conformation. A small dog, with much to offer. Owner, Vicki Garrett, Wicksteed Reg., 275 Cornelius Pkwy., Downsview, Ont. M3K 1T6.

Affenpinscher

As in most toys, general appearance is one of, if not the most important single point in the Affenpinscher. Details are of secondary importance and anatomical variations are of small concern.

General Appearance — Small but rather sturdy in build and not delicate in any way. He carries himself with comical seriousness and he is generally quiet and a very devoted pal. He can get vehemently excited, however, when attacked and is fearless toward any aggressor.

Coat — A very important factor. It is short and dense in certain parts and shaggy and longer in others, but should be hard and wiry. It is longer and more loose and shaggy on the legs and around the eyes, nose and chin giving the typical monkeylike appearance from whence comes his name. The best colour is black, matching his eyes and fiery temperament. However, black with tan markings, red, grey and other mixtures are permissible. Very light colours and white markings are a fault.

Head — Should be round and not too heavy with well-domed forehead.

Eyes — Should be round, of good size, black and very brilliant.

Ears — Rather small, set high, pointed and erect, usually clipped to a point.

Muzzle — Must be short and rather pointed with a black nose. The upper jaw is a trifle shorter than the lower jaw, while the teeth should close together; a slight undershot condition is not material. The teeth, however, should not show.

Neck — Short and straight.

Body — The back should be straight with its length about equal to the height at the shoulder. Chest should be reasonably deep and the body should show only a slight tuck-up at the loin.

Legs — Front legs should be straight as possible. Hind legs without much bend at the hocks and set well under the body.

Feet — Should be round, small and compact. Turned neither in nor out, with preferably black pads and nails.

Tail — Cut short, set and carried high.

Size — The smaller dog, if of characteristic type, is more valuable and the shoulder height should not exceed 26.04 cm in any case.

General Facts

Originating in Germany this comical appearing toy breed was bred to be a stable ratter. It is still quite rare, especially on this continent but is closely related to two very popular breeds, the Brussels Griffon and the Miniature Schnauzer. It is believed by some that the Affenpinscher was developed from other German wire-haired breeds and because of his spunky temperament was christened the monkey terrier — in German 'affe' is the word for 'monkey' and 'pinscher' means 'terrier'. The breed is said to make an excellent house pet and because of his small size he is ideally suited to small living quarters. His excellent sense of hearing makes hi fine watch dog that can bark an al when needed. His exercise needs ar minimal but he does require some plucking to keep his coat tidy and maintain the typical monkey-like expression. A few top specimens occasionally appear in the show rir Canada. While in the U.S.A. one Affenpinscher has made history by the first member of its breed ever Best in Show at an all breed championship event. By nature th Affenpinscher is said to be lively, intelligent and quick to learn.

Ch. Kashmir's Daddy Kool. This brindle Afghan, whelped November 18, 1973, was breeder-owner handled to his multiple Bests in Show making him Top Afghan in eastern Canada in 1977. Owner, Brigitte Blanchette, Kashmir Reg., 5 Marcel, Chateauguay, Que. J6K 1A7.

Afghan Hound

General Appearance — Aristocratic, dignified and aloof with an exotic 'Eastern' expression, long silky top-knot, distinctive coat pattern, prominent hip bones, large feet and appearing to have extreme bend of stifle due to profuse trouserings.

Head — Of good length, refined, skull evenly balanced with foreface. Nose slightly Roman in appearance, little or no stop, nasal bone falls away in front of eyes to give absolutely clear outlook. Underjaw strong, jaws long and punishing; mouth level but scissors bite not to be penalized. Occiput very prominent. Head surmounted by topknot of long silky hair.

Ears — Long, set on level with outer corners of the eyes, leather reaches nearly to end of nose and covered with long silky hair.

Eyes — Almond shaped (almost triangular), never full or bulgy and dark in colour.

Nose — Good size, black.

Faults — Coarseness; snipiness; overshot or undershot; eyes round or bulgy or light in colour; exaggerated Roman nose; lack of topknot.

Neck — Good length, strong and arched, running in a curve to the shoulders which are long, sloping and well laid back.

Faults — Neck too short or too thick, ewe neck; goose neck; neck lacking in substance.

Body — Back line appears level from shoulders to loin. Strong and powerful loin, slightly arched, falling away towards the stern with the hipbones very pronounced; well ribbed and tucked up in flanks. Height at shoulders equals distance from chest to buttocks; brisket well let down and of medium width.

Faults — Roach back, sway-back, goose rump, slack loin; lack of prominence of hipbones; too much width of brisket causing interference with elbows.

Tail — Set not too high, having a ring or curve on the end; should never be curled over or rest on back or carried sideways; never bushy.

Legs — Forelegs straight and strong with great length between elbow and pastern; elbows well held in; forefeet large in length and width; toes well arched; feet covered with long thick hair; fine in texture; pasterns long and straight; pads unusually large and well down on the ground. Shoulders angulated so legs are well set underneath the dog. Straight shoulders are a serious fault. All four feet of the Afghan Hound are in line with the body, turning neither in nor out. Hind feet are broad and of good length; toes well arched, covered with long thick hair, hindquarters powerful, well muscled with great length between hip and hock; hocks well let down; good angulation of both stifle and hock; slightly bowed from hock to crotch.

Faults — Front or back feet thrown outward or inward; pads too thin; feet too small; any other evidence of weakness in feet; weak or broken down pasterns; straight stifle; too long in hock.

Coat — Body well covered with thick, fine, silky hair except for saddle of short close hair which runs along back and from flanks and ribs upwards. All colour are permissible but white markings on head are undesirable. Coat is not trimmed or clipped. Short hair on cuffs on either front or back legs is permissibl Lack of saddle in mature dogs is a fault.

Height — Dogs 68.58 cm, bitches 63.50 cm, plus or minus 2.54 cm.

Weight — Dogs about 27.22 kg; bitches about 22.68 kg.

Gait — Smooth, elastic, powerful. Head and tail held high.

Temperament — Aloof, dignified, gay. Sharpness or shyness are faults.

Ch. (Can. & Eng.) Gardus Galloway. Imported September 1978, Galloway quickly received his championship winning his first Canadian group from the classes. Currently he's readying for his A.K.C. title. Owner, Martha G. Billes, Lochlore Reg., 1030 Hillcrest Ave. S.W., Calgary, Alta. T2T 0Z2.

Lakeland Terrier

Colour — Blue and tan, blue, black, black and tan, red, mustard, wheaten grizzle.
Weight — Dogs not to exceed 17 pounds (7.71 kg), bitches not to exceed 16 pounds (7.26 kg).
Head — Moderately broad in skull, with broad strong muzzle, not excessively long, black nose preferred but liver or flesh colour not to disqualify.
Mouth — Level.
Ears — Small and dropped, round or V-shaped.
Eyes — Dark or hazel (not too prominent).
Neck — In proportion to body.
Front — Narrow.
Forelegs — Straight.
Back — Moderately short and well coupled with long, sloping hindquarters.
Feet — Sound but not too flat.
Coat — Hard, dense and wiry.
Tail — Carried gaily, not docked too short.
General Appearance — Smart and workmanlike.

General Facts

Of all the breed standards currently in use in Canada, this one has to take the prize for brevity. The much more comprehensive Lakeland Terrier breed standard adopted by the American Kennel Club provides a far better mind's eye view of the actual dog. For comparison, the following is a compressed version, as approved by AKC in 1963.

General Appearance — Small, workmanlike, square, sturdy, gay.
Head — Balanced, rectangular. Skull flat on top and moderately broad, cheeks clean, stop barely perceptible. Muzzle broad with straight nose bridge and good fill-in beneath eyes. Nose black, liver permissible on liver-coated dogs. Jaws powerful. Teeth large; bite level or scissors. Ears small, V-shaped, fold just above top of skull, inner edge close to cheeks, flap pointed down. Eyes moderately small, somewhat oval, set square, fairly wide apart. Dark.
Neck — Reachy, good length; refined, strong; throat clean, nape arched. Withers higher than level of back.
Body — Square in proportion to height. Chest deep, moderately narrow extends to elbows which are held close to body. Shoulders sloping, muscles lean, almost flat in outline. Ribs well sprung, moderately rounded. Back short, topline level. Loins taut, short, may be trifle longer in bitches. Quarters strong, broad, muscular.
Legs and Feet — Forelegs strongly boned, clean, absolutely straight as viewed from front or side; no appreciable bend at pasterns. Hind legs strong, sturdy, second thighs long, nicely angulated at stifles and hocks; hocks well let down with bone from hock to toes straight and parallel to each other. Feet small, round, toes compact and well padded, nails strong. Dewclaws to be removed.
Tail — Set high, docked so that when dog set up in show position, tip of tail on approximate level with skull. Carriage gay, although a slight curve in direction of head is considered desirable. Tail curled over the back is faulty.
Coat and Colour — Coat double; outer hard, wiry; undercoat soft. Furnishings on muzzle and legs plentiful but not profuse. Colour may be blue, black, liver, black and tan, blue and tan, red, red grizzle, grizzle and tan, or wheaten. Tan as desirable in the Lakeland Terrier is a light wheaten or straw colour, with rich red or mahogany tan to be penalized. Otherwise, colours, as specified, are equally acceptable. Dark-saddled specimens (whether black grizzle or blue) are nearly solid black at birth, with tan points on muzzle and feet. The black recedes and usually turns greyish or grizzle at maturity, while the tan also lightens.
Size — The ideal height of the mature dog is 14½ inches from withers to ground with up to a half inch deviation either way permissible. Bitches may measure as much as one inch less than dogs. Weight of the well-balanced, mature specimen in hard, show condition, averages approximately 17 pounds.

Size is to be considered of lesser importance than other qualities, that is, when judging dogs of equal merit, the one nearest the ideal size is to be preferred. Symmetry and proportion are paramount.
Movement — Straight and free, with good length of stride. Paddling, moving close, and toeing-in are faulty.
Temperament — Bold, gay and friendly with a self-confident, cock-of-the-walk attitude. Shyness, especially shy-sharpness, in the mature specimen is to be heavily penalized.
Disqualification
The front teeth overshot or undershot.
nb: The British breed standard is quite close to the American but also penalizes: too long head, high set ears, slanting eyes, tail curled over back.

Ch. (Can. & Am.) Potala Keke's Golden Gatsby ROM. No. 1 Lhasa Apso in Canada in 1977. A top producer of specialty winning champion offspring, U.S. and Canada. Gatsby's record as a show dog and sire speaks for itself. Owner, Barbara Chevalier, Lady W Reg. Agent, L. Garrett Lambert, Halfmoon Farm, R.R. 1, Box 671, Mallorytown, Ont. K0E 1R0.

Lhasa Apso

proposed new breed standard

Origin and Purpose — Created by the Buddhist monks as a living symbol of the legend in which Buddha was rescued by a lion. The Lhasa Apso, a palace dog, was reserved for the Grand Lamas as one of the badges of their Holy Office. An ancient breed in existence since 800 B.C.

General Appearance — Small, exotic, hardy with well developed body, strong loins, good quarters and thighs. Coat long, straight, hard, dense, completely covers the animal.

Temperament — Extremely adaptable, intelligent, faithful, knowing.

Size — Males 10 to 11 inches (25.4 to 27.94 cm) at withers; bitches are 9 to 10 inches (22.85 to 25.4 cm); both with one half inch tolerance. Body length, point of shoulders to point of buttocks, slightly longer than height at withers. Desired weight from 12 to 18 pounds (5.443 to 8.165 kg). Well balanced, compact type preferred.

Coat and Colour — Adult coat hard, dense, of good length. Straight desired. There is sometimes a slight wave in a very long coat. Coat to be parted from nose to root of tail. Head — Has heavy furnishings with good fall over eyes, good whiskers and beard. In heavily coated dogs a small neutral-coloured elastic may be used to control fall over the eyes or eyefall may be tied back in two small ponytails with elastic, one on either side of part. No clips, barrettes or bows allowed. Any deviation will result in dog being excused from ring. In obedience hair may be tied back from eyes. Ears — heavily furnished; legs — well furnished; tail well furnished; feet should be surrounded with hair, pads should have hair between them; forequarters, hindquarters and neck are heavily furnished with hair. All colours considered equal.

Head — Skull moderately narrow, falling away from behind eyebrow ridges in marked degree. Cranium almost flat, not domed. Viewed from front top of cranium narrower than width at level of eyes. Foreface straight. Length of muzzle from tip of nose to inside corner of eye to be one-third of total length from tip of nose to back of skull. Muzzle narrow and blunt. Nose black; tip level with or slightly below lower eye rim; bite, level preferred with full dentition, incisors to be in straight line. Lips, black. Eyes, dark brown, not large and full or small and sunken; iris of reasonable size, no white showing at base or top of eye. Eyes frontally placed in almond shaped black rim. Ears pendant; set well back on skull at eye level (not level with topline of skull); leather to hang close to head, in adults should reach the level of the lower jaw.

Neck — Well proportioned, strong, long enough to carry the head well.

Forequarters — Shoulders strong, muscular, well laid back; upper arm may have a very slight curve for the spring of rib; lower arm should not be bowed; from front when dog standing legs should be straight, parallel, elbows well under body; forelimbs support a good share of body weight when dog standing or moving at slow pace. No weakness of pasterns; feet short, round, compact with good pads; pads black; nails hard and black; dew claws permissible.

Body — Topline level; chest, ribs should extend well back along body; slightly curved ribs should not extend below elbows; loin slightly arched. Too long a loin adds excess length to back, results in loss of strength to forepart of body; if loin too short there will be loss of flexibility; loins firmly muscled; croup has degree of angulation which gives power for the forward propulsion; abdomen tucked up to a shallower depth at loin.

Hindquarters — Strongly muscled, in balance with forequarters. Hocks viewed from rear strong, straight, parallel, perpendicular to ground, turn neither in nor out; from side hock joint should point backward but not extend beyond stern; in motion hocks flex to show pads when viewed from rear. Stifle moderately bent; feet same as in forequarters.

Tail — Set well up, carried forward close to back with tip hanging on either side of body; tail should not rise vertically; a kink at end permitted.

Gait — Easy moving, free flowing trot is normal pace of Lhasa Apso; trot shows character of his movement at its best and is what should be aimed for. The dog should not be run in the show ring.

General Facts

This proposed new breed standard contains three significant changes — colour preference has been dropped; a level topline is specified; the section on 'gait' has been added as well as some directions to exhibitors regarding grooming and control of eyefall. The balance is an expansion and more detailed description of breed characteristics as covered in the standard now in use.

General Appearance — Small, exotic, hardy with well developed body, strong loins, good quarters and thighs. Coat long, straight, hard, dense, completely covers the animal.

Temperament — Extremely adaptable, intelligent, faithful, knowing.

Size — Males 10 to 11 inches (25.4 to 27.94 cm) at withers; bitches are 9 to 10 inches (22.85 to 25.4 cm); both with one half inch tolerance. Body length, point of shoulders to point of buttocks, slightly longer than height at withers. Desired weight from 12 to 18 pounds (5.443 to 8.165 kg). Well balanced, compact type preferred.

Coat and Colour — Adult coat hard, dense, of good length. Straight desired. There is sometimes a slight wave in a very long coat. Coat to be parted from nose to root of tail. Head — Has heavy furnishings with good fall over eyes, good whiskers and beard. In heavily coated dogs a small neutral-coloured elastic may be used to control fall over the eyes or eyefall may be tied back in two small ponytails with elastic, one on either side of part. No clips, barrettes or bows allowed. Any deviation will result in dog being excused from ring. In obedience hair may be tied back from eyes. Ears — heavily furnished; legs — well furnished; tail well furnished; feet should be surrounded with hair, pads should have hair between them; forequarters, hindquarters and neck are heavily furnished with hair. All colours considered equal.

Head — Skull moderately narrow, falling away from behind eyebrow ridges in marked degree. Cranium almost flat, not domed. Viewed from front top of cranium narrower than width at level of eyes. Foreface straight. Length of muzzle from tip of nose to inside corner of eye to be one-third of total length from tip of nose to back of skull. Muzzle narrow and blunt. Nose black; tip level with or slightly below lower eye rim; bite, level preferred with full dentition, incisors to be in straight line. Lips, black. Eyes, dark brown, not large and full or small and sunken; iris of reasonable size, no white showing at base or top of eye. Eyes frontally placed in almond shaped black rim. Ears pendant; set well back on skull at eye level (not level with topline of skull); leather to hang close to head, in adults should reach the level of the lower jaw.

Neck — Well proportioned, strong, long enough to carry the head well.

Forequarters — Shoulders strong, muscular, well laid back; upper arm may have a very slight curve for the spring of

Ch. (Can. & Eng.) Gardus Galloway. Imported September 1978, Galloway quickly received his championship winning his first Canadian group from the classes. Currently he's readying for his A.K.C. title. Owner, Martha G. Billes, Lochlore Reg., 1030 Hillcrest Ave. S.W., Calgary, Alta. T2T 0Z2.

Lakeland Terrier

Colour — Blue and tan, blue, black, black and tan, red, mustard, wheaten grizzle.
Weight — Dogs not to exceed 17 pounds (7.71 kg), bitches not to exceed 16 pounds (7.26 kg).
Head — Moderately broad in skull, with broad strong muzzle, not excessively long, black nose preferred but liver or flesh colour not to disqualify.
Mouth — Level.
Ears — Small and dropped, round or V-shaped.
Eyes — Dark or hazel (not too prominent).
Neck — In proportion to body.
Front — Narrow.
Forelegs — Straight.
Back — Moderately short and well coupled with long, sloping hindquarters.
Feet — Sound but not too flat.
Coat — Hard, dense and wiry.
Tail — Carried gaily, not docked too short.
General Appearance — Smart and workmanlike.

General Facts

Of all the breed standards currently in use in Canada, this one has to take the prize for brevity. The much more comprehensive Lakeland Terrier breed standard adopted by the American Kennel Club provides a far better mind's eye view of the actual dog. For comparison, the following is a compressed version, as approved by AKC in 1963.

General Appearance — Small, workmanlike, square, sturdy, gay.
Head — Balanced, rectangular. Skull flat on top and moderately broad, cheeks clean, stop barely perceptible. Muzzle broad with straight nose bridge and good fill-in beneath eyes. Nose black, liver permissible on liver-coated dogs. Jaws powerful. Teeth large; bite level or scissors. Ears small, V-shaped, fold just above top of skull, inner edge close to cheeks, flap pointed down. Eyes moderately small, somewhat oval, set square, fairly wide apart. Dark.
Neck — Reachy, good length; refined, strong; throat clean, nape arched. Withers higher than level of back.
Body — Square in proportion to height. Chest deep, moderately narrow extends to elbows which are held close to body. Shoulders sloping, muscles lean, almost flat in outline. Ribs well sprung, moderately rounded. Back short, topline level. Loins taut, short, may be trifle longer in bitches. Quarters strong, broad, muscular.
Legs and Feet — Forelegs strongly boned, clean, absolutely straight as viewed from front or side; no appreciable bend at pasterns. Hind legs strong, sturdy, second thighs long, nicely angulated at stifles and hocks; hocks well let down with bone from hock to toes straight and parallel to each other. Feet small, round, toes compact and well padded, nails strong. Dewclaws to be removed.
Tail — Set high, docked so that when dog set up in show position, tip of tail on approximate level with skull. Carriage gay, although a slight curve in direction of head is considered desirable. Tail curled over the back is faulty.
Coat and Colour — Coat double; outer hard, wiry; undercoat soft. Furnishings on muzzle and legs plentiful but not profuse. Colour may be blue, black, liver, black and tan, blue and tan, red, red grizzle, grizzle and tan, or wheaten. Tan as desirable in the Lakeland Terrier is a light wheaten or straw colour, with rich red or mahogany tan to be penalized. Otherwise, colours, as specified, are equally acceptable. Dark-saddled specimens (whether black grizzle or blue) are nearly solid black at birth, with tan points on muzzle and feet. The black recedes and usually turns greyish or grizzle at maturity, while the tan also lightens.
Size — The ideal height of the mature dog is 14½ inches from withers to ground with up to a half inch deviation either way permissible. Bitches may measure as much as one inch less than dogs. Weight of the well-balanced, mature specimen in hard, show condition, averages approximately 17 pounds.

Size is to be considered of lesser importance than other qualities, that is, when judging dogs of equal merit, the one nearest the ideal size is to be preferred. Symmetry and proportion are paramount.
Movement — Straight and free, with good length of stride. Paddling, moving close, and toeing-in are faulty.
Temperament — Bold, gay and friendly with a self-confident, cock-of-the-walk attitude. Shyness, especially shy-sharpness, in the mature specimen is to be heavily penalized.
Disqualification
The front teeth overshot or undershot.
nb: The British breed standard is quite close to the American but also penalizes: too long head, high set ears, slanting eyes, tail curled over back.

Lhasa Apso

proposed new breed standard

Origin and Purpose — Created by the Buddhist monks as a living symbol of the legend in which Buddha was rescued by a lion. The Lhasa Apso, a palace dog, was reserved for the Grand Lamas as one of the badges of their Holy Office. An ancient breed in existence since 800 B.C.

General Appearance — Small, exotic, hardy with well developed body, strong loins, good quarters and thighs. Coat long, straight, hard, dense, completely covers the animal.

Temperament — Extremely adaptable, intelligent, faithful, knowing.

Size — Males 10 to 11 inches (25.4 to 27.94 cm) at withers; bitches are 9 to 10 inches (22.85 to 25.4 cm); both with one half inch tolerance. Body length, point of shoulders to point of buttocks, slightly longer than height at withers. Desired weight from 12 to 18 pounds (5.443 to 8.165 kg). Well balanced, compact type preferred.

Coat and Colour — Adult coat hard, dense, of good length. Straight desired. There is sometimes a slight wave in a very long coat. Coat to be parted from nose to root of tail. Head — Has heavy furnishings with good fall over eyes, good whiskers and beard. In heavily coated dogs a small neutral-coloured elastic may be used to control fall over the eyes or eyefall may be tied back in two small ponytails with elastic, one on either side of part. No clips, barrettes or bows allowed. Any deviation will result in dog being excused from ring. In obedience hair may be tied back from eyes. Ears — heavily furnished; legs — well furnished; tail well furnished; feet should be surrounded with hair, pads should have hair between them; forequarters, hindquarters and neck are heavily furnished with hair. All colours considered equal.

Head — Skull moderately narrow, falling away from behind eyebrow ridges in marked degree. Cranium almost flat, not domed. Viewed from front top of cranium narrower than width at level of eyes. Foreface straight. Length of muzzle from tip of nose to inside corner of eye to be one-third of total length from tip of nose to back of skull. Muzzle narrow and blunt. Nose black; tip level with or slightly below lower eye rim; bite, level preferred with full dentition, incisors to be in straight line. Lips, black. Eyes, dark brown, not large and full or small and sunken; iris of reasonable size, no white showing at base or top of eye. Eyes frontally placed in almond shaped black rim. Ears pendant; set well back on skull at eye level (not level with topline of skull); leather to hang close to head, in adults should reach the level of the lower jaw.

Neck — Well proportioned, strong, long enough to carry the head well.

Forequarters — Shoulders strong, muscular, well laid back; upper arm may have a very slight curve for the spring of rib; lower arm should not be bowed; from front when dog standing legs should be straight, parallel, elbows well under body; forelimbs support a good share of body weight when dog standing or moving at slow pace. No weakness of pasterns; feet short, round, compact with good pads; pads black; nails hard and black; dew claws permissible.

Body — Topline level; chest, ribs should extend well back along body; slightly curved ribs should not extend below elbows; loin slightly arched. Too long a loin adds excess length to back, results in loss of strength to forepart of body; if loin too short there will be loss of flexibility; loins firmly muscled; croup has degree of angulation which gives power for the forward propulsion; abdomen tucked up to a shallower depth at loin.

Hindquarters — Strongly muscled, in balance with forequarters. Hocks viewed from rear strong, straight, parallel, perpendicular to ground, turn neither in nor out; from side hock joint should point backward but not extend beyond stern; in motion hocks flex to show pads when viewed from rear. Stifle moderately bent; feet same as in forequarters.

Tail — Set well up, carried forward close to back with tip hanging on either side of body; tail should not rise vertically; a kink at end permitted.

Gait — Easy moving, free flowing trot is normal pace of Lhasa Apso; trot shows character of his movement at its best and is what should be aimed for. The dog should not be run in the show ring.

General Facts

This proposed new breed standard contains three significant changes — colour preference has been dropped; a level topline is specified; the section on 'gait' has been added as well as some directions to exhibitors regarding grooming and control of eyefall. The balance is an expansion and more detailed description of breed characteristics as covered in the standard now in use.

Bull Terrier

(proposed new breed standard)

Origin and Purpose — The Bull Terrier is the Gladiator of the Canine race.

General Appearance — Must be strongly built, muscular, symmetrical and active, with a keen, determined and intelligent expression, full of fire and courage but of even temperament and amenable to discipline. Irrespective of size, dogs should look masculine and bitches feminine.

Size — There are neither weight nor height limits but there should be the impression of maximum substance to the size of the dog.

Coat and Colour — The coat should be short, flat, even and harsh to the touch, with a fine gloss. The skin should fit the dog tightly. For white, pure white coat, markings on the head are permissible. For coloured, colour (preferably brindle) to predominate. Skin pigmentation should not be penalized.

Head — The head should be long, strong and deep, right to the end of the muzzle, but not coarse. Viewed from the front it should be egg-shaped and completely filled, its surface being free from hollows or indentations. The top of the skull should be almost flat from ear to ear. The profile should curve gently downwards from the top of the skull to the tip of the nose which should be black and bent downwards at the tip. The nostrils should be well developed. The distance from the tip of the nose to the eyes should be perceptibly greater than that from the eyes to the top of the skull. The underjaw should be strong.

The teeth should be sound, clean, strong, of good size and perfectly regular. Either a level bite or scissors bite is acceptable. If a scissors bite, the upper front teeth should fit in front of and closely against the lower front teeth. The lips should be clean and tight. The eyes should appear narrow, obliquely placed and triangular, well sunken, as dark as possible and with a piercing glint.

The ears should be small, thin, and placed closely together. The dog should be able to hold them stiffly erect, when they should point straight upwards.

Neck — The neck should be very muscular, long, arched, tapering from the shoulders to the head, and free from loose skin.

Forequarters — The shoulders should be strong and muscular but without loading. The shoulder blades should be wide, flat, and attached closely to the chest wall, and should have a very pronounced backward slope of the front edge from bottom to top. The forelegs should have the strongest type of round quality bone and the dog should stand solidly upon them; they should be moderately long and perfectly parallel. The elbows should be held straight and the strong pasterns upright. The feet should be round and compact with well-arched toes.

Body — The body should be well-rounded with marked spring of rib, and a great depth from withers to brisket, so that the latter is nearer the ground than the belly. The back should be short and strong with the topline level behind the withers and arching or roaching slightly over the loin. The underline from the brisket to belly should form a graceful upward curve. The chest should be broad viewed from the front.

Hindquarters — The hind legs should be parallel viewed from behind. The thighs must be muscular and the second thigh well developed. The stifle joint should be well bent and the hock well angulated, with the bone to the foot short and strong.

Tail — The tail should be short, set on low. It should be carried horizontally. Thick at the root, it should taper to a fine point.

Gait — The moving dog shall appear well-knit, smoothly covering the ground with free, easy strides and with a typical jaunty air. Fore and hind legs should move parallel each to each when viewed from in front or behind, the forelegs reaching out well, and the hind legs moving smoothly at the hip and flexing well at the stifle and hock with great thrust.

Faults — Any departure from the foregoing points should be considered a fault and the seriousness of the fault should be in exact proportion to its degree.

Disqualification — Deafness.

General Facts

The proposed new standard for the Bull Terrier differs from the one currently in use on three significant points.

(1) The disqualification re coat colour has been dropped bringing the Canadian breed standard in line with those in use in other countries. It will be the judge's responsibility to penalize a mismark fault 'in exact proportion to its degree'.

(2) The reference to 'skin pigmentation' has been added.

(3) 'Deafness' is a disqualification.

Bulldog

General Appearance — Medium size, smooth coat; heavy thick set, low-swung body, massive short-faced head, wide shoulders, sturdy limbs. Suggests great stability, vigour, strength. Disposition equable, kind, resolute, courageous; demeanour pacific, dignified.

Gait — Loose jointed, shuffling, sidewise motion gives characteristic roll; action free, vigorous.

Proportion, Symmetry — 'Points' well distributed and bear good relation one to the other, no feature so prominent that animal appears ill proportioned. Bitches do not bear breed characteristics to same degree of perfection and grandeur as dogs. Mature dogs weigh about 50 pounds; bitches about 40 pounds.

Coat — Straight, short, flat, close, fine textured, smooth, glossy. (No fringe, feather or curl)

Colour — Uniform pure of its kind, brilliant. Various colours to be preferred (1) red brindle (2) all other brindles (3) solid white (4) solid red, fawn or fallow (5) piebald (6) inferior qualities of all the foregoing. nb: a perfect piebald preferable to a muddy brindle or defective solid. Solid black very undesirable but not so objectionable if occurring to a moderate degree in piebald patches. To be perfect brindles should have a fine, even, equal distribution of the composite colours. In brindles and solids small white patch on chest permissible. In piebalds colour patches to be well defined, of pure colour, distributed symmetrically.

Skin — Soft, loose, especially at head, neck and shoulders. Head and face should be covered with heavy wrinkles and at throat from jaw to chest there should be two loose pendulous folds forming dewlap.

Skull — Very large, in circumference, in front of ears, should measure at least height at shoulders. Viewed from front should appear high from corner of lower jaw to apex of skull, also very broad, square. From side head appears very high and very short from point of nose to occiput. Forehead flat, neither too prominent nor overhanging face. Cheeks well rounded, protruding sideways and outward beyond eyes. Frontal bones very well defined, broad, square and high, causing hollow between eyes, 'stop' should be both broad and deep and extend up middle of forehead dividing head vertically being traceable to top of skull.

Eyes — Seen from front situated low down in skull, as far from ears as possible, corners in straight line at right angles with stop. In front of head, wide apart as possible provided outer corners are within outline of cheeks viewed from front. Round in form, moderate size, neither sunken nor bulging, very dark in colour. Lids should cover white of eyeball when dog is looking directly forward, no haw.

Ears — Set high, front inner edge of each joins outline of skull at top back corner of skull to place them as wide, as high and as far from the eyes as possible. Small, thin, 'rose' most desirable.

Face — Measured from front of cheekbone to nose tip extremely short, muzzle very short, broad, turned up and very deep from corner of eye to corner of mouth. Nose large, broad, black, tip set back deeply between eyes. Distance from bottom of stop to tip of nose as short as possible, not to exceed length from tip of nose to edge of under lip. Nostrils wide, large, black, well-defined line between them. Flews thick, broad, pendant, very deep, completely overhanging lower jaw at each side. They join under lip in front and almost or quite cover teeth which are scarcely noticeable when mouth is closed. Jaws massive, very broad, square, undershot, lower projects in front of upper jaw and turns up. Teeth large, strong, canines wide apart, incisors in even row. Neck short, very thick, deep, strong, well arched. Shoulders muscular, very heavy, wide spread, slant outward giving stability and great power. Chest very broad, deep, full.

Brisket and Body — Very capacious with full sides, well rounded ribs, very deep from shoulders down to lowest part. Well let down giving dog low, short-legged appearance. Body well ribbed up behind with the belly tucked up and not rotund.

Back — Short, strong, very broad at shoulders, comparatively narrow at loins. Slight fall in back close behind shoulders, whence spine rises to loins, thence curving to tail forming arch.

Forelegs — Short, very stout, straight, muscular, set wide with well developed calves, outline bowed, bones not curved or bandy, nor feet too close.

Elbows — Low, stand well out and loose from body.

Hind Legs — Strong, muscular, longer then forelegs. Hocks slightly bent, well let down. Lower leg short, straight, strong, stifles turn slightly out; hocks thereby made to approach each other, hind feet turn outward. Feet moderate in size, compact, firmly set. Toes compact, well split up, knuckles high, nails short, stubby. Front feet may be straight or slightly out-turned but hind pointed well outward.

Tail — Straight or 'screwed' (never curved or curly), short, hung low, with decided downward carriage, thick root, fine tip. Straight should be cylindrical, uniform taper. 'Screwed', bends should be well defined, may be abrupt, even knotty, but no portion of the member should be elevated above base.

Disqualification — Dudley or flesh-coloured nose.

Bullmastiff

Origin and Purpose — Developed in England by game-keepers for protection against poachers. Foundation breeding was 60 percent Mastiff and 40 percent Bulldog. It is a guard and companion dog; should be loyal, obedient and suitable for training.

General Appearance — Powerfully built, symmetrical, showing great strength and activity but not cumbersome; upstanding and compact with breadth and depth of skull and body, the latter set on strong, sturdy, well-boned legs. Height measured from ground to top of withers nearly equals length from forechest to rear part of upper thigh and should slightly exceed height at hips. Bitches feminine, of somewhat lighter bone structure than male but should still convey strength.

Temperament — Bold, fearless, courageous, a dependable guard dog; alert and intelligent.

Size — Height at top of withers 25 to 27 inches (63.50 to 68.58 cm) for dogs; bitches 24 to 26 inches (60.96 to 66.04 cm).

Weight — Dogs 110 to 130 pounds (49.895 to 58.967 kg); bitches 100 to 120 pounds (45.359 to 54.431 kg). It is important that weight be in proportion to height and bone structure to ensure balance. Faults over/under height, weight.

Coat and Colour — Short, dense, weather protective. Any shade of red, fawn or brindle; colour to be pure and clear. A small white marking on chest permissible, not desirable. Faults (S) — White markings except on chest; (M) — Black shading on body, legs or tail (of reds and fawns).

Head — Skull large, equal in breadth, length and depth, fair amount of wrinkle when dog interested; well developed cheeks. Skull circumference may measure the height of dog. Forehead flat with furrow between eyes. Stop definite. Faults — narrow or shallow skull, domed forehead, insufficient stop. Muzzle should be short, broad, deep, in same proportion as skull; distance from tip of nose to stop should not exceed one-third of length from tip of nose to mid-occiput. Broad under eyes, nearly parallel in width to end of nose; blunt and cut off square appearing in profile in a plane parallel to line of skull. Black mask essential; nose should be black; flat; broad with widely spreading nostrils when viewed from front. Flews not too pendulous; lower jaw broad.

Disqualification — Liver mask, no mask.

Teeth — Level bite preferred or slightly undershot; canines large, set wide apart; other teeth strong, even, well-placed. Faults (S) — Overshot; teeth more than ¼ inch undershot; wry mouth; (M) — Irregular or poorly-placed teeth. Small teeth.

Eyes — Dark or hazel; medium size; set apart the width of muzzle. Yellow eyes disqualify.

Ears — V-shaped, carried close to cheeks; set on wide, high, level with occiput giving square appearance to skull. Darker in colour than body; when alert point of ear level with eye. Rose ears a serious fault. Too long or short, light colour (M).

Neck — Well arched, of moderate length, very muscular, almost equal in circumference to skull.

Forequarters — Shoulder bone should slope forward and downward from withers at angle of 45 degrees from vertical. Upper arm forms right angle with shoulder bone; shoulder bone and humerus approximately equal in length; length of foreleg from ground to elbow should be a little more than half distance from ground to withers, 52 percent. Shoulders and upper arms muscular, powerful, not overloaded. Forelegs powerful; bone round, heavy; vertical and parallel to each other, set well apart; elbows set close to body; pasterns straight and strong; feet medium size, turn neither in nor out, toes round, well arched. Pads thick, tough. Nails black.

Body and Tail — Body compact; chest wide, deep, ribs well sprung; well set down between forelegs. Back short, level; loins wide, muscular; croup slightly arched with fair depth of flank. Tail set on high, strong at root, tapering to hocks. May be carried straight or curved.

Hindquarters — In balance with forequarters. Pelvis slopes backward and downward from spine at angle of 30 degrees. Femur forms right angle with pelvis. Lower thigh bone (stifle) should set at an angle of 45 degrees to vertical. Pelvis and femur approximately equal in length. Ratio of the lengths of the femur to the tibia-fibula, to the hock approximately as 4:5:3. Length of lower leg from ground to hock joint a little less than 30 percent of distance from ground to top of hipbones. Lower leg vertical to ground; hips broad, in balance with shoulders and ribcage; hind legs strong, muscular, second thighs well developed but not cumbersome, set parallel to each other, well apart in balance with forelegs and body. Feet as in forequarters.

Gait — Free, balanced, vigorous; dog should have good reach in forequarters and good driving power in hindquarters; back should be level and firm indicating good transmission from rear to front. Coming on or from rear, at a moderate pace the dog shall track in two parallel lines, neither too close nor too wide; movement strong, well balanced; toes (fore and hind) point straight ahead.

Ch. (Can. & Am.) Rogerlyn Sea Hawk's Salty Sam. Sire: Ch. (Can., Am. & Eng.) Oudenarde Sea Hawk. Dam: Cairndania Davey's Darkster. In Canada, one Best in Show and ten groups. In the U.S., Top Cairn C.T.C.A. 1977 and 1978 and Group 1st at Board Walk, December 1978. Owner, Mrs. Betty Hyslop, Cairndania Reg., R.R. 1, Prescott Rd., Brockville, Ont. K6V 5T1.

Cairn Terrier

General Appearance — That of an active, game, hardy, small working terrier of the short-legged class; very free in its movements, strongly but not heavily built, standing well forward on its forelegs, deep in the ribs, well coupled with strong hindquarters and presenting a well proportioned build with a medium length of back, having a hard, weather-resisting coat; head shorter and wider than any other terrier and well furnished with hair giving a general foxy expression.

Skull — Broad in proportion to length with a decided stop and well furnished with hair on the top of the head, which may be somewhat softer than the body coat.

Muzzle — Strong but not too long or heavy. Teeth large — mouth neither overshot or undershot. Nose black.

Eyes — Set wide apart, rather sunken, with shaggy eyebrows, medium in size, hazel or dark hazel in colour, depending on body colour, with a keen terrier expression.

Ears — Small, pointed, well carried erectly, set wide apart on the side of the head. Free from long hairs.

Tail — In proportion to head, well furnished with hair but not feathery. Carried gaily but must not curl over back. Set on at back level.

Body — Well muscled, strong, active body with well-sprung, deep ribs, coupled to strong hindquarters, with a level back of medium length, giving an impression of strength and activity without heaviness.

Shoulders, Legs and Feet — A sloping shoulder, medium length of leg, good but not too heavy bone; forelegs should not be out at elbows, and be perfectly straight, but forefeet may be slightly turned out. Forefeet larger than hind feet. Legs must be covered with hard hair. Pads should be thick and strong and dog should stand well up on its feet.

Coat — Hard and weather resistant. Must be double-coated with profuse harsh outer coat and short, soft, close furry undercoat.

Colour — May be of any colour except white. Dark ears, muzzle and tail tip are desirable.

Ideal Size — Involves the weight, the height at the withers and the length of body. Weight for bitches 13 pounds (5.90 kg); for dogs 14 pounds (6.35 kg). Height at withers — bitches 9½ inches (24.13 cm); dogs 10 inches (25.4 cm). Length of body from 14½ to 15 inches (36.83 cm to 38.10 cm) from the front of the chest to back of hindquarters. The dog must be of balanced proportions and appear neither leggy nor too low to ground; and neither too short nor too long in body. Weight and measurements are for matured dogs at two years of age. Older dogs may weigh slightly in excess and growing dogs may be under these weights and measurements.

Condition — Dogs should be shown in good hard flesh, well muscled and neither too fat or thin. Should be in full good coat with plenty of head furnishings, be clean, combed, brushed and tidied up on ears, tail, feet and general outline. Should move freely and easily on a loose lead, should not cringe on being handled, should stand up on their toes and show with marked terrier characteristics.

Faults

1. Skull — Too narrow in skull.
2. Muzzle — Too long and heavy in foreface; mouth overshot or undershot.
3. Eyes — Too large, prominent, yellow, and ringed are all objectionable.
4. Ears — Too large, round at points, set too close together, set too high on the head; heavily covered with hair.
5. Legs and Feet — Too light or too heavy bone. Crooked forelegs or out at elbow. Thin ferrety feet; feet let down on the heel or too open and spread. Too high or too low on the leg.
6. Body — Too short back and compact a body, hampering quickness of movement and turning ability. Too long, weedy and snaky a body, giving an impression of weakness. Tail set on too low. Back not level.
7. Coat — Open coats, blousy coats, too short or dead coats, lack of sufficient undercoat, lack of head furnishings, lack of hard hair on the legs. Silkiness or curliness. A slight wave permissible.
8. Nose — Flesh or light-coloured nose.
9. Colour — White on chest, feet or other parts of body.

General Facts

A working terrier from the Scottish Highlands bred to catch vermin and larger game. The breed's name is taken from the Scottish word for a 'pile of stones' or cairn, around which this active little terrier worked. First exhibited in 1909, the breed has gained steadily in popularity since that year. This standard is unique in that it specifies the Cairn is to be shown on a loose lead.

Chihuahua (Long Coat)

Head — A well-rounded apple dome skull, with or without molera (comparable to fontanelle in human infant). Cheeks and jaws lean. Nose moderately short, slightly pointed (self coloured, in blond types, or black). In moles, blues and chocolate, they are self-coloured. In blond types, pink nose permissible.

Ears — Large, held erect when alert, but flaring at the sides at about an angle of 45 degrees when in repose. This gives breadth between the ears.

Eyes — Full, but not protruding, balanced, set well apart — dark, ruby or luminous. (light eyes in blond types, permissible.)

Teeth — Level.

Neck and Shoulders — Slightly arched, gracefully sloping into lean shoulders, may be smooth in the very short types, or with ruff about neck preferred. Shoulders lean, sloping into a slightly broadening support above straight forelegs that are set well under; giving a free play at the elbows. Shoulders should be well up, giving balance and soundness, sloping into a level back. (Never down or low.) This gives a chestiness, and strength of forequarters, yet not of the 'Bulldog' chest, plenty of brisket.

Back and Body — Level back, slightly longer than height. Shorter backs desired in males. Ribs rounded (but not too much 'barrel-shaped').

Hindquarters — Muscular, with hocks well apart, neither out nor in, well let down, with firm sturdy action.

Tail — Moderately long, carried cycle either up or out, or in a loop over the back, with tip just touching the back. (Never tucked under.) Hair on tail in harmony with the coat of the body, preferred furry. A natural bobtail or tailless permissible, if so born, and not against a good dog.

Feet — Small, with toes well split up, but not spread, pads cushioned, with fine pasterns. (Neither the hare nor the cat foot.) A dainty, small foot with nails moderately long.

Coat — The long-coated variety of the Chihuahua is judged by the same standard as the smoothcoated variety, except for the following:

Coat — In the Long Coats, the coat should be of a soft texture, either flat or slightly curly, with undercoat preferred. Ears fringed (heavily fringed ears may be tipped slightly, never down), feathering on feet and legs, and pants on hind legs. Large ruff on neck desired and preferred. Tail full and long (as a plume).

Disqualifications — Too thin coat, that resembles bareness.

Chihuahua (Short Coat)

Head — A well-rounded apple dome skull, with or without molera (comparable to fontanelle in human infant). Cheeks and jaws lean. Nose moderately short, slightly pointed (self coloured, in blond types, or black). In moles, blues and chocolate, they are self coloured. In blond types, pink nose permissible.

Feet — Small, with toes well split up, but not spread, pads cushioned, with fine pasterns. (Neither the hare nor the cat foot.) A dainty, small foot with nails moderately long.
Coat — In the smooth, the coat should be soft texture. Close and glossy. (Heavier coats with undercoats permissible.) Coat placed well over body with ruff on neck, and more scanty on head and ears.
Colour — Any colour — solid, marked or splashed.
Weight — One to six pounds (.45 to 2.72 kg), with two to four (.91 to 1.81 kg) preferable. If two dogs are equally good in type, the more diminutive is preferred.

Ch. (Can. & Am.) Mi-Tu's Han Su Shang. The most winning Chow in the world, having won 56 Bests in Show, 240 Group 1sts and nine specialty shows. Owners, J. C. F. Peddie, H. E. and J. I. Williams, Bu Dynasty, 4 Neville Park Blvd., Toronto, Ont. M4E 3P6.

Chow Chow

General Appearance — A massive, cobby, powerful dog, active and alert, with strong, muscular development and perfect balance. Body squares with height of leg at shoulder; head, broad and flat, with short, broad, and deep muzzle, accentuated by a ruff; the whole supported by straight, strong legs. Clothed in a shining, offstanding coat, the Chow is a masterpiece of beauty, dignity and untouched naturalness.

Head — Large and massive in proportion to size of dog, with broad, flat skull; well filled under the eyes; moderate stop; and proudly carried.

Expression — Essentially dignified, lordly, scowling, discerning, sober, and snobbish — one of independence.

Muzzle — Short in comparison to length of skull; broad from eyes to end of nose, and of equal depth. The lips somewhat full and overhanging.

Teeth — Strong and level, with a scissors bite; should neither be overshot, nor undershot.

Nose — Large, broad, and black in colour.

Disqualification — Nose spotted or distinctly other colour than black, except in blue Chows, which may have solid blue or slate noses.

Tongue — A blue-black. The tissues of the mouth should approximate black.

Disqualification — Tongue red, pink or obviously spotted with red or pink.

Eyes — Dark, deep-set, of moderate size, and almond shaped.

Ears — Small, slightly rounded at tip, stiffly carried. They should be placed wide apart, on top of the skull, and set with a slight, forward tilt.

Disqualification — Drop ear or ears. A drop ear is one which is stiffly carried or stiffly erect, but which breaks over at any point from its base to its tip.

Body — Short, compact, with well sprung ribs, and let down in the flank.

Neck — Strong, full, set well on the shoulders.

Shoulders — Muscular, slightly sloping.

Chest — Broad, deep, and muscular. A narrow chest is a serious fault.

Back — Short, straight, and strong.

Loins — Broad, deep, and powerful.

Tail — Set well up and carried closely to the back, following line of spine at start.

Forelegs — Perfectly straight, with heavy bone and upright pasterns.

Hind Legs — Straight-hocked, muscular, and heavy boned.

Feet — Compact, round, catlike, with thick pads.

Gait — Completely individual. Short and stilted because of straight hocks.

Coat — Abundant, dense, straight, and off-standing. Rather coarse in texture with a soft, woolly undercoat. It may be any clear colour, solid throughout, with lighter shadings on ruff, tail, and breechings.

Disqualifications — Nose spotted or distinctly other than black, except in blue Chows, which may have solid blue or slate noses. Tongue red, pink or obviously spotted with red or pink. Drop ear or ears.

General Facts

The Chow was known as a hunting dog in China as early as 150 B.C. A member of the Spitz family, some authorities claim that the breed descends from the Tibetan Mastiff while others hold that the Chow is one of the original breeds. First specimens were black but when smoky blues appeared in a litter they were elevated to the role of temple dogs which guarded the Buddhist monasteries. The Chow's hunting powers are legendary in China where it is known variously as 'the Black-tongued, wolf and bear dog'. It is the only breed of dog possessing a blue-black tongue which authorities claim gives credence to the 'original' theory.

The breed was brought to England during the latter part of the 18th century but it was not until Queen Victoria took an interest in Chow Chows that they began to become popular. A breed club was formed in England in 1895 and since becoming a recognized breed in the U.S. in 1901, the Chow has made steady progress on this continent.

Until a few years ago different styles of Chow Chows seemed to prevail in different parts of the world. However, today, because there has been much interchange of breeding stock from one continent to another, international authorities state that the breed style is becoming quite uniform around the world.

The dog stands from 19 to 20 inches at the shoulders and weighs from 55 to 70 pounds. He makes a quiet, at times aloof, house pet. Is devoted to his owners but watchful of strangers and therefore an excellent guardian of family and home. He is well suited to either city or country living. And, as an added bonus, needs no special trimming to keep his coat in typical Chow outline. However, because of the dense undercoat, daily brushing is recommended.

Collie (Rough)

General Character — Lithe, strong, responsive, active, stands straight and firm. Outline shows speed, grace, strength; face intelligent. Balanced.
Head — Light in proportion to size of dog. From front and in profile head resembles well-blunted, lean wedge, smooth, clean, balanced. On sides it tapers gradually and smoothly from ears to end of black nose. Planes parallel. Stop slight but perceptible. Muzzle smooth, well rounded, blunt, not square. Underjaw strong, clean cut, depth of skull not excessive. Teeth of good size, bite scissors. Both overshot and undershot undesirable, under more severely penalized. Brows slightly prominent, back skull flat, occiput not highly peaked; width of backskull less than length. Correct width varies with individual, is dependent upon extent to which it is supported by length of muzzle. Prominent head faults very severely penalized.
Eyes — Foreface chiseled, eyes placed obliquely. Except for blue merles must be matched in colour. Almond shaped, medium size, never large or prominent. Colour dark, eye does not show any yellow ring or enough prominent haw to affect expression. Eyes clear, bright, intelligent. In blue merles, dark brown eyes preferable, but either or both eyes may be merle or china without penalty. A large, round, full eye detracts from expression. Eye faults heavily penalized.
Ears — In proportion to head; in repose folded lengthwise, thrown back into frill; alert they are drawn well up on backskull, carried about three-quarters erect. Prick or low ears spoil expression, penalized accordingly.
Neck — Firm, clean, muscular, sinewy, heavily frilled; fairly long, carried upright with slight arch at nape; proud upstanding appearance.
Body — Firm, hard, muscular; trifle long in proportion to height; ribs well rounded behind well sloped shoulders; chest deep, extending to elbows; back strong, level, supported by powerful hips and thighs; croup sloped to give well rounded finish. Loin powerful, slightly arched.
Legs — Forelegs straight, muscular, fair amount of bone. Cumbersome appearance undesirable. Narrow and wide placement penalized. Forearm moderately fleshy, pasterns flexible, without weakness. Hind legs less fleshy, muscular at thighs, sinewy; hocks and stifles well bent. Feet comparatively small, oval. Soles well padded and tough, well arched, close together. When dog not in motion, legs and feet are judged by allowing dog to come to a natural stop in a standing position so both forelegs and hind legs are placed well apart.
Gait — Characteristic. A sound Collie is not out at elbows but it does move toward an observer with front feet tracking close together; front legs do not cross, nor does Collie move with a pacing or rolling gait. Viewed from front, dog seems capable of changing direction of travel instantaneously. Viewed from rear hind legs, hock joint to ground, move in comparatively close together, parallel, vertical planes. Hind legs powerful, propelling. Viewed from side, gait is smooth. The reasonably long 'reaching' stride is even, easy, light and effortless.
Tail — Moderately long, bone reaching to hock joint or below. Carried low when the dog is quiet, the end having an upward twist or 'swirl'. When gaited or when dog is excited it is carried gaily but not over back.
Coat — Well fitting, proper textured; abundant except on head and legs. A soft, open outer coat or curly outer coat is penalized. Undercoat soft, furry and so close together it is difficult to see the skin when hair is parted. Coat abundant on mane and frill. Face or mask smooth. Forelegs smooth, well feathered to back of pasterns. Hind legs smooth below hock joints. Any feathering below hocks is removed for show. Hair on tail profuse and on hips long and bushy. Texture, quantity and extent to which coat 'fits the dog' are important points.
Colour — Four recognized: sable and white; tri-colour; blue merle and white. No preference. Sable and white is predominantly sable with white markings usually on chest, neck, legs, feet and tip of tail; blaze may be on foreface or backskull or both. The tri-colour predominantly black with white markings as in a sable and white and has tan shadings on and about head and legs. Blue merle is mottled colour, predominantly blue-grey and black with white markings, usually has tan shadings as in the tri-colour markings. White is predominantly white, preferably with sable or tri-colour markings. Blue merle colouring undesirable in whites.
Size — Dogs 24 to 26 inches (60.96 to 66.04 cm) at shoulder and weigh 60 to 75 pounds (27.215 to 34.019 kg); bitches from 22 to 24 inches (55.88 to 60.96 cm), weigh 50 to 65 pounds (22.68 to 29.45 kg).

Dachshund (Standard Wire-haired)

The general appearance is the same as that of the short-haired but without being long in the legs it is permissible for the body to be somewhat higher off the ground.

Hair — With the exception of the jaw, eyebrows and ears, the whole body is covered with a perfectly uniform tight, short, thick, rough, hard coat but with finer, shorter hairs (undercoat) everywhere distributed between the coarser hairs, resembling the coat of the German Spiky-haired Pointer. There should be a beard on the chin. The eyebrows are bushy. On the ears the hair is shorter than on the body; almost smooth but in any case conforming to the rest of the coat. The general arrangement of the hair should be such that the Wire-haired Dachshund, when seen from a distance, should resemble a smooth-haired. Any sort of soft hair in the coat is faulty, whether short or long, or wherever found on the body; the same is true of long, curly or wavy hair or hair that sticks out irregularly in all directions; a flag tail is also objectionable.

Tail — Robust, as thickly haired as possible, gradually coming to a point and without a tuft.

Colour of Hair, Nose and Nails — All colours are admissible. White patches on the chest, though allowable are not desirable.

Trunk — Long, fully muscled. Back with sloping shoulders, short, rigid pelvis should lie in straightest possible line between withers and slightly arched loins, latter being short, rigid, broad. Chest: Breastbone strong, so prominent in front that on either side a depression (dimple) appears. When viewed from front, thorax oval, extends downward to mid-point of forearm. Enclosing structure of ribs appears full and oval and when viewed from above or from side, full-volumed. Well ribbed up, gradually merging into line of abdomen. Front leg when viewed in profile should cover lowest point of breastline. Abdomen: Slightly drawn up.

Hindquarters — Viewed from behind, of completely equal width.

Croup — Long, round, full, robustly muscled, plastic, only slightly sinking toward tail.

Pelvic Bones — Not too short, rather strongly developed, moderately sloping.

Thigh Bone — Robust, good length, set at right angles to pelvic bones.

Hind Legs — Robust, well-muscled, well rounded buttocks.

Knee Joint — Broad, strong.

Calf Bone — In comparison with other breeds, short, perpendicular to thigh bone, firmly muscled.

Bones at base of foot (tarsus) — Present flat appearance, strongly prominent hock, broad tendon of Achilles.

Central Foot Bones (metatarsus) — Long, movable towards calf bone, slightly bent toward front, perpendicular viewed from behind.

Hind Paws — Four compactly, closed beautifully arched toes, as in case of front paws. Whole foot posed equally on ball and not merely on toes; nails short.

Tail — Set in continuation of spine, extending without pronounced curvature.

Note: Inasmuch as the Dachshund is a hunting dog, scars from honourable wounds shall not be considered a fault. Both the Long-haired and the Short-haired are old, well-fixed varieties but into the Wire-haired Dachshund the blood of other breeds has been purposely introduced; nevertheless, in breeding him the greatest stress must be placed upon conformity to the general Dáchshund type.

Dachshund (Miniature Smooth)

Hair — Short, thick, smooth, shining.
Tail — Gradually tapered to a point, well but not too richly haired; long, sleek bristles on underside considered a patch of strong-growing hair, not a fault.
Colour of hair, nose and nails —
One-coloured Dachshund — includes red (often called tan), red-yellow, and yellow, with or without a shading of interspersed black hairs. Clean colour preferable, red more desirable than red-yellow or yellow. Dogs strongly shaded with interspersed black hairs belong to this class.
Nose, Nails — Black, red admissible, not desirable.
Two-coloured Dachshund — Deep black, chocolate, grey and white; each with rust-brown or yellow marks over eyes on sides of jaw and underlip, on inner edge of ear, front, breast, inside and behind front leg, on paws and around anus, from there to about one-third to one-half of length of tail on underside. (Most common two-coloured Dachshund usually called black-and-tan.) Except on white dogs no white desirable. Nose, nails — Black dogs, black; chocolate, brown or black, grey, grey or flesh coloured but latter not desirable; white, black nose and nails preferred.
Dappled and striped Dachshund — Dappled is a clear brownish or greyish colour or even a white ground with dark irregular patches of dark-grey brown, red-yellow or black (large areas of one colour not desirable). It is desirable that neither the light nor the dark colour should predominate. Colour of the striped (brindle) Dachshund is red or yellow with a darker streaking. Nose and nails — as for one- and two-coloured Dachshunds.
Head — Tapers uniformly to tip of nose, clean-cut. Skull slightly arched, slopes gradually without stop into finely-formed slightly arched muzzle. Bridge over eyes strongly prominent. Nasal cartilage and tip of nose long, narrow; lips tight well covering lower jaw. Nostrils well open. Jaws open wide, hinged well back of eyes, strongly developed bones and teeth. Powerful teeth. Scissors bite.
Eyes — Medium size, oval, situated at sides, clean, energetic, pleasant expression; reddish-brown to brownish-black.
Ears — Set near top of head not too far forward, long but not too long, rounded. Carriage animated, forward edge just touches cheek.
Neck — Fairly long, muscular, clean-cut, slightly arched nape, extends in graceful line into shoulders, carried proudly.
Front — Muscular, compact, deep, long, broad.
Forequarters — Shoulder blade; long broad, obliquely, firmly placed, well muscled. Upper Arm: same length as shoulder blade at right angles to it, strong bone, hard muscle, lying close to ribs, capable of free movement. Forearm short compared to other breeds, slightly turned inwards; well muscled on front and outside, tightly stretched tendons on inside and at back. Wrist joint closer together than shoulder joint, front does not appear absolutely straight. Paws full broad in front, trifle inclined outwards, compact; compact, well-arched toes, tough pads. Close together, a pronounced arch; nails strong, pads tough.
Note: Except for coat type, all six breeds of Dachshund conform to the same general body type. The sections covering 'Trunk' and 'Hindquarters' will be found under 'Dachshund, Standard Wire-Haired' on page 90.
Please note — Miniature Dachshunds over 4.54 kg are not eligible to compete at shows held under the Dog Show Rules of The Canadian Kennel Club. Adherence to conformation smallness, mental and physical vitality are the Miniature's outstanding characteristics.

Dachshund (Miniature Wire-haired)

General Appearance — Is the same as that of the short-haired, but without being long in the legs it is permissible for the body to be somewhat higher off the ground.

Hair — With the exception of the jaw, eyebrows, and ears, the whole body is covered with a perfectly uniform, tight, short, thick, rough, hard coat, but with finer, shorter hairs (undercoat) everywhere distributed between the coarser hairs, resembling the coat of the German Spiky-haired Pointer. Tail — Robust, as thickly haired as possible, gradually coming to a point and without a tuft.

Colour of Hair, Nose and Nails — All colours are admissible. White patches on the chest, though allowable, are not desirable.

Note — Inasmuch as the dachshund is a hunting dog, scars from honourable wounds shall not be considered a fault. A Miniature Dachshund over ten pounds (4.54 kg) is not eligible to compete at shows held under the Dog Show Rules of The Canadian Kennel Club. If, at such a show, a Miniature Dachshund is officially weighed and is found to exceed ten pounds, said dog shall be declared absent and not permitted in competition at the show. Within the limits imposed, symmetrical adherence to the general dachshund conformation, combined with smallness and mental and physical vitality, should be the outstanding characteristic of the Miniature Dachshund. The breed standard is to be found on pages 90 and 91.

General Facts

While the larger sized dachshunds were developed in Germany to rout out the badger, this was not the only underground work the farmer wished a dog to do. Hungry rabbits undermined his fields with their community dwelling places and feasted on his crops. They became so much of an economic problem that it was decided to breed a dog with the hunting ability of the dachshund but of a much smaller girth. The result was the Miniature Dachshund who was small enough to wiggle his way into a rabbit hole and rout the quarry from its warren. In Germany, the breed standard for the miniatures specifies a maximum measurement taken around the deepest part of the chest in addition to a weight specification.

The wire-haired varieties represent a cross between the smooth dachshund and a rough-coated terrier breed, thought to have been the Dandie Dinmont. This was to sharpen their aggressive instincts and is the reason why the wire-haireds are allowed to be a shade higher on leg than their smooth-coated and long-haired relatives. The cross has been a mixed blessing. While the result has been an endearing little dog with an almost human expression, level toplines pose a continuing challenge to breeders.

In Canada, six separate breeds of dachshund are recognized by The Canadian Kennel Club. That is, two sizes, Miniature and Standard, each in three coats. In the United States, there are just three breeds — the Smooth, the Long-haired and the Wire-haired. This means that both miniatures and standards of the same coat compete against each other in order to earn championship points. In Canada, a dachshund may not be registered as a miniature until after it is one year of age. At this time the owner must submit a sworn affidavit, along with the registration application, stating that the dog weighs within the ten-pound limit. While an overweight specimen is not subject to disqualification, under CKC rules a dog officially weighed over the limit must be declared absent and not permitted to compete.

Dalmatian

Origin and Purpose — The Dalmatian is thought to be of Central European or Mediterranean origin and is known at least from the middle ages. Because of its affinity for horses and capacity to travel great distances at a steady pace it came to be used as a dog to run with and guard coaches and was known as a stable dog. Even later, the Dalmatian became popular as a dog to travel with and guard horse-drawn fire-fighting equipment, especially in the U.S.A.

General Appearance — Well balanced, strong, muscular, active, free from coarseness and lumber; capable of great endurance and speed compatible to its purpose.

Temperament — Lively, active, of good demeanour.

Size — Overall balance of prime importance and height of dogs ideally 22 to 24 inches (55.88 to 60.96 cm), bitches 21 to 23 inches (53.34 to 58.42 cm).

Coat and Colour — Coat short, dense, fine, slightly glossy, neither woolly nor silky. Colour and markings most important. Two acceptable colours are white with black spots and white with liver spots. Ground colour pure white. Black spots as deep and rich as possible. Liver spots should be of a colour closer to chocolate than to tan or yellow. Spots should not intermingle, but be as round and well defined as possible, the more distinct the better, range in size from a dime to a half dollar. Spots on face, head, ears, legs, tail and extremities smaller than those on body.

Head — Fair length, moderate stop. Skull flat, rather broad between ears, moderately well defined at the temple; entirely free from permanent wrinkle. Muzzle long, powerful, never snipey, lips clean, fitting jaws moderately close. Nose in black spotted dogs always black; in liver always brown. Bite — scissors. Eyes set moderately well apart, medium size, round, bright, sparkling, expression intelligent, colour greatly depends on markings of dog. In black-spotteds eyes dark (black or brown), in liver-spotteds lighter (amber or brown). Blue or partly blue eyes undesirable, to be penalized. Rim around eyes in black-spotteds black; brown in liver-spotteds. No dog to have flesh-coloured eye rims. Ears set on rather high, moderate size, rather wide at base, gradually tapering to rounded point; carried close to head, thin and fine in texture, always spotted, the more profusely the better. Solid black or liver is undesirable.

Neck — Fairly long, nicely arched, light, tapering, entirely free from throatiness.

Forequarters — Shoulder well laid, not straight, clean and muscular denoting speed; laid flat against body. Forelegs perfectly straight, strong and heavy in bone; elbows close to body. Pasterns straight. Forefeet compact, toes well arched, tough, elastic pads. Nails in black spotteds black or white; or a nail may be both black and white; in the liver-spotteds, brown or white, or a nail may be both brown and white.

Body — Topline level, may arch slightly over loin. Chest not too wide, very deep, capacious, ribs moderately well sprung, never rounded like barrel hoops. Loin strong, muscular.

Hindquarters — Muscles of upper and lower thigh clean, powerful, well defined. Hocks well let down. Stifle moderately well bent. Feet — as for the forefeet.

Tail — Should reach hock, being strong at base, gradually tapering towards end, free from coarseness, not set on too low down, carried with slight upward curve but never curled. Preferably spotted.

Gait — The Dalmatian should have great freedom of movement; a smooth, powerful, rhythmic stride and action with good reach and drive. Viewed from behind, the hind legs should track the fore with no indication of the body moving at an angle to the point of direction. A short stride and/or padding action are incorrect.

Faults — Partly flesh-coloured nose. Cow hocks. Flat feet. Incompletely coloured eyerims. Any eye colour other than black, brown or amber.

Disqualifications — Patches — a patch is defined as a solid, sharply defined mass of black or liver that is appreciably larger than any other of the markings on the dog. Several spots that are so adjacent that they actually touch one another at their edges do not constitute a patch. Tri-colours. Any colour other than liver and white or black and white. Undershot or more than 1/8 inch (.3175 cm) overshot bite.

Ch. (Can., Am., Bda., Dom., Mex., Int., & World) Glahms Golden Sovereign. A multiple Best in Show winner, the magnificent Golden Sovereign holds the record for the most number of championships ever attained by a Dandie Dinmont in the history of the breed. Owner, Miss M. Macbeth, Glahms Reg., Graymalkin Manor, R.R. 3, Stouffville, Ont. L0H 1L0.

Dandie Dinmont Terrier

Head — Strongly made, in proportion to dog's size, muscles show extraordinary development, especially the maxillary.
Skull — Broad between ears, tapers towards eyes, distance from inner corner of eye to back of skull about the same as from ear to ear, forehead well domed; head is covered with soft silky hair not confined to topknot; the lighter in colour and silkier, the better.
Cheeks — Starting from ears gradually taper towards muzzle which is deep, strong and measures about 3 inches (7.62 cm) in length, or in proportion to skull as 3 is to 5.
Muzzle — Covered with hair of little darker shade than topknot, of same texture as feather of forelegs; top of muzzle generally bare for about 1 inch (2.54 cm) from back part of nose, bareness coming to a point towards the eye and being about 1 inch (2.54 cm) broad at nose; nose and inside of mouth black or dark-coloured.
Teeth — Very strong especially canines, which are of extraordinary size for such a small dog. Canines fit well into each other so as to give greatest holding and punishing power, teeth level in front, upper ones slightly overlapping lower. Swine mouth objectionable but more acceptable than undershot jaw.
Eyes — Set wide apart, large, full, round, bright, expressive of great determination, dark hazel.
Ears — Pendulous, set well back, wide apart, low on skull, hanging close to cheek with slight projection at base, broad at junction of head and tapering almost to a point; the tapering being mostly on the back part, the forepart of ear coming almost straight down from its junction with head to the tip. They should harmonize in colour with body colour; ears of a Pepper dog are covered with a soft straight brownish hair (in some cases almost black); of a Mustard, hair should be mustard in colour, a shade darker than the body but not black. All should have a thin feather of light hair starting about 2 inches (5.08 cm) from tip and of nearly same colour and texture as topknot which gives ear the appearance of a distinct point. Dog is often one or two years old before feather is shown. Cartilage and skin of ear should be rather thin; ear length from 3 to 4 inches (7.62 to 10.16 cm).
Neck — Very muscular, well developed, strong, showing great power of resistance, well set into shoulders.
Body — Long, strong, flexible; ribs well sprung, round; chest well developed, let well down between forelegs; back rather low at the shoulder having a slight downward curve and a corresponding arch over loins with a slight gradual drop from top of loins to root of tail; both sides

proposed new standard

General Conformation and Appearance — Dog of middle size, body square. Males 26 to 28 inches, bitches 24 to 26 inches, ideals 27½ and 25½ inches. Compact, muscular, powerful, elegant, proud carriage; energetic, watchful, determined, alert, fearless, loyal, obedient.

Head — Long, dry, resembling blunt wedge front and side views. From front head widens gradually towards base of ears in practically unbroken line. Top of skull flat, slight stop, plane of muzzle parallels that of skull. Cheeks flat, muscular; lips lying close to jaws, not drooping; jaws full, powerful, well filled under eyes. Nose, black in black dogs, dark brown in reds, dark grey in blues and dark tan in fawns. Eyes almond shaped not round, moderately deep set with vigorous, energetic expression. Iris of uniform colour ranging from medium to darkest brown in blacks, the darker more desirable; reds, blues and fawns, iris colour blends with that of the markings but not of a lighter hue than that of markings. Teeth strongly developed, white, lower incisors upright, touch inside of upper incisors; 42 teeth (22 in lower jaw, 20 in upper), correctly placed; distemper teeth not to be penalized. Two missing teeth is a fault; three missing a major fault; four missing or more, disqualifies. Ears trimmed, carried erect:

Neck — Upright, well muscled, dry, well arched, nape widens gradually toward body; length in proportion to body and head.

Body — Back short, firm, of sufficient width, muscular at loin extending in straight line from withers to slightly rounded croup. Withers pronounced; brisket full, broad, reaching deep to elbow; chest broad, forechest well defined; ribs well sprung from spine but flattened at lower end to provide elbow clearance; belly well tucked up extending in a curved line from chest; loins wide, muscled; hips broad in proportion to body, breadth of hips being approximately equal to breadth at rib spring. Tail docked at second joint should appear to be the continuation of spine without material drop.

Forequarters — Shoulders slope forward and downward at a 45 degree angle to ground, meet upper arm at angle of 90 degrees. Length of shoulder blade and upper arm equal. Height from elbow to withers approximately equals height from ground to elbow. Legs seen from front and side perfectly straight and parallel to each other from elbow to pastern; muscled and sinewy with round, heavy bone. In a normal position and when gaiting, elbow lies close to brisket. Pasterns firm; feet well arched, compact, catlike, turn neither in nor out. Dew Qimmiit's Sanngilaaq ED. Born March 3, 1978, the youngest dog from a team of 15 to earn the Expedition Dog (ED) title from the Eskimo Dog Society, having completed a 750-mile expedition in the Canadian Arctic. Owner, William J. Carpenter, Qimmiit Reg., Eskimo Dog Research Foundation, Box 1032, Yellowknife, N.W.T. X0E 1H0.

Eskimo Dog

General Impression — The Eskimo Dog is one of the best known breeds of work dogs in the world and should not be confused with smaller breeds of dogs that have borrowed his name. The real Eskimo dogs originating from Greenland, Labrador and the northeastern part of the continent are Nature's product for sled-dog work. Being a draft animal for centuries in the Arctic regions, he has developed a powerful body and heavy coat. Although large-boned and of rugged build, many specimens are very beautiful and as attractive as show types in any other breed. Eskimo dogs are good natured and very intelligent.

Size and Weight — Shoulder height for males 22 to 25 inches (55.88 to 63.50 cm), females 20 to 23 inches (50.80 to 58.42 cm). Weight for males 65 to 85 pounds (29.483 to 38.555 kg), females 50 to 70 pounds (22.68 to 31.751 kg).

Head — Well proportioned, broad and wedge shaped. Strong, flat skull and powerful jaws. Large black or brown nose. Lips black or brown. Muzzle medium length.

Eyes — Small and deep set.

Ears — Short and firm, carried erect and turned forward.

Neck — Short, heavy and very muscular.

Forequarters — Broad, big boned and muscular. Forelegs straight.

Chest — Deep and broad with ribs well sprung.

Tail — Large and bushy, and carried up or curled over the back.

Hindquarters — Medium length, heavy and very muscular. Stifles well bent.

Paws — Large with thick pads and well protected with hair so that these Eskimo dogs can haul heavy loads for miles over rough ice and crusted snow without getting footsore.

Coat — Should be a heavy covering of master hair varying from three to six inches (7.62 to 15.24 cm) in length. Some specimens are found in Northern Labrador with a long, shaggy coat of master hair averaging six inches in length. There is also a dense undercoat of wool varying from one to two inches (2.54 to 5.08 cm) in length.

Colour and Markings — Genuine Eskimo dogs may be found in all known dog colours: black, white, black and white, wolf grey, blue grey and all shades of tan or buff; and in all combinations of these colours.

Note

Revised breed standard is soon to go before the Breed Standards Committee. Proposed revisions will include change of the official name from Eskimo Dog to Canadian Eskimo Dog. For further information write: Secretary, Eskimo Dog Society, Box 2015, Yellowknife, N.W.T.

Ch. Jayenn's Firebrand Finn. Pictured at 11 months as he earned his championship. His first major win was at the Finnish Spitz booster at nine months. Famous sire, Tank. Owner, Joan Grant, Jayenn Perm. Reg., Box 1423, Golden, B.C. V0A 1H0.

Finnish Spitz

General Appearance — Body is almost square. Height at shoulder and length of body are: males 17½ to 19½ inches (44.45 to 49.53 cm) and bitches 15½ to 17½ inches (39.37 to 44.45 cm). Carriage brisk. The dog's whole being shows liveliness especially the eyes, ears and tail. The special characteristics of the breed are that it likes hunting, is courageous and faithful. The breed is utilized for bird hunting.

Head — Medium sized and clean. Skull a little domed with a good clear stop. Foreface narrow and clean cut, tapering evenly from above the side. Nose coal black. Lips tight and thin. Ears pricked and pointed, with fine hair, very mobile. Eyes medium sized, lively and preferably dark.

Neck — Springy throat. In males it looks rather short, due to the thick coat. Medium length in bitches.

Back — Short, straight and strong.

Ribs — Deep. Belly line slightly drawn up.

Shoulders — Shoulders fairly straight.

Legs — Forearms strong and straight. Hindquarters strong, hocks of medium size. Feet preferably round.

Tail — The tail curls from the base in a bow over the back and lies flat against the thigh. The tail must lie tight and finish in the middle of the thigh. When straightened, the tail vertebrae usually reach down to the hocks.

Coat — The coat on the head and legs is short and close, but longer on the back of the legs. On the body longish, half erect or erect. Stiffer on the neck and back. The stiff hair on the shoulders, especially in males, is noticeably longer and coarser. Hair on the back of the legs is long and thick, also in the tail. Undercoat is short, soft, dense and lighter coloured.

Colour — Colour on back is brownish red or yellowish brown, preferably clear. Lighter shade inside of ears, on cheeks, under chin, brisket, stomach, inside of legs, long hair on the back of legs and tail under-hair. White is permissible on feet and chest score. Black is permissible, a little on lips, and sparse, black, pointed, stiff hairs on the back.

Faults — Muscular head. Coarse foreface. Ears carried with a forward, backward, outward or inward inclination; tips drooping and long inner hair. Eyes yellow or watery. Inward-turned elbows and too weak pasterns. Tail slackly carried or with too much curl. Coat long, soft, too short, wavy, curly or close coated. Dirty colours. Multi-coloured clear borders. Spurs are bad looking.

General Facts

The Finnish Spitz is not recognized by the American Kennel Club, although there is a group of breed enthusiasts who are working to establish it in sufficient numbers in the U.S. so official recognition may be sought. The Canadian standard has been adapted from the one in use in the breed's country of origin which, of course, is Finland. The final reference to 'spurs' in the standard should be interpreted to mean 'dew claws', which the British standard phrases 'disfiguring dew claws'.

Today, the Finnish Spitz is reported to be the most popular breed of dog in its homeland. But less than a century ago it was on the verge of extinction. True breed type seemed to be disappearing. But thanks to the efforts of some Finnish sportsmen who searched the northern parts of the country, enough typical specimens were obtained to set up a breeding program. In time, true breed type was re-established and the Finnish Spitz went on to enjoy great success. In 1927 the first brace was brought to Britain and by 1935 The Kennel Club granted official recognition to the breed.

As the British have a way of doing, they gave the breed a nickname, 'Finkie'. And although it has not taken on with the public as introductions often are, the 'Finkie' does command a loyal following. At larger championship shows one can expect to see a fair-sized entry.

A few of the dogs found their way into Canada and by 1974 they were established here in sufficient numbers to seek Canadian Kennel Club recognition. Their numbers are still scarce. Nevertheless, a few are shown each year. These have generally been of excellent quality and have accounted for some nice placings in the Hound Group.

Those who own a Finnish Spitz as a family pet have nothing but the highest praise for the breed. They are unique in appearance, hardy, loyal and extremely courageous. Temperament is excellent. They are of a nice medium size, suitable for town or country life and need only regular brushing to keep their coats in condition. Young puppies have a striking 'foxy' appearance and have occasionally been mistaken for baby foxes.

Fox Terrier (Smooth)

Head — Skull flat, moderately narrow, decreasing in width to eyes. Little apparent stop; cheeks clean; ears v-shaped, small, of moderate thickness dropping forward close to cheek; top line of folded ear well above level of skull. Jaws strong and muscular, of fair punishing strength, well chiseled below the eyes. Muzzle gradually tapers to nose which is black. Eyes and rims dark in colour, moderately small, rather deep-set, full of fire, life and intelligence and as nearly as possible circular. Yellow eye most objectionable. Scissors bite. Little difference in length between skull and foreface of a well-balanced head.

Neck — Clean, muscular, without throatiness, of fair length, gradually widening to shoulders.

Shoulders — Long, sloping, well laid back, fine at points, clearly cut at withers.

Chest — Deep, not broad.

Back — Short, straight, level, strong. Brisket deep yet not exaggerated.

Loin — Very powerful, muscular, very slightly arched. Foreribs moderately arched, back ribs deep and well sprung, well ribbed up.

Hindquarters — Strong, muscular, free from droop or crouch; thighs long, powerful; stifles well curved, turned neither in nor out; hocks well bent, near the ground, should be perfectly upright and parallel viewed from behind the dog standing well up on them. Most undesirable is a short second thigh and a straight stifle.

Stern — Set on rather high, carried gaily but not over back or curled; of good strength.

Legs — Forelegs viewed from any direction straight with bone strong down to feet, little or no appearance of ankle in front, short and straight in pasterns. Both fore and hind legs carried straight forward in travelling, stifles not turning outward; elbows hang perpendicular to body, work free of sides.

Feet — Round, compact, not large; soles hard, tough; toes moderately arched, turned neither in nor out.

Coat — Smooth, flat, hard, dense, abundant; belly and under side of thighs should not be bare.

Colour — White predominates; brindle, red or liver markings objectionable.

Symmetry, Size, Character — Gay, lively, active; bone and strength in a small compass essential but not cloddy or coarse. Neither leggy nor short in leg; stands like a cleverly-made hunter covering a lot of ground, yet with a short back. According to present day requirements, a full sized, well-balanced dog should not exceed 15½ inches (39.37 cm) at the withers, the bitch being proportionately lower; nor should the length of back from withers to root of tail exceed 12 inches (30.48 cm) while, to maintain relative proportions, the head should not exceed 7¼ inches nor be less than 7 inches. A dog with these measurements show condition a margin of 1 p

German Shepherd Dog

General Appearance — Strong, agile, well muscled, alert, balanced.

Height — Dogs 63.50 cm, bitches 58.42.

Weight — Dogs from 34 to 38 kg, bitches from 27 to 31 kg. These are ideals in proper flesh and condition.

Coat — Double, outer is harsh, straight, lying close to body. Slight wave or wiry texture permissible. Head, including inside ear, foreface, legs, paws covered with short hair, neck with longer thicker hair. Rear of fore and hindlegs hair somewhat longer extending to pastern and hock.

Proportion — Longer than tall, desirable proportion as 10 is to 8½.

Forequarters — Shoulder blade long, laid flat with rounded upper end in vertical line above elbow, sloping well forward. Withers high, shoulder blades meeting closely at top, upper arm set on at right angles.

Hindquarters — Ideally, bones relate to each other in a series of sharp angles. Thigh bone parallels shoulder blade, stifle bone parallels upper arm. Viewed from side thigh is broad, thigh and stifle well muscled of proportionate length forming as nearly as possible a right angle. Metatarsus strong, clean and short, hock joint sharply defined.

Head — Clean cut, strong, noble. In proportion to body. Muzzle long, strong, lips firmly fitted, planes parallel. Seen from front forehead moderately arched, skull slopes into long wedge-shaped muzzle without abrupt stop. Jaws strong. Ears moderately pointed, open toward front, erect. Eyes — medium size, almond shaped, set a little obliquely not protruding. Dark. Teeth — strong, 20 upper, 22 lower, scissors bite.

Neck — Strong, muscular, clean cut, relatively long, in proportion. At attention head is raised, neck carried high. Typical carriage forward and a little higher than top of shoulder especially when in motion.

Topline — Withers high, sloping into level back which is straight, strong relatively short. Loin viewed from top broad, strong, without undue length between last rib and thigh. Croup — long, gradually sloping. Tail — bushy extending at least to hock. Set smoothly into croup, low. At rest hangs in slight curve, excited or in motion curve accentuated and tail raised but never over back.

Body — Deep, solid without bulkiness.

Forechest — Prosternum well filled, carried well down between legs.

Chest — Deep, capacious, well carried foreward. Viewed from side breastbone shows ahead of shoulder. Ribs — well sprung, long, neither barrel or flat, carried down at least to elbow. Ribbing carried well back. Abdomen — firm, moderately tucked up.

Legs — Bone straight, oval, development in proportion to dog. Pastern medium, strong, springy. Metacarpus — short, clean, strong, sharply defined. Feet short,

Great Dane

General Conformation — Dignified, strong, elegant, great size, well formed, smoothly muscled. Well balanced, spirited, courageous, friendly, dependable, majestic. Males very masculine, bitches feminine. Male body as square as possible; bitches, somewhat longer body permissible.

Colour — Brindle Danes — Base colour from light golden yellow to golden yellow brindled with strong black cross stripes. The more intensive the more attractive; small white marks at chest and toes not desirable. Fawn Danes — Golden yellow to deep golden yellow with black mask. Deep colour must be given preference. Small white spots on chest and toes not desirable. Blue Danes — Pure steel blue with no tinge of yellow, black, mouse grey. Black Danes — Glossy black. White markings such as stripes on chest, speckled chest and markings on paws permitted, not desirable. Harlequin Danes — Base colour pure white with black torn patches irregularly and well-distributed over entire body; pure white neck preferred. Patches never large enough to appear like a blanket, nor so small as to give stippled or dappled effect. Eligible but less desirable are a few small grey spots, also pointings. White base colour with a few large spots; bluish-grey pointed background are faults.

Size — Male not less than 30 inches (76.20 cm) at shoulders, preferred 32 inches or more provided he is well proportioned to his height; female not less than 28 inches (71.12 cm), preferred 28 inches or more provided she is well proportioned.

Condition of Coat — Very short, thick, smooth, glossy. Faults — stand-off coat; dull hair.

Movement — Long, easy, springy, no toss or roll of body. Back line moves parallel to ground. Gait denotes strength and power. Rear legs drive; forelegs track smoothly and straight. The Dane should track in two parallel straight lines.

Rear End — Croup full, slightly drooping. First thighs broad, muscular. Second thighs strong, long; seen from side angulation of first thigh with body, of second thigh with first thigh and pastern root with second thigh should be neither too straight nor too exaggerated. From rear, hocks turn neither in nor out. Faults — straight croup, steep croup; too narrow croup. Hind legs — soft, flabby, poorly muscled thighs. Hocking in or out, steep rear; overangulation; too long in relation to forelegs.

Paws round, turn neither in nor out; toes short, arched, well closed; nails short, strong, dark as possible.

Great Pyrenees

General Appearance — A dog of immense size, great majesty, keen intelligence, and kindly expression; of unsurpassed beauty and a certain elegance, all white or principally white with markings of badger, grey, or varying shades of tan. In the rolling, ambling gait it shows unmistakably the purpose for which it has been bred, the strenuous work of guarding the flocks in all kinds of weather on the steep mountain slopes of the Pyrenees. Hence soundness is of the greatest importance and absolutely necessary for the proper fulfillment of his centuries' old task.

Size — The average height at the shoulder is 27 to 32 inches (68.58 to 81.28 cm) for dogs, and 25 to 29 inches (63.50 to 73.66 cm) for bitches.

The average length from shoulder blades to root of tail should be the same as the height in any given specimen.

The average girth is 36 to 42 inches (91.44 to 106.68 cm) for dogs and 32 to 36 inches (81.28 to 91.44 cm) for bitches.

The weight for dogs runs 100 to 125 pounds (45.359 to 56.699 kg) and 90 to 115 pounds (40.823 to 52.163 kg) for bitches.

A dog heavily boned; with close cupped feet; double dewclaws behind and single dewclaws in front.

Head — Large and wedge-shaped, measuring 10 to 11 inches (25.40 to 27.94 cm) from developed and with no apparent stop.

Cheeks — Flat.

Ears — V-shaped, but rounded at the tips, of medium size, set parallel with the eyes, carried low and close to the head except when raised at attention.

Eyes — Of medium size set slightly obliquely, dark, rich brown in colour with close eyelids, well pigmented.

Lips — Close-fitting, edged with black.

Dewlaps — Developed but little.

The head is in brief that of a brown bear, but with the ears falling down.

Neck — Short, stout and strongly muscular.

Body — Well-placed shoulders set obliquely, close to the body.

Back and Loin — Well coupled, straight and broad.

Haunches — Fairly prominent.

Rump — Sloping slightly.

Ribs — Flat-sided.

Chest — Deep.

Tail — Of sufficient length to hang below the hocks, carried low in repose, and curled high over the back, 'making the wheel' when alert.

Coat — Created to withstand severe weather, with heavy, fine white undercoat and long, flat, thick outer coat of coarser hair, straight or slightly undulating.

Qualities — In addition to his original age-old position in the scheme of pastoral life as protector of the shepherd and his

Maltese

proposed new standard

General Appearance — Should suggest a vigorous, well-proportioned body with a mantle of long, white, straight coat hanging evenly down each side.

Temperament — The Maltese is among the gentlest mannered of all little dogs. They are intelligent, vigorous, very affectionate and seemingly fearless. Aggressive behaviour towards judge, handlers and other dogs is to be severely penalized.

Size — Weight under seven pounds with from four to six pounds preferred. Not to exceed 10 inches at the shoulder.

Coat and Colour — Should be of good length, but not so as to impede action. The coat is single, that is, with no undercoat. It hangs flat, straight and silky on either side of the centre part, which should run from tip of nose to tip of tail. The texture should be even throughout with no suggestion of woolliness, curliness or cosmetic alteration. The long head hair may be tied up in a single topknot or divided into two. The colour is PURE white but lemon markings on puppies should not be penalized.

Head and Skull — Head in proportion to the size of the dog. From stop to centre of the skull (centre being between forepart of the ears) and stop to tip of the nose should be equally balanced. The skull is slightly rounded, rather broad between the ears and moderately well defined at the temples. The stop is moderate. The muzzle is fine and slightly tapered, but not snipey, with a good firm underjaw. The nose is small, black and in balance with the size of the eyes. Teeth may meet in an even edge to edge bite or in a scissors bite. The lips should be black.

Eyes — Should be dark brown with black eyerims set in the centre of the cheeks. Halos of pigmentation around the eyes give a more beautiful expression. The shape is not quite round but not almond shaped, and their size should be in proportion to the size of the face; there should be no suggestion of bulging or prominence and the expression should be gentle but very alert.

Ears — Should be low set, the hair long and well feathered and hanging close to the side of the head, the hair to be mingled with the coat at the neck and shoulders.

Neck — Of sufficient length and proportion to the body to give a high carriage of head.

Forequarters — The shoulder blades are sloping at an approximate 45 degree angle, elbows are well knit and held close to the body. Forelegs are straight, their pastern joints well knit and devoid of appreciable bend. The feet should be round and small and well up off the pasterns. Pads of the feet are black. The hair around the feet may be trimmed to give a neater appearance.

Body — Should be in every way well balanced. Essentially short and cobby – the height from the withers to the ground to equal the length from the withers to the root of the tail. The topline should be straight from the tip of the shoulders to the root of the tail. Ribs should be well sprung, chest fairly deep, at least to the elbows, the loins taut, strong and well tucked up underneath.

Hindquarters — Legs are fine boned and nicely feathered. Hind legs are strong and moderately angulated at the stifles and hock. The hock is straight, turning neither in nor out.

Tail — Is set high and should be long haired and carried well arched over the back with the tip resting on the hind quarter and either side.

Gait — The gait should be smooth and flowing without extended weaving. In stride the forelegs reach forward, straight and free from the shoulders, elbows close. The hind legs move in a straight line with good driving action. The topline is level, head held high and tail carried gracefully over the back resting on the hindquarter.

Scale of Positive Points — Body, Movement, Size; Head, Eyes, Ears, Nose, Pigmentation; Legs, Feet, Action; Tail and its carriage; Coat, Colour, Texture; Condition, General Appearance and Balance.

Scale of Negative Points — Lack of Pigmentation; Cowhocks or hind leg toeing in or out; Weaving in front, toeing in or out; Gay tail; Roach back, not level in topline; Undershot or overshot jaws; Prominent or bulging eyes; Colour other than white in adult dogs; Kinky, curly or outstanding coat; Biting, snapping or fearful temperament.

General Facts

The proposed new standard for the Maltese is markedly different from the one currently in use in Canada. Preferred weight now conforms to the American ideal of six pounds. More attention is given to correct coat, type and colour, as well as the various points of physical conformation. Temperament comes in for special mention with fearful and/or aggressive behaviour to be severely penalized.

Mastiff

General Character and Symmetry — Large, massive, symmetrical and well-knit frame. A combination of grandeur and good nature, courage and docility.

General Description of Head — In general outline giving a massive appearance when viewed from any angle. Breadth greatly to be desired.

Skull — Broad and somewhat rounded between the ears, forehead slightly curved, showing marked wrinkles which are particularly distinctive when at attention. Brows (superciliary ridges) moderately raised. Muscles of the temples well developed, those of the cheeks extremely powerful. Arch across the skull a flattened curve with a furrow up the centre of the forehead. This extends from between the eyes to halfway up the skull.

Ears — Small, V-shaped, rounded at the tips. Leather moderately thin, set widely apart at the highest points on the sides of the skull continuing the outline across the summit. They should lie close to the cheeks when in repose. Ears dark in colour, the blacker the better, conforming to the colour of the muzzle.

Eyes — Set wide apart, medium in size, never too prominent. Expression alert but kindly. The stop between the eyes well marked but not too abrupt. Colour of eyes brown, the darker the better and showing no haw.

Face and Muzzle — Short, broad under the eyes and running nearly equal in width to the end of the nose. Truncated, i.e. blunt and cut off square, thus forming a right angle with the upper line of the face. Of great depth from the point of the nose to under jaw. Underjaw broad to the end and slightly rounded. Canine teeth healthy, powerful and wide apart. Scissor bite preferred but a moderately undershot jaw permissible providing the teeth are not visible when the mouth is closed. Lips diverging at obtuse angles with the septum and sufficiently pendulous so as to show a modified square profile. Nose broad and always dark in colour, the blacker the better, with spread flat nostrils (not pointed or turned up) in profile. Muzzle dark in colour, the blacker the better. Muzzle should be half the length of the skull, thus dividing the head into three parts — one for the foreface and two for the skull. In other words, the distance from the tip of nose to stop is equal to one-half the distance between the stop and the occiput. Circumference of muzzle (measured midway between the eyes and nose) to that of the head (measured before the ears) as three is to five.

Neck — Powerful and very muscular, slightly arched, and of medium length. The neck gradually increases in circumference as it approaches the shoulder. Neck moderately 'dry' (not showing an excess of loose skin).

Chest and Flanks — Wide, deep, rounded and well let down between the forelegs, extending at least to the elbow. Forechest should be deep and well defined. Ribs extremely well rounded. False ribs deep and well set back. There should be a reasonable, but not exaggerated, cut-up.

Shoulder and Arm — Slightly sloping, heavy and muscular. No tendency to looseness of shoulders.

Forelegs and Feet — Legs straight, strong and set wide apart, heavy bones. Elbows parallel to body. Feet heavy, round and compact with well arched toes. Pasterns strong and bent only slightly. Black nails preferred.

Hind Legs — Hindquarters broad, wide and muscular. Second thighs well developed, hocks set back, wide apart and parallel when viewed from the rear.

Back and Loins — Back muscular, powerful and straight. Loins wide and muscular, slightly rounded over the rump.

Tail — Set moderately high and reaching to the hocks or a little below. Wide at the root, tapering to the end, hanging straight in repose, forming a slight curve but never over the back when dog is in action.

Coat — Outer coat moderately coarse. Undercoat dense, short and close lying.

Colour — Apricot, silver fawn or dark fawn-brindle. Fawn-brindle should have fawn as a background colour which should be completely covered with very dark stripes. In any case muzzle, ears and nose must be dark in colour, the blacker the better, with similar colour tone around the orbits, extending upwards between them.

Size — Dogs, minimum, 30 inches (76.20 cm) at the shoulder; bitches, minimum 27½ inches (69.85 cm) at the shoulder.

General Facts

Thought to have been brought to Britain during the Roman invasion, the Mastiff has been renowned as a guard and fighting dog for two thousand years. The breed suffered a serious depletion of numbers in Britain during World War II and American dogs were imported to help re-establish the breed. Still quite rare both abroad and on this continent.

Newfoundland

Origin and Purpose — Originated in Newfoundland from dogs indigenous to the island and big black bear dogs introduced by the Vikings. With the advent of European fishermen, a variety of new breeds helped shape and re-invigorate the breed, but the essential characteristics of the dog remained. By 1610 the distinct physical characteristics and mental attributes had been established. Large size, heavy coat and webbed feet permit him to withstand rigours of extreme climate and sea while serving as lifeguard and draught animal.

General Appearance — Massive, deep bodied, well muscled, coordinated, projecting dignity in stance and head carriage. Length of dog from top of withers to base of tail equals distance from top of withers to ground; distance from top of withers to underside of chest greater than distance from underside of chest to ground. Bitch may be slightly longer and is less massive. A mature dog never appears leggy or lacking substance. Free moving with a slight roll perceptible. Substantial webbing between toes always present. Large size desirable but never at the expense of gait, symmetry and balance. Fine bone faulty.

Temperament — Expression soft, reflects character — benevolent, intelligent, dignified but capable of fun. He is known for his gentleness, serenity. Any show of ill temper or timidity severely faulted.

Size — Average height for adult dogs 28 inches, adult bitches 26 inches. Average weight for adult dogs 150 pounds, adult bitches 120 pounds. Large size desirable but not to be favoured over correct gait, symmetry, structure.

Coat and Colour — Coat double, water resistant. Outer coat moderately long and straight with no curl; slight wave permissible. When rubbed the wrong way coat tends to fall back into place. Undercoat soft and dense, less so during summer months, but always found to some extent on rump and chest. Open coat is to be faulted. Hair on head, muzzle and ears, short, fine. Front and rear legs feathered. Tail completely covered with long dense hair but does not form a flag. Traditional colour black; sunburned black permissible. White markings on chest, toes and/or tip of tail permissible. The Landseer Newfoundland is white with black markings. Preferred pattern of markings is black head with white blaze extending onto muzzle, black saddle, rump and upper tail. All remaining parts to be white with a minimum of ticking. Symmetry of markings and beauty of pattern characterize the best marked dogs. Shown in same classes as blacks unless special classes are provided for them.

Head — Massive with broad skull, slightly arched crown, strongly developed occipital bone. Forehead and face smooth, free of wrinkles. Stop not abrupt. Muzzle clean cut, covered with short fine hair; rather square, deep, moderately short. Nostrils well developed. Bitch's head feminine and less massive. A narrow head, snipey or long muzzle to be faulted. Pronounced flews not desirable. Eyes are dark brown, relatively small, deep set; spaced wide, show no haw. Round, protruding, yellow eyes objectionable. Ears relatively small, triangular, tips rounded; set well back on side of head, lie close; when brought forward leather reaches inner corner of eye on same side. Bite scissors or level.

Neck — Strong, muscular, well set on; long enough to permit dignified head carriage, no surplus dewlap.

Forequarters — Forelegs straight, parallel, elbows close to chest; shoulders well muscled, laid back at angle near 45 degrees; pasterns slightly sloping. Down in pasterns faulty. Feet proportionate, well rounded, tight, toes compact, firm (cat). Splayed toes faulty; toeing in or out undesirable.

Body — Chest broad, full, deep; brisket to elbows. Back broad, good rib spread, topline level from withers to croup. Loins strong, well muscled; croup broad. Pelvis angle 30 degrees. From side body deep, no discernible tuck-up; bone massive but does not give sluggish appearance.

Hindquarters — Hip assembly broad, strong, well developed; upper thighs wide, muscular; lower thighs strong, fairly long; stifles well bent; hocks well let down, well apart and parallel, turn neither in nor out. Feet firm, tight; dewclaws should be removed.

Tail — Hangs straight down, may curve a little at tip, reaches hocks or below; in motion carried straight out with slight upward curve, never curled over back nor curved inward between legs. Kink or curl at end very objectionable.

Gait — Good reach, strong drive; legs move straight forward parallel to line of travel; slight roll; at fast trot dog tends to single track, topline remains level.

Disqualifications — Bad temperament, short flat coat (Labrador Retriever type), markings of any other colour than white on black dog, any colours other than traditional black or Landseer (white and black).

Norwegian Elkhound

General Description — The Norwegian Elkhound is a typical northern dog, of medium size, with a compact, proportionately short body, with a thick and rich, but not bristling, grey coat, with prick ears, and with a tail that is curled and carried over the back. His temperament is bold and energetic.

Head — 'Dry' (without any loose skin), broad at the ears; the forehead and back of the head only slightly arched; the stop not large, yet clearly defined. The muzzle is of medium length, thickest at the base and, seen from above or from the side, tapers evenly without being pointed. The bridge of the nose is straight; the lips are tightly closed.

Ears — Set high, firm and erect, are higher than they are wide at the base, pointed (not rounded) and very mobile. When the dog is listening, the orifices are turned forward.

Eyes — Not protruding, brown in colour, preferably dark, lively, with fearless energetic expression.

Neck — Of medium length, 'dry' (without any loose skin), strong, and well set up.

Body — Powerful, compact, and short, with broad deep chest, well-sprung ribs, straight back, well-developed loins, and stomach very little drawn-up.

Legs — Firm, straight and strong; elbows closely set on; hind legs with little angulation at knees and hocks. Seen from behind, they are straight.

Feet — Comparatively small, somewhat oblong, with tightly closed toes, not turned out. There should be no dewclaws on hind legs.

Tail — Set high, short, thickly and closely haired, but without brush; tightly curled, not carried too much to one side.

Coat — Thick, rich and hard, but rather smooth-lying. On head and front of legs, short and even; longest on neck and chest, on buttocks, or hindside of forelegs and on underside of tail. It is made up of longer and harder covering hairs, dark at the tops, and of a light, soft, woolly undercoat.

Colour — Grey, with black tips to the long covering hairs; somewhat lighter on chest, stomach, legs, underside of tail, and around anus. The colour may be lighter or darker, with a slight shading towards yellow; but a pronounced variation from the grey colour disqualifies. Too dark or too light individuals should be avoided; also, yellow markings or uneven colouring. There should be no pronounced white markings.

Height at Shoulder — Dogs, about 20½ inches (52.07 cm); bitches, about 18 inches (45.72 cm).

Disqualification — Pronounced variation from grey colour.

General Facts

Both the Canadian and American breed standards for the Norwegian Elkhound are identical in all respects except size. Males in both cases should be about 20½ inches, but the preferred height for bitches in Canada is 18 inches, according to the American standard 19¼ inches.

This breed is the all-purpose dog of Norway and has a history dating back from 4,000 to 5,000 B.C. It is said that the Norwegian Elkhound accompanied the Vikings on their voyages. The breed belongs to the group of northern dogs known as the 'Spitz' family. Norwegian Elkhounds hunt in packs and in their native land are used to hunt the elk, as the name suggests, and the European moose. Loyal and courageous, the breed was named the national dog of Norway and is featured on one of that country's coins.

A keen worker and intelligent, it is said that the Elkhound works with the sportsman first locating the elk or moose; then quietly barking to alert the hunter but not put the game to flight. The dog then encircles the large animal holding its attention until the hunter can move in closer and bring it down.

The breed was first shown in Norway at championship shows in 1879 and was soon officially recognized by both the Norwegian and Swedish Kennel Clubs. Specimens were imported into England prior to World War I but it was not until after Armistice was signed that a Norwegian Elkhound Society was organized in that country. About this time, too, the breed made its appearance in the United States where it was officially recognized in 1935. In Britain, most Commonwealth countries and in Europe the breed is known simply as the 'Elkhound'. While over here we call it the Norwegian Elkhound. Although the breed is customarily used to hunt big game, it is reported to be equally adept at retrieving upland game.

While the breed is typically a northern dog in outline, coat and character, it is said to do extremely well in warm, even tropical climates.

Faithful and easily maintained, the Norwegian Elkhound makes an excellent choice of family pet and watchdog.

Norwich Terrier

Characteristics — The Norwich Terrier is one of the smallest of the terriers. Of a lovable disposition, not quarrelsome, tremendously active and with a hardy constitution. Temperament gay and fearless.

General Appearance — A small, low, keen dog, compact and strong with good substance and bone. Honourable scars from fair wear and tear should not be penalized unduly.

Head and Skull — Muzzle wedge-shaped and strong; length about one third less than a measurement from the occiput to the bottom of the stop, which should be well defined. Skull wide, good width between the ears, and slightly rounded.

Eyes — Small and oval shaped, dark, full of expression, bright and keen.

Ears — Erect, set well apart on top of skull. Of medium size with pointed tips. Held perfectly erect when aroused. Can be laid back when not at attention.

Mouth — Tight lipped, jaws clean and strong. Teeth strong, rather large. Scissor bite.

Neck — Neck strong of good length, commensurate with correct overall balance, flowing into well laid back shoulders.

Forequarters — Legs short, powerful and straight; elbows close to body. Pasterns firm and upright. Legs should be moving straight forward when travelling.

Body — Short back, compact body with good depth. Rib cage should be long and well sprung with short loin. Level topline.

Hindquarters — Broad, strong and muscular, with well turned stifle. Low set hock with great powers of propulsion. Hind legs should follow in the track of the forelegs when moving, showing the pads and with hocks parallel.

Feet — Round, well padded and catlike. To point straight forward standing and moving.

Tail — Medium, docked. Set on high to complete a perfectly level topline. Carried erect.

Coat — Hard, wiry and straight, lying close to the body with thick undercoat. Longer and rougher on the neck forming a ruff to frame the face. Hair on head and ears short and smooth, except for slight whiskers and eyebrows.

Colour — All shades of red, wheaten, black and tan, or grizzle. White marks or patches are undesirable.

Size — Ideal height 10 inches (25.4 cm) at withers. This ideal should not be attained by excessive length of leg.

Faults — Any departure from the foregoing points should be considered a fault and the seriousness of the fault should be in exact proportion to its degree.

Note — Male animals should have two apparently normal testicles fully descended into the scrotum.

General Facts

Many of the terrier breeds are described as being 'foxy' in appearance. This does not necessarily mean that the dog looks like a fox, but rather that the expression is 'foxy' in the sense of the dictionary definition 'sly, crafty, wily'. The Norwich is different. Of all the terriers, his prick ears, tapering muzzle and reddish hair colouring the head could be described as somewhat resembling that of a fox, and his expression is mischievous and crafty.

Until recently The Canadian Kennel Club recognized both the 'prick' and 'drop-eared' type as Norwich Terriers. This has now been amended to bring Canadian classification into conformity with the British and there is a separate standard for each breed. The only difficulty is that in the U.S., the country from which come many of the Norwich Terriers that are exhibited at Canadian dog shows, only one breed standard prevails. And this allows either the prick or drop ear. In fact, the illustration for the breed in the American publication 'Dog Visualizations' is a drop-eared Norwich Terrier!

The breed was developed during the late 19th century in the vicinity of Cambridge University. It is said that a breeder made quite a good thing out of breeding small red terriers and selling them to university students. And it is these little dogs that became the foundation stock for the Norwich/Norfolk breeds.

Old English Sheepdog

Skull — Capacious and rather squarely formed, giving plenty of room for brain power. The parts over the eyes should be well arched and the whole well covered with hair.

Jaw — Fairly long, strong, square and truncated. The top should be well defined to avoid a Deerhound face. (The attention of judges is particularly called to the above properties, as a long, narrow head is a deformity.)

Eyes — Vary according to the colour of the dog. Very dark preferred, but in the glaucous or blue dogs a pearl, walleye or china eye is considered typical. (A light eye is most objectionable.)

Nose — Always black, large and capacious.

Teeth — Strong and large, evenly placed and level in opposition.

Ears — Medium-sized, and carried flat to side of head, coated moderately.

Legs — The forelegs should be dead straight, with plenty of bone, removing the body a medium height from the ground, without approaching legginess, and well coated all around.

Feet — Small, round; toes well arched, and pads thick and hard.

Tail — It is preferable that there should be none. Should never, however, exceed one and a half or two inches (3.81 or 5.08 cm) in grown dogs. When not natural-born bobtails however, puppies should be docked at the first joint from the body and the operation performed when they are from three to four days old.

Neck and Shoulders — The neck should be fairly long, arched gracefully and well coated with hair. The shoulders sloping and narrow at the points, the dog standing lower at the shoulder than at the loin.

Body — Rather short and very compact, ribs well sprung and brisket deep and capacious. Slabsidedness highly undesirable. The loin should be very stout and gently arched, while the hindquarters should be round and muscular and with well-let-down hocks, and the hams densely coated with a thick, long jacket in excess of any other part.

Coat — Profuse, but not so excessive as to give the impression of the dog being overfat, and of a good hard texture; not straight, but shaggy and free from curl. Quality and texture of coat to be considered above mere profuseness. Softness or flatness of coat to be considered a fault. The undercoat should be a waterproof pile, when not removed by grooming or season.

Colour — Any shade of grey, grizzle, blue or blue-merled with or without white markings or in reverse. Any shade of brown or fawn to be considered distinctly objectionable and not to be encouraged.

Size — 22 inches (55.88 cm) and upwards for dogs and slightly less for bitches. Type, character and symmetry are of the greatest importance and are on no account to be sacrificed to size alone.

General Appearance and Characteristics — A strong, compact looking dog of great symmetry, practically the same in measurement from shoulder to stern as in height, absolutely free from legginess or weaselness, very elastic in his gallop, but in walking or trotting he has a characteristic ambling or pacing movement, and his bark should be loud, with a peculiar 'potcasse' ring in it. Taking him all round, he is a profusely, but not excessively coated, thickset, muscular, able-bodied dog with a most intelligent expression, free from all Poodle or Deerhound character. Soundess should be considered of greatest importance.

General Facts

A herding dog thought to have originated in the west of England about 200 years ago when marauding wolves preyed on flocks of sheep. Later the breed was used extensively in England for driving sheep and cattle. The breed is of uncertain ancestry but is almost certainly related to the Bearded Collie to whom it bears a marked resemblance. The Old English Sheepdog has been nicknamed the 'bobtail' because its tail may be no longer than two inches at maturity — preferably tailless. Puppies' tails are removed at about four days of age, a custom said to date back to the 18th century when drovers' dogs were exempt from tax. In some way, not entirely made clear, taillessness identified a drover's dog. Appearance of the Old English Sheepdog has changed little since the 1880s. The Bobtails shown in England are much less stylized in trim than those shown over here. To Americans they appear unkempt. On the other hand, the British consider our Old English 'overtrimmed'. Probably the most famous Bobtail of them all is 'Dudley', Ch. (Can., Am. & Bda.) Sir Lancelot of Barvan, who won the Westminster KC show in 1977. This victory accelerated public interest in the breed.

Glenmargo's Town Strutter. A proven stud. Owner, Mrs. Vincent T. Scott, Glenmargo Reg., R.R. 3, Campbellville, Ont. L0P 1B0.

Papillon

General Appearance — A toy dog of fine boned structure. It is gentle, intelligent, dainty, and of lively action. It is not a diminutive form of a breed. There is only one classification — the toy.

Head — The head of the Papillon is well proportioned to the body. It may appear small because it is covered with short hair while the rest of the body is heavily coated. The skull should be of medium width and slightly rounded between the ears. A well defined stop is formed where the muzzle joins the skull. The muzzle is shorter than the skull and is fine, it is abruptly thinner than the head, becoming more slender down to the nose.

Nose — The nose of the Papillon is small and rounded, and is slightly flat on top. It should be black.

Eyes — The eyes of the Papillon are dark and expressive. The centre of the eyes is on a line with the stop. The shape of the eye is round. Rims should be black. Eyes must not bulge.

Mouth — Jaws well adjusted; lips are tight and thin and should be black. Bite scissors Fault: The jaw should not be overshot or undershot.

Ears — Of either the erect or drop type should be large and set on the sides of the head. Ears should be fringed.

(1) The erect type is carried obliquely and moves like the spread wings of a butterfly. At rest or when relaxed, their position forms an angle of approximately 45 degrees to the head. The concha is largely open, and the inside is entirely visible and covered with silken hair. The ears should be of fine leather and of sufficient strength to maintain the opened-up position.

(2) The drop type of ears (known on the Continent as Phalene), is similar to the erect type, but the ears are carried drooping, and must be completely down.

Major fault — Ears partly down.

Neck — Slender and is lost in the collarette.

Body — Must be slightly longer than high. The Papillon is not a cobby dog. The back is level. The chest is of medium depth and width. The ribs are arched. The loins tucked up.

Shoulders — Flexible and well-angulated, and are hidden by hair.

Forelegs — Fine, straight. The Papillon stands with front feet rather close together. The back of the forelegs is covered with abundant fringes, diminishing to the pastern; front of the forelegs covered with short hair.

Hindlegs — The thighs are fairly muscular and well angulated. The hindlegs are slender and parallel when viewed fron behind. They are covered to the hocks with abundant breeches (culottes); the hind pastern is covered with short smooth hair. The stifles are well angulated. The hocks are placed fairly high. Fault — Cow hocks.

Feet — Thin and elongated (harelike). The toes are close and arched. The hair on the feet is short, but fine tufts may appear between the toes and grow beyond them, forming a point.

Tail — Set high and carried well arched over the body. The plume on the tail usually hangs on the side of the body.

Coat — Short and smooth on the head, muzzle, front of legs, and back of legs from the hocks downward. The hair around the neck forms a collarette. The hair on the neck, shoulders, and breast is abundant in comparison with that on the rest of the body. The back of the forelegs should be well fringed, the length of the fringes shortening down to the pastern. The tail is covered with a long abundant plume.

Quality of Coat — The coat is profuse and shiny, and may be slightly wavy, but not curly. There is no undercoat. The hair on the back is flat. The coat is soft, comparatively fine, but has a resilient quality.

Size — The height at the withers should be 11 inches (27.94 cm) or under. The weight and height should be in good proportion.

Gait — Free, quick easy and graceful.

Colour and Markings — Papillons are two-coloured or tri-coloured. The usual two-colours are white and black, white and sable, or white and some shade of red, varying from light tan to deep red. The colour is usually in spots or patches thrown in relief against white, which predominates. The size, shape, and placement of the patches are without importance. The tri-coloured Papillon is black and white with tan spots. The tan spots may appear over the eyes, on the cheeks, in the ears, and under the tail. The exact placement or omission of the tan spots is of no importance. The black appears in patches on white in the same manner as in the dog of two colours. A saddle is permissible. A blaze is desirable, but not essential. Among the allowable colours and markings, there is no preference.

Fault — A coat of solid colour.

Disqualifications — Pink nose, or one with pink spots. 12 inches (30.48 cm) or over.

Pekingese

Expression — Must suggest the Chinese origin of the Pekingese in its quaintness and individuality, resemblance to the lion in directness and independence and should imply courage, boldness, self-esteem and combativeness rather than prettiness, daintiness or delicacy.
Skull — Massive, broad, wide and flat between the ears (not dome-shaped), wide between the eyes.
Nose — Black, broad, very short and flat.
Eyes — Large, dark, prominent, round, lustrous.
Stop — Deep.
Ears — Heart-shaped, not set too high, leather never long enough to come below the muzzle, nor carried erect, but rather drooping, long feather.
Muzzle — Wrinkled, very short and broad, not overshot, not pointed. Strong, broad underjaw, teeth not to show.
Shape of Body — Heavy in front, well-sprung ribs, broad chest, falling away lighter behind, lionlike. Back level. Not too long in body; allowance made for longer body in bitch.
Legs — Short forelegs, bones of forearm bowed, firm at shoulder; hind legs lighter but firm and well shaped.
Feet — Flat, toes turned out, not round, should stand well up on feet, not on ankles.
Action — Fearless, free and strong, with slight roll.
Coat, Feather and Condition — Long, with thick undercoat, straight and flat, not curly nor wavy, rather coarse, but soft; feather on thighs, legs, tail and toes long and profuse.
Mane — Profuse, extending beyond the shoulder blades, forming ruff or frill round the neck.
Colour — All colours are allowable. Red, fawn, black, black and tan, sable, brindle, white and parti-colour well defined; black masks and spectacles around the eyes with lines to ears are desirable.
Definition of a Parti-Colour Pekingese — The colouring of a parti-coloured dog must be broken on the body. No large portion of any one colour should exist. White should be shown on the saddle. A dog of any solid colour with white feet and chest is not a parti-colour.
Tail — Set high; lying well over back to either side; long, profuse, straight feather.
Size — Being a toy dog, medium size preferred providing type and points are not sacrificed; extreme limit 14 pounds (6.35 kg).
Penalizations — Protruding tongue, badly blemished eye, overshot, wry mouth.
Disqualifications — Weight over 14 pounds (6.35 kg), Dudley nose.

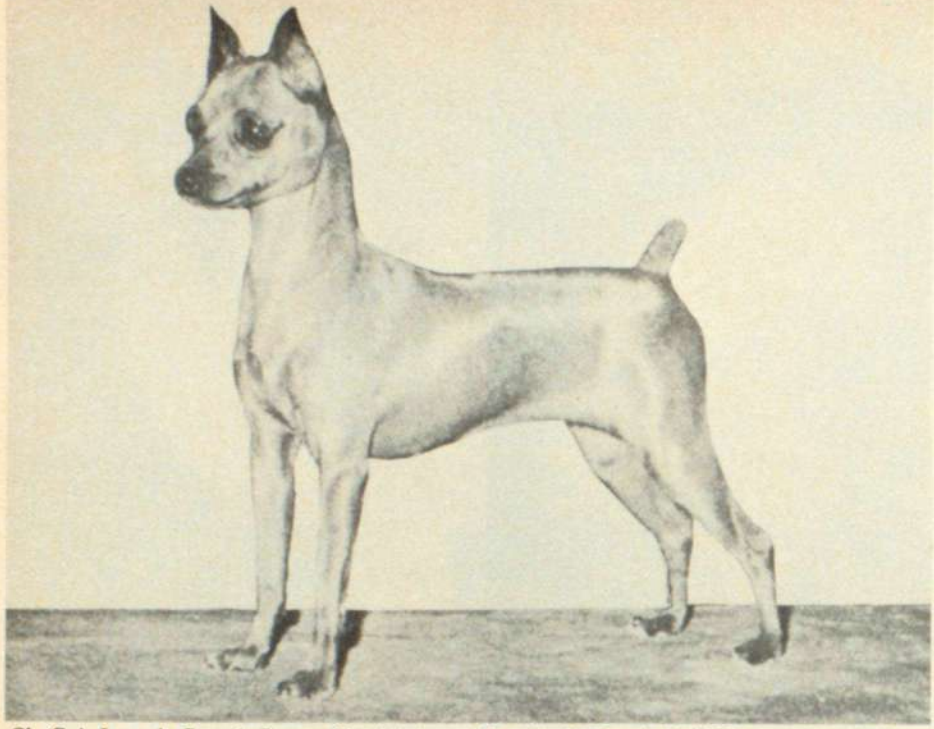
General Facts

The Pekingese is a dog of the orient whose beginnings the Chinese explain this way: Once upon a time a lion fell in love with a monkey and pleaded with Buddha to make him small like the pretty monkey so he could marry her. Buddha granted the request and from this union was born a dog with the form, the heart, the courage and dignity of the lion and the impudent face, the intelligence and sense of the monkey. Fable? Of course. But there could be no better description of the little Pekingese who has been charming occidentals for more than a century. The story is, and this is not fable, that the Pekingese were the pets of the imperial court of China. In 1860 troops raided the Summer Palace at Peking. The Chinese Court fled, taking many treasures with them but leaving behind five little dogs guarding the body of their mistress, the Emperor's aunt, who had committed suicide. The brave little dogs so impressed the invaders, who happened to be a mixed force of French and British soldiers, that their lives were spared and the five eventually found their way to England. One, named 'Looty', was presented to Queen Victoria and had his portrait painted by Landseer. Subsequently, several Pekingese were brought into England and America to provide the foundation breeding stock of the western world's Pekingese kennels.

The breed standard for the Pekingese in use in Canada is identical to that approved by the American Kennel Club.



Ch. Gais-Luron's Georgia Brown. Top Miniature Pinscher in Canada in 1971, second in 1972. Three times Best Puppy in Show plus multiple breed and group wins. Owner, Philippe Pratte, Gais-Luron's Reg., 2475 Nicolas Perrot, Becancour, Que. G0X 1B0.

Pinscher (Miniature)

General Appearance — Well balanced, sturdy, compact, short-coupled, smooth-coated, naturally well groomed, proud, vigorous, alert. The characteristic trait which identifies him from other toy dogs is his precise Hackney gait. Faults — structurally lacking balance, too long — or shortcoupled, too coarse or too refined, too large or too small, lethargic, timid or dull, shy or vicious, low tail placement, poor action; knotty overdeveloped muscles.

Head — In proportion with body. From top — tapering, narrow with well-fitted but not too prominent foreface which should balance skull. No indication of coarseness. From front — skull appears flat, tapering forward towards muzzle. Muzzle strong, not fine and delicate; in proportion to head; cheeks and lips small, taut, closely adherent to each other. Teeth in perfect alignment and opposition. From side — well balanced with only a slight drop to muzzle; planes parallel.

Eyes — Full, slightly oval, almost round, clear, bright, dark, set wide, fitted well into sockets.

Ears — Well set, firmly placed, upstanding (when cropped, pointed and carried erect in balance with head).

Nose — Black only, with exception of chocolates which may be self-coloured.

Faults — Too large or too small for body; too coarse or too refined, pinched and weak in foreface, domed in skull, too flat and lacking in chiseling. Jaws and teeth over — or under-shot. Eyes too round and full, too large, bulging, too deep set, or set too far apart; or too small, set too close. Light-coloured eyes not desirable. Ears poorly placed, low-set hanging ears which detract from head conformation (poorly cropped ears if set on head properly and having sufficient cartilage should not detract from head points). Except for chocolates, nose any colour other than black.

Neck — Proportioned to head and body. Slightly arched, gracefully curved, clean and firm blending into shoulders, length well balanced, muscular, free from dewlap or throatiness. Faults — straight, too curved; too thick, thin, long or short; knotty muscles; loose, flabby or wrinkled skin.

Body — From top — compact, slightly wedge-shaped, muscular with well sprung ribs. From side — brisket level with points of elbows; short and strong in loin with belly moderately tucked up. Back level or slightly sloping towards rear. Length of males equal height at withers. Females may be slightly longer. From rear — high tail set; strong, sturdy upper shanks, croup slope about 30 degrees; vent opening not barreled.

Forequarters — Forechest well-developed, full, moderately broad, shoulders clean, sloping with moderate angulation, coordinated to permit true Hackney action.

Hindquarters — Well knit, muscular, set wide enough to fit into balanced body. Faults — too long, short, barreled, lacking development; from side too long, short, thin or fat, hips higher or considerably lower than withers, lacking depth of chest, too full in loin, sway back, roach or wry back. From rear quarters too wide or too close, overdeveloped, barreled vent, underdeveloped vent, steep croup, low tail set. Forequarters — forechest and rib spring too narrow, straight shoulders, too loose, short and overloaded with muscles. Hindquarters — too narrow, undermuscled or overmuscled, steep croup.

Legs and Feet — Bone strong, joints small, clean; cat feet, toes strong, well arched, closely knit pads deep, thick; nails blunt. From front forelegs straight, upstanding, elbows close to body, well knit, flexible, strong perpendicular pasterns. Hind legs well angulated, thighs well muscled, stifles clearly defined, hocks short, set well apart turning neither in nor out, at rest should stand perpendicular to ground, upper shanks, lower shanks and hocks parallel to each other. Faults — bone too thick or thin; joints large, feet flat. Forelegs — bowed, crooked, weak pasterns, in or out-turning feet, loose elbows; hind legs — undeveloped stifles, large or crooked hocks, loose stifle joints.

Tail — Set high, erect, docked to one half to one inch. Faults — low set, too thin, drooping, hanging or poorly docked.

Coat — Smooth, hard, short, straight, lustrous, tight.

Colour — (1) Solid red. (2) Black with tan markings on cheeks, lips, lower jaw, throat, over eyes, chest, lower half of forelegs, inside hind legs and vent region, lower portion of hocks and feet. Black pencil stripes on toes. (3) Solid chocolate or brown with rust or yellow markings. Faults — any colour other than listed; very dark or sooty spots.

Disqualification — Thumb marks or any area of white on feet or forechest exceeding one-half inch in its longest dimension.

Size — Desired height 11 to 11½ inches at withers. A dog of either sex measuring under 10 or over 12½ inches shall be disqualified.

Pointer

General Appearance — Bred for sport afield he should look and act the part. The ideal specimen gives the impression of compact power and agile grace; head noble, proudly carried; expression intelligent, alert; muscular body bespeaks staying power and dash. Every movement shows him to be a wide awake, hard-driving hunting dog possessing stamina, courage and the desire to go. In his expression are the loyalty and devotion of a true friend of man.

Temperament — Even, alert good sense, a congenial companion in the field and in the home. Dignified yet responsive.

Head — Skull long, proportionately wide but indicates length rather than width. Slight furrow between eyes; cheeks cleanly chiseled. Stop pronounced. Muzzle long, in same plane as skull. Jaws end level, square; bite scissors or even. Flews clean, nostrils large, spongy, widely open.

Ears — Set on at eye level; hanging naturally they reach below lower jaw, close to head, with little or no folding; somewhat pointed at tip, soft and thin in leather.

Eyes — Medium, rounded, pleasant, dark.

Neck — Long, dry, muscular, slightly arched, springing cleanly from shoulders.

Shoulders — Long, thin, sloping; top of blades close together.

Front — Elbows well down, directly under withers, truly parallel, work just clear of body; forelegs straight, bone oval. Knee joint never to knuckle over. Pasterns moderate length, finer in bone than leg, slightly slanting. Chest deep rather than wide, must not hinder action of forelegs. Breastbone bold not unduly prominent; ribs well sprung, descending as low as elbow point.

Back — Strong, solid, slight rise from croup to top of shoulders. Loin of moderate length, powerful, slightly arched. Croup falling only slightly to base of tail. Tuck-up apparent, not exaggerated.

Tail — Heavier at root, tapers to fine point. Length no greater than to reach hock joint. Carried straight, ideally on level with back.

Hindquarters — Muscular, powerful, great propelling leverage. Thighs long, well developed; stifles wide, well bent; hocks clean, parallel.

Feet — Oval, toes long, closely set, arched, well padded and deep.

Coat — Short, dense, smooth with a sheen.

Colour — Liver, lemon, black, orange; in combination with white or solid. In darker colours nose black or brown; in lighter shades, lighter or flesh coloured.

Gait — Smooth, frictionless with powerful drive. Head carried high, nostrils wide, tail moving side to side rhythmically with pace, giving the impression of a well balanced, strongly built hunting dog capable of top speed combined with great stamina.

Balance and Size — Over all symmetry much more important in Pointer than size. It indicates muscular co-ordination, endurance and balanced power. Large or small, a well put together Pointer preferred to an uneven one with contrasting good and bad points. Provided there is balance, considerable variation in size and weight is permissible.

Faults — Lack of true Pointer type. Hound or terrier characteristics. Timidity, unruliness. Blocky or apple head. Short or snipey muzzle or frog face. Bulging cheeks or pendulous flews. Lack of stop, down-face, Roman nose, undershot or overshot. Small or dry nostrils. Ears low set, round, heavy, folded, leathery or hound ears. Eyes light, hard, almond or staring. Ewe neck, throatiness, short, thick neck. Loaded or bossy shoulders; set wide apart at top; straight shoulders, no slope. Elbows turned either in or out; forelegs knuckled over. Straight pasterns, terrier front. Bone of forelegs coarse, fine or round. Narrow chested, shallow, shelly, pigeon breasted. Chest too wide, resulting in elbows out. Ribs too flat or barrelled. Roach or sway back. Unbalanced length of body. Cobbiness. Steep rise, or none at all in topline; sagging, long or thin loin; croup falling away too sharply. Rat tail, set on too high or too low; carried between legs or high, flagpole tail. Straight or narrow stifles; cow hocks; lack of angulation or straight in stifle; any suggestion of weakness in hindquarters; cat foot, thin or soft pads, splayed feet, flat toes. Long hair or curl; soft or silky coat. Weak or washed-out colours. Light or flesh-coloured noses in a dark-coloured dog. Butterfly nose. Crossing over, sprawling or side tracking. Stepping too high in front — the hackney gait.

General Facts

Speediest and most efficient of the pointing breeds, the Pointer originated on the continent but reached its highest development in Britain. The breed excels in field trials and is the favoured choice of sportsmen.

Pointer (German Short-haired)

General Appearance — Aristocratic, well balanced, symmetrical, conformation indicates power, endurance and agility and a look of intelligence and animation. Dog not unduly small nor conspicuously large. Medium size, back short but standing over plenty of ground. First impression one of keenness which denotes full enthusiasm for work. Movement alertly coordinated. Grace of outline, clean cut head, sloping shoulders, deep breast, powerful back, strong quarters, good bone, adequate muscle, well carried tail and taut coat.

Head — Clean cut, in proportion to body; skull reasonably broad, arched on side and slightly round on top. Median line not too deep, occiput not too conspicuous. Foreface rises gradually nose to forehead; chops fall away from somewhat projecting nose; lips full and deep; chops should not fall over too much, form proper fold in angle. Jaw powerful, muscles well developed. Line to forehead rises gradually, stop not definite. Muzzle long enough to let dog seize properly and carry game a long time. Head gives impression of tapering to a point. Depth in proportion to length in muzzle and skull.

Ears — Broad, set fairly high, lie flat, never hang away from head. Placement should be above eye level. When laid in front without being pulled should about meet lip angle. In heavier dogs they should be correspondingly longer.

Eyes — Medium size, full of intelligence and expressive, good humoured and radiating energy, neither protruding nor sunk. Eyelids should close well. Best colour a dark shade of brown. Light yellow, china or wall eyes not desirable.

Nose — Brown, the larger the better; nostrils well open and broad. Flesh or spotted noses are undesirable.

Teeth — Strong, healthy; molars should intermesh properly; incisors fit in true scissors bite; jaws not over or undershot.

Neck — Long enough to permit jaws to reach game to be retrieved, sloping downwards on curving lines. Nape muscular, becomes larger towards shoulders. Moderate houndlike throatiness permitted.

Breast and Thorax — Breast deep rather than broad; in correct proportion to other parts of body. Ribs well curved, not flat; not round or barrel shaped. Back ribs should reach well down. Circumference of breast immediately behind elbows smaller than that of breast about a hand's breadth behind elbows, so that upper arm has room for movement.

Back and Loins — Back short, strong and straight with slight rise from root of tail to withers. Excessively long or hog-backed should be penalized. Loins strong, of moderate length, slightly arched. Tuck up apparent.

Assembly of Back Members — Hips broad with hip sockets wide apart, fall slightly toward tail in graceful curve. Thighs strong, well muscled. Stifles well bent. Hock joints well angulated with strong, straight bone structure from hock to pad. Angulation of both stifle and hock joints such as to combine maximum drive and traction. Hocks should turn neither in nor out.

Assembly of Front Members — Shoulders sloping, movable, well covered with muscle. Blades lie flat. Upper arm as long as possible, standing away somewhat from the trunk so that the straight and closely muscled legs, when viewed from front should appear to be parallel. Elbows which stand away from the body or are pressed right into body indicate toes turning inwards or outwards which should be regarded as faults. Pasterns strong, short, nearly vertical.

Feet — Compact, close-knit, round to spoon shaped. Toes sufficiently arched and heavily nailed. Pad strong and hard.

Coat and Skin — Skin should look close and tight. Hair short, thick and feel tough and hard to the hand; somewhat longer on underside of tail and back edge of haunches. Softer, thinner, shorter on ears and head.

Tail — Set high, firm, docked to two-fifths of length. Tail hangs down when dog quiet, is held horizontal when walking, never turned over back or considerably bent but violently wagged when he is on the search.

Bones — In proportion to body; both fine and coarse bone being faulty.

Weight and Height — Dogs 55 to 70 pounds (24.947 to 31.751 kg); bitches 45 to 60 pounds (20.412 to 27.215 kg). Dogs 23 to 25 inches (58.42 to 63.5 cm); bitches 21 to 23 inches (53.34 to 58.42 cm) at the shoulders.

Colour — Solid liver, liver and white spotted, liver and white spotted and ticked, liver and white ticked, liver roan. Any colours other than liver and white (grey white) not permitted. Symmetry and field quality are most essential. A dog well balanced in all points is preferable to one with outstanding good qualities and defects. A smooth, lithe gait is most desirable.

Ch. (Can., Am. & Bda.) Haunalea's Hamish of Darcy. Hamish, our first champion, has retired this year at six, after a great show career with multi-group placements and a Canadian Best in Show before the age of two. Owner, Nancy McPhee, Darcy Reg., 170 Ross St., St. Thomas, Ont. N5R 3Y1.

Pomeranian

Appearance — Compact, short coupled, well knit. Intelligent expression, docile disposition, active and buoyant, sound in action.

Head — Wedge shaped, foxy in outline, skull slightly flat, large in proportion to muzzle. Stop not too pronounced, hair on head and face smooth. Muzzle finishes fine; bite scissors. One tooth out of line does not mean an undershot or overshot mouth.

Eyes — Medium size, rather oblique in shape, not set too wide apart or too close; bright, dark in colour. Eyerims of blues and browns self-coloured. In all other colours must be black.

Ears — Small, not set too far apart or too low down, carried perfectly erect, covered with soft, short hair. Trimming unruly hairs on edges of ears permissible.

Nose — Self coloured in blues and browns; in all other colours should be black.

Neck and Shoulders — Neck rather short, well set, lion-like, covered with a profuse mane and frill of long, straight hair sweeping from underjaw and covering whole of front part of shoulders and chest as well as top part of shoulders. Shoulders clean and laid well back.

Body — Back short, level; body compact, well ribbed up and rounded. Chest fairly deep.

Legs — Forelegs well feathered, perfectly straight of medium length and strength in proportion to a well balanced frame. Feet small, compact, standing well up on toes. Hind legs and thighs well feathered to hocks, must be fine in bone and free in action. Trimming around edges of toes and up back of legs to first joint permissible.

Tail — Turned over the back, carried flat, set high. Profusely covered with long, spreading hair.

Coat — Double; undercoat soft and fluffy; outer is long, perfectly straight, glistening, covers whole body, very abundant around neck and forepart of shoulders and chest where it should form a frill of profuse, standing-off, straight hair extending over shoulders. Hindquarters clad with long hair from top of rump to hocks. Texture of guard hairs must be harsh to the touch.

Colour — Twelve colours or combination of colours permissible — black, brown, chocolate, beaver, red, orange, cream, orange-sable, wolf-sable, blue, white and parti-colour. The beaver colour is a dark beige. A parti-colour is white with orange or black colour distributed in even patches on the body, with white blaze on head desirable. Where whole coloured and parti-coloured Pomeranians compete together, the preference should, other points being equal, be given to the whole coloured specimen.

Sable coloured dogs must be shaded throughout as uniformly as possible, with no self-coloured patches. In orange-sable, the undercoat must be a light tan colour with deeper orange guard hairs ending in black tippings. In wolf-sable, the undercoat is light grey with a deeper shade of steel grey guard hairs ending in black tippings. A shaded muzzle on the sables is permissible, but a black mask on sables is a minor fault. Orange Pomeranians must be self-coloured throughout with light shadings of the same tone (not white) on breechings permitted. A black mask on an orange Pomeranian is a major fault. White chest, white foot, or white leg on whole coloured dogs are major faults. White hairs on black, brown, blue, or sable Pomeranians are objectionable. Tinges of lemon, or any other colour on white dogs are objectionable. The above colours as described are the only allowable colours or combination of colours for Pomeranians.

Size — Three to seven pounds (1.361 kg to 3.18 kg). The ideal size for show specimens is from four to five pounds.

Classification — Classes may be divided by colour in Open Classes as follows: Black and brown; red, orange or cream; sables. Any other allowable colour.

Faults — Major — Round, domey skull. Too large ears. Undershot. Pink eye rims. Light or Dudley nose. Out at elbows or shoulders. Flat sided dogs. Down in pasterns. Cowhock. Soft, flat, open coat. Whole-coloured dogs with white chest or white foot or leg. Black mask on an orange. Objectionable — Overshot. Large, round or light eyes. High or low on legs. Long toes. Too wide in hind legs. Trimming too close to show date. Tail set too low on rump. Black, brown, blue and sable should be free from white hairs. Whites should be free from lemon or any other colour. Black and tan. Under-weight or over-weight. Minor — Must be free from lippiness, wide chest. Tail should not curl back. Black mask on sable. White shadings on orange.

General Facts

The breed standard for the Pomeranian in use in the United States, American Kennel Club approved 1971, is quite different from the Canadian. It should be noted that in the U.S. 'black and tan' is an acceptable breed colour and 'all colours to be judged on an equal basis' is specified. Gait is also covered.

Poodle (Toy)

General Appearance, Carriage and Condition — That of a very active, intelligent, smart and elegant-looking dog, squarely built, well proportioned and carrying himself proudly. Properly clipped in the traditional fashion and carefully groomed, the Poodle has about him an air of distinction and dignity peculiar to himself.

Head and Expression — Skull — slightly full and moderately peaked with a slight stop. Cheekbones and muscles flat. Eyes set far enough apart to indicate ample brain capacity. Muzzle — long, straight and fine, but strong without lippiness. The chin definite enough to preclude snipiness. Teeth white, strong and level. Nose sharp with well defined nostrils. Eyes — oval shape, very dark, full of fire and intelligence. Ears — set low and hanging close to the head. The leather long, wide and heavily feathered — when drawn forward almost reaches the nose.

Neck — Well proportioned, strong and long enough to admit of the head being carried high and with dignity. Skin snug at throat.

Shoulders — Strong, muscular, angulated at the point of the shoulder and the elbow joint sloping well back.

Body — Chest deep and moderately wide. Ribs well sprung and braced up. The back short, strong and very slightly hollowed, with the loins broad and muscular. Bitches may be slightly longer in back than dogs.

Tail — Set on rather high, docked and carried gaily. Never curled or carried over the back.

Legs — Forelegs straight from shoulders with plenty of bone and muscle. Hind legs very muscular, stifles well bent, and hocks well let down. Hindquarters well developed with the second thigh showing both width and muscle.

Feet — Rather small and of good oval shape. Toes well arched and close, pads thick and hard.

Coat

(a) Quality — Curly Poodles. Very profuse, of harsh texture, even length, frizzy or curly, not at all open.

Corded Poodles — Very thick, hanging in tight, even cords.

(b) Clip — Clipping either in the traditional 'Continental' or 'English Saddle' style is correct. In the Continental clip the hindquarters are shaved, with pompons on hips (optional), and in the English Saddle clip, the hindquarters are covered with a short blanket of hair. In both these clips the rest of the body must be left in full coat. The face, feet, legs and tail must be shaved, leaving bracelets on all four legs, and a pompon at the end of the tail. The topknot and feather on the ears must be long and profuse, so as not to lose the very essential Poodle expression. A dog under a year old may be shown with the coat long except the face, feet and base of tail which should be shaved. Any Poodle clipped in any style other than the above mentioned shall be disqualified from the show ring.

Colour — Any solid colour. All but the browns have black noses, lips and eyelids. The browns and apricots may have liver noses and dark amber eyes. In all colours, toenails either black or the same colour as the dog. Grey Poodles, whose coats have not cleared to an even, solid colour, may be shown up to the age of 18 months. The degree of clearing shall only count in judging two or more grey Poodles under the age of 18 months when all other points are equal, in which case the more completely cleared dog shall be judged superior.

Gait — A straightforward trot with light springy action. Head and tail carried high.

Major Faults — Bad mouth — either under- or overshot. Cowhocks. Flat or spread feet, thin pads. Very light eyes. Excessive shyness.

Disqualifications — Parti-colours. Unorthodox clips. Any Toy Poodle which is more than ten inches (25.4 cm) at the withers shall be disqualified from competition.

Note: So long as the dog is definitely a Toy, diminutiveness is only the deciding factor when all other points are equal; soundness and activity are every whit as necessary in a Toy as they are in a Standard Poodle, and as these traits can only be seen when the dog is in action, it is imperative that Toys be moved in the ring as fully and decidedly as Standard Poodles.

General Facts

The Canadian and American breed standards for Poodles are identical. In Britain there is no disqualification for height and Toy Poodles should be 'under 11 inches', a full inch taller than on this continent being permissible.

Am. Ch. Stonewoods Dark Mirage. Dusty finished his American championship with two and three-point majors including several Bests of Breed from the classes. He will be shown in Canada this season. Owner, Ann Fulton, Chinookwinds Reg., Box 226, Guy, Alta. T0H 1Y0.

Pug

Symmetry — Symmetry and general appearance, decidedly square and cobby. A lean, leggy Pug and a dog with short legs and a long body are equally objectionable.

Size and Condition — The Pug should be multum in parvo, but this condensation (if the word may be used) should be shown by compactness of form, well-knit proportions, and hardness of developed muscle. Weight from 14 to 18 pounds (6.35 to 8.17 kg), dog or bitch desirable.

Body — Short and cobby, wide in chest and well ribbed up.

Legs — Very strong, straight, of moderate length and well under.

Feet — Neither so long as the foot of the hare, nor so round as that of the cat; well split up toes, and the nails black.

Muzzle — Short, blunt, square, but not up-faced.

Head — Large, massive, round — not appleheaded, with no indentation of the skull.

Eyes — Dark in colour, very large, bold and prominent, globular in shape, soft and solicitous in expression, very lustrous, and when excited, full of fire.

Ears — Thin, small, soft, like black velvet. There are two kinds, the 'rose' and the 'button'. Preference is given to the latter.

Markings — Clearly defined. The muzzle or mask, ears, moles on cheeks, thumb mark or diamond on forehead, back-trace should be as black as possible.

Mask — The mask should be black. The more intense and well defined it is the better.

Wrinkles — Large and deep.

Trace — A black line extending from the occiput to the tail.

Tail — Curled as tightly as possible over the hip. The double curl is perfection.

Coat — Fine, smooth, soft, short and glossy, neither hard nor woolly.

Colour — Silver or apricot-fawn. Each should be decided, to make the contrast complete between the colour and the trace and the mask. Black.

General Facts

Both the Canadian and American breed standards for the Pug are identical.

The Pug is one of the oldest known of the toy breeds. Several countries have been credited as its native land, among them China, the Netherlands and Russia. Because the breed was known in China from a very early date, dog historians favour China as the country of origin. There are two schools of thought as to the origin of the breed's name. One holds that the name derives from 'pugnus', the Latin word for 'closed fist'. The other that 'pug' is an old English term of endearment. It is known that this little breed was greatly favoured by the Royal House of Orange and even today the colour of the Pug Dog Club in Britain is orange. The breed was introduced to Britain from Holland by William and Mary in 1688 and because of its royal patronage, the Pug has been featured in a variety of carvings, porcelain figures and paintings. Many of the 'cottage pottery' Staffordshire dogs so keenly sought by collectors today, were modelled on the Pug or small Pug-type dogs. The black Pug is thought to have been brought to Britain in the late 19th century by a visitor returning from China.

Prior to World War I, it is said that the breed was at the peak of its popularity. Show entries of great number and outstanding quality were the rule, blacks being particularly fine. Unfortunately, post-war years saw many of the top-producing kennels close and a decline in public favour for the breed. Once again royal patronage brought attention to the Pug when the Duke and Duchess of Windsor acquired several that seemed to share the spotlight whenever the royal couple was photographed.

The breed has much to commend it as a family pet and companion. It is clean, easily cared for and very affectionate. The massive head, which breeders prize and liken to the Mastiff, gives the Pug a comical air of great importance in a small package.

Retriever (Chesapeake Bay)

Head — Skull broad and round with medium stop, nose medium short, muzzle pointed but not sharp. Lips thin, not pendulous. Ears small, set well up on head, hanging loosely and of medium leather.

Eyes medium large, very clear, of yellowish colour and wide apart.

Neck — Of medium length with a strong muscular appearance, tapering to shoulders.

Shoulders, Chest and Body — Shoulders sloping and should have full liberty of action with plenty of power without any restrictions of movement. Chest strong, deep and wide. Barrel round and deep. Body of medium length, neither cobby nor roached, but rather approaching hollowness, flanks well tucked up.

Back Quarters and Stifles — Back quarters should be as high or a trifle higher than the shoulders. They should show fully as much power as the fore-quarters. There should be no tendency to weakness in either fore or hindquarters. Hindquarters should be especially powerful to supply the driving power for swimming. Back should be short, well coupled and powerful. Good hindquarters are essential.

Legs, Elbows, Hocks and Feet — Legs should be medium length and straight, showing good bone and muscle, with well webbed hare feet of good size. The toes well rounded and close, pasterns slightly bent and both pasterns and hocks medium length — the straighter the legs the better.

Stern — Tail should be medium length — varying from: males 12 to 15 inches (30.48 to 38.1 cm) and females 11 to 14 inches (27.94 to 35.56 cm), medium heavy at base, moderate feathering on stern and tail permissible.

Coat and Texture — Coat should be thick and short, nowhere over one and a half inches (3.81 cm) long, with a dense, fine, woolly undercoat. Hair on face and legs should be very short and straight with tendency to wave on the shoulders, neck, back and loins only. The curly coat or coat with a tendency to curl not permissible.

Colour — Any colour varying from a dark brown to a faded tan or dead-grass. Dead-grass takes in any shade of dead-grass, varying from a tan to a dull straw colour. White spot on breast and toes permissible, but the smaller the spot the better, solid colour being preferred.

Weight — Males 65 to 75 pounds (29.483 to 34.019 kg); females 55 to 65 pounds (24.947 to 29.483 kg).

Height — Males 23 to 26 inches (58.42 to 66.04 cm); females 21 to 24 inches (53.34 to 60.96 cm).

Symmetry and Quality — The Chesapeake dog should show a bright and happy disposition and an intelligent expression, with general outlines impressive and denoting a good worker. The dog should be well proportioned, a dog with a good coat and well balanced in other points being preferable to the dog excelling in some but weak in others.

The texture of the dog's coat is very important, as the dog is used for hunting under all sorts of adverse weather conditions, often working in ice and snow. The oil in the harsh outer coat and woolly undercoat is of extreme value in preventing the cold water from reaching the dog's skin and aids in quick drying. A Chesapeake's coat should resist the water in the same way that a duck's feathers do. When he leaves the water and shakes himself, his coat should not hold the water at all, being merely moist.

Colour and coat are extremely important, as the dog is used for duck hunting. The colour must be as nearly that of his surroundings as possible and with the fact that dogs are exposed to all kinds of adverse weather conditions, often working in ice and snow, the colour of coat and its texture must be given every consideration, when judging on the bench or in the ring.

Courage, willingness to work, alertness, nose, intelligence, love of water, general quality and most of all, disposition should be given primary consideration in the selection and breeding of the Chesapeake Bay dog.

Retriever (Flat-coated)

General Appearance — A bright, active dog of medium size weighing from 60 to 70 pounds (27.21 to 31.751 kg), with an intelligent expression, showing power without lumber and raciness without weediness.

Head — This should be long and nicely molded. The skull flat and moderately broad. There should be a depression or stop between the eyes, slight and in no way accentuated, so as to avoid giving either a down or a dish-faced appearance. The nose of good size with open nostrils. The eyes, of medium size, should be dark brown or hazel, with a very intelligent expression (a round, prominent eye is a disfigurement), and they should not be obliquely placed. The jaws should be long and strong, with a capacity of carrying a hare or pheasant. The ears small and well set on close to the side of the head.

Neck, Shoulders and Chest — The head should be well set in the neck, which latter should be long and free from throatiness, symmetrically set and obliquely placed in shoulders running well into the back to allow of easily seeking for the trail. The chest should be deep and fairly broad, with a well-defined brisket, on which the elbows should work cleanly and evenly. The fore ribs should be fairly flat showing a gradual spring and well arched in the centre of the body but rather lighter towards the quarters. Open couplings are to be ruthlessly condemned.

Back and Quarters — The back should be short, square and well ribbed up, with muscular quarters. The stern short, straight and well set on, carried gaily but never much above the level of the back.

Legs and Feet — These are of the greatest importance. The forelegs should be perfectly straight, with bone of good quality carried right down to the feet which should be round and strong. The stifle should not be too straight or too bent and the dog must neither be cow-hocked nor move too wide behind, in fact he must stand and move true all round on legs and feet, with toes close and well arched, the soles being thick and strong, and when the dog is in full coat the limbs should be well feathered.

Coat — Should be dense, of fine quality and texture, flat as possible.

Colour — Black or liver.

General Facts

One of the earliest retrieving breeds to be developed was the Flat-coated Retriever, or the Wavy-coated Retriever, as he was originally known. When the first specimen was exhibited at a dog show in Birmingham, England, in 1860, it attracted a great deal of interest. The breed's background is not entirely documented but breeds contributing their bloods are generally thought to be the Lesser Newfoundland Dog with Pointer and/or Setter crosses to give the breed its dash and ability with birds. It is reported that, long after the Flat-coat had been well established, some breeders thought the dog's jaw too short to carry a hare properly. To rectify this, Borzoi blood was introduced. It did improve the length of head but type and style were sacrificed. It is said that many years of careful breeding were necessary to correct this rather grave error.

Up to the start of World War I the Flat-coat was the most popular retrieving breed in Britain. But the dog was not to hold the Number One spot indefinitely. Interest in both the Golden and the Labrador was growing and soon overtook the Flat-coat in popularity and numbers registered. For a time there was an upswing in interest and one Crufts' dog show in London, England, saw 200 benched at this show. But after this, once again, interest waned.

For some reason, too, the Flat-coat has been the least popular of the retrievers on this continent. But entries are now seen at many of the shows, thanks to the persistence of an active specialty breed club.

As a family pet the Flat-coat makes an intelligent, trustworthy companion. Of medium size and clean in habit, he needs little in the way of grooming except regular brushing to keep his coat in condition. He is well suited to life in town or country and takes well to training.

Ch. Nanno Chrys-haefen Son of Skye. The top winning Golden Retriever in the history of the breed in Canada. Seven Bests in Show, two specialty Bests in Show, 56 Group 1sts, 85 other group placements, 184 Bests of Breed. Owners, Mr. and Mrs. I. McAuley, Chrys-haefen Reg., R.R. 4, Cookstown, Ont. L0L 1L0.

Retriever (Golden)

A symmetrical, powerful, active dog, sound and well put together, not clumsy or long in the leg, displaying a kindly expression and possessing a personality that is eager, alert and self-confident. Primarily a hunting dog, he should be shown in hard working condition. Overall appearance, balance, gait and purpose to be given more emphasis than any of his component parts.

Size — Males 23 to 24 inches (58.42 to 60.96 cm) in height at the withers; females 21½ to 22½ inches (54.61 to 57.15 cm). Length from breastbone to buttocks greater than height at withers in ratio of 12-11. Weight for dogs 65 to 75 pounds (29.483 to 34.019 kg); bitches 60 to 70 pounds (27.215 to 31.751 kg).

Head — Broad in skull, slightly arched laterally and longitudinally without prominence of frontal or occipital bones. Good stop. Foreface deep and wide, nearly as long as skull. Muzzle, when viewed in profile, slightly deeper at stop than at tip; when viewed from above, slightly wider at stop than at tip. No heaviness in flews. Removal of whiskers for show purposes optional.

Eyes — Friendly and intelligent, medium large with dark rims, set well apart and reasonably deep in sockets. Colour preferably dark brown, never lighter than colour of coat. No white or haw visible when looking straight ahead.

Teeth — Scissors bite with lower incisors touching inside of upper incisors.

Nose — Black or dark brown, though lighter shade in cold weather not serious. Dudley nose (pink without pigmentation) to be faulted.

Ears — Rather short, hanging flat against head with rounded tips slightly below jaw. Forward edge attached well behind and just above eye with rear edge slightly below eye. Low, houndlike ear-set to be faulted.

Neck — Medium long, sloping well back into shoulders, giving sturdy muscular appearance with untrimmed natural ruff. No throatiness.

Body — Well balanced, short coupled, deep through the heart. Chest at least as wide as a man's hand, including thumb. Brisket extends to elbows. Ribs long and well sprung but not barrel shaped, extending well to rear of body. Loin short, muscular, wide and deep, with very little tuck-up. Top line level from withers to croup, whether standing or moving. Croup slopes gently. Slabsidedness, narrow chest, lack of depth in brisket, excessive tuck-up, roach or sway back to be faulted.

Forequarters — Forequarters well coordinated with hindquarters and capable of free movement. Shoulder blades wide, long and muscular, showing angulation with upper arm of approximately 90 degrees. Legs straight with good bone. Pastern short and strong, sloping slightly forward with no suggestion of weakness.

Hindquarters — Well bent stifles (angulation between femur and pelvis approximately 90 degrees) with hocks well let down. Legs straight when viewed from rear. Cow hocks and sickle hocks to be faulted.

Tail — Well set on, neither too high nor too low, following natural line of croup. Length extends to hock. Carried with merry action with some upward curve but never curled over back nor between legs.

Coat and Colour — Dense and water repellent with good undercoat. Texture not as hard as that of a short-haired dog nor silky as that of a setter. Lies flat against body and may be straight or wavy. Moderate feathering on back of forelegs and heavier feathering on front of neck, back of thighs and underside of tail. Feathering may be lighter than rest of coat. Colour lustrous golden of various shades. A few white hairs on chest permissible but not desirable. Further white markings to be faulted.

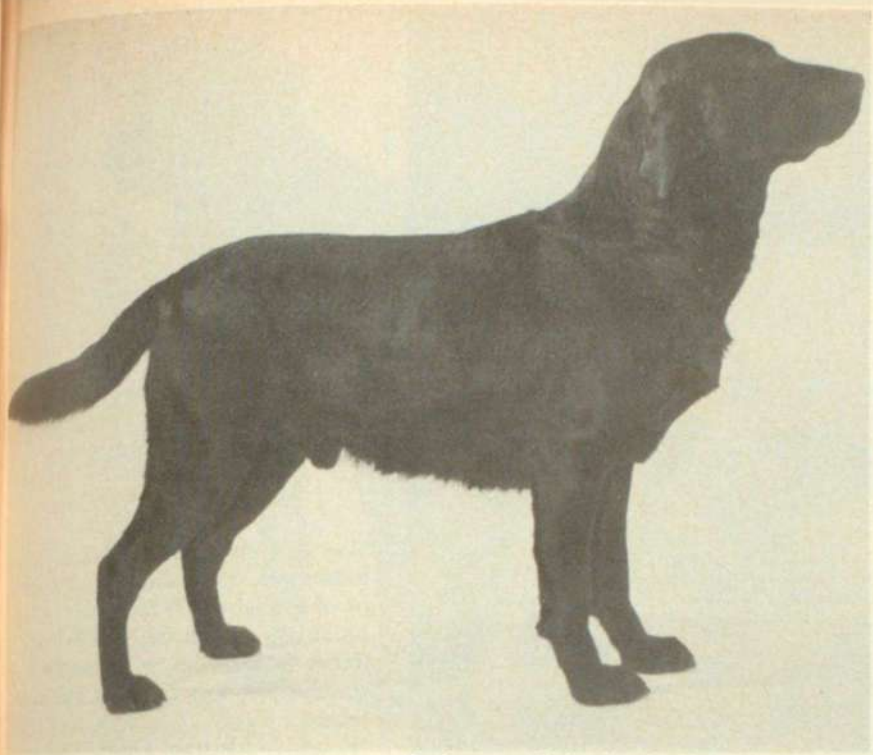
Gait — When trotting, gait is free, smooth, powerful and well coordinated. Viewed from front or rear, legs turn neither in nor out, nor do feet cross or interfere with each other. Increased speed causes tendency of feet to converge toward centre line of gravity.

Disqualifications

1. Deviation in height of more than one inch from standard either way.
2. Undershot or overshot jaws. This condition not to be confused with misalignment of teeth.
3. Trichiasis (abnormal position or direction of the eyelashes).

General Facts

Developed in England in the latter half of the 19th century, this beautiful breed is thought to be a cross between the Flat-coated Retriever and the Tweed Spaniel. Easily trained and very companionable, the Golden Retriever is a popular gundog and now being trained extensively as guide dogs for the blind. The Golden is particularly good with children.



Ch. Ro-Shan's Kapro Canajun. Canajun is a true dual purpose Labrador, comfortable and capable in both field and show, as is emphasized by his awards in both categories. Owners, Tom and Phyllis Philip, Ro-Shan Reg., R.R. 4, Crysler, Ont. K0A 1R0.

Retriever (Labrador)

General Appearance — A strongly built, short-coupled, very active dog. He should be fairly wide over the loins, and strong and muscular in the hindquarters. The coat should be close, short, dense and free from feather.

Head — The skull should be wide, giving brain room; there should be a slight stop, i.e. the brow should be slightly pronounced, so that the skull is not absolutely in a straight line with the nose. The head should be clean-cut, free from snipiness; the nose should be wide and the nostrils well developed. Teeth should be strong and regular, with a level mouth. The ears should hang moderately close to the head, rather far back, should be set somewhat low and not be large and heavy. The eyes should be of a medium size, expressing great intelligence and good temper, and can be brown, yellow or black, but brown or black is preferred.

Neck and Chest — The neck should be medium length, powerful and not throaty. The shoulders should be long and sloping. The chest must be of good width and depth, the ribs well sprung and the loins wide and strong, stifles well turned, and the hindquarters well developed and of great power.

Legs and Feet — The legs must be straight from the shoulder to ground, and the feet compact with toes well arched, and pads well developed; the hocks should be well bent, and the dog must neither be cowhocked nor be too wide behind; in fact, he must stand and move true all round on legs and feet. Legs should be of medium length, showing good bone and muscle, but not so short as to be out of balance with rest of body. In fact, a dog well balanced in all points is preferable to one with outstanding good qualities and defects.

Tail — The tail is a distinctive feature of the breed; it should be very thick towards the base, gradually tapering towards the tip, of medium length, should be free from any feathering, and should be clothed thickly all round with the Labrador's short, thick, dense coat, thus giving that peculiar 'rounded' appearance which has been described as the 'otter' tail. The tail may be carried gaily but should not curl over the back.

Coat — The coat is another very distinctive feature; it should be short, very dense and without wave, and should give a fairly hard feeling to the hand.

Colour — The colours are black, yellow, or chocolate and are evaluated as follows:
(a) Blacks: All black, with a small white spot on chest permissible. Eyes to be of medium size, expressing intelligence and good temper, preferably brown or hazel, although black or yellow is permissible.
(b) Yellows: Yellows may vary in colour from fox-red to light cream with variations in the shading of the coat on ears, the under-parts of the dog, or beneath the tail. A small white spot on chest is permissible. Eye colouring and expression should be the same as that of the blacks, with black or dark brown eye rims. The nose should also be black or dark brown, although 'fading' to pink in winter weather is not serious. A 'Dudley' nose (pink without pigmentation) should be penalized.
(c) Chocolates: Shades ranging from light sedge to chocolate. A small white spot on chest is permissible. Eyes to be light brown to clear yellow. Nose and eye rim pigmentation dark brown or liver coloured. 'Fading' to pink in weather not serious. 'Dudley' nose should be penalized.

Movement — Movement should be free and effortless. The forelegs should be strong, straight and true, and correctly placed. Watching a dog move towards one, there should be no signs of elbows being out in front, but neatly held to the body with legs not too close together, but moving straight forward without pacing or weaving. Upon viewing the dog from the rear, one should get the impression that the hind legs, which should be well muscled and not cow-hocked, move as nearly parallel as possible, with hocks doing their full share of work and flexing well, thus giving the appearance of power and strength.

Approximate weights of dogs and bitches in working condition — Dogs 60 to 75 pounds (27.215 to 34.019 kg); bitches 55 to 70 pounds (24.947 to 31.751 kg).

Height at Shoulders — Dogs 22½ to 24½ inches (57.15 to 62.23 cm); bitches 22½ to 23½ inches (57.15 to 59.69 cm).

General Facts

The most popular retrieving breed began his development in Newfoundland. It was imported to Britain before the days of the quarantine laws where it underwent further improvement. Makes an excellent family pet, is hardy and requires little grooming care. Extremely fond of the water.

Ch. Norwesia Toto Benui CD. In limited showing Ben had 30 Bests of Breed, three puppy groups and 16 group placings. Awarded first once, second twice, Top Ridgeback, Dogs in Canada. Owner, Dr. C. Elizabeth and Eleanor C. Mahaffy, Norwesia Reg., R.R. 3, High River, Alta. T0L 1B0.

Rhodesian Ridgeback

The peculiarity of this breed is the ridge on the back which is formed by the hair growing in the opposite direction to the rest of the coat. The ridge must be regarded as the escutcheon of the breed. The ridge should be clearly defined, tapering and symmetrical. It should start immediately behind the shoulders and continue up to a point between the prominence of the hips and should contain two identical crowns opposite each other. The lower edges of the crown should not extend further down the ridge than one-third of the ridge.

General Appearance — The Ridgeback should represent a strong, muscular and active dog, symmetrical in outline, and capable of great endurance with a fair amount of speed.

Head — Should be of a fair length, and skull flat and rather broad between the ears and should be free from wrinkles when in repose. The stop should be reasonably well defined, and not in one straight line from the nose to the occiput bone, as required in a Bull Terrier.

Muzzle — Long, deep and powerful, jaws level and strong with well developed teeth, especially the canines or holders. The lips clean, closely fitting the jaws.

Eyes — Moderately well apart, and should be round, bright and sparkling with intelligent expression, their colour harmonizing with the colour of nose.

Ears — Should be set rather high, of medium size, rather wide at the base, and tapering to a rounded point. They should be carried close to the head.

Nose — Should be black, or brown, in keeping with the colour of the eyes. No other coloured nose is permissible. A black nose should be accompanied by dark eyes, a brown nose by amber eyes.

Neck and Shoulders — The neck should be fairly strong and free from throatiness. The shoulder should be sloping, clean and muscular, denoting speed.

Body, Back, Chest and Loins — The chest should not be too wide, but very deep and capacious; ribs moderately well sprung, never rounded like barrel hoops (which would indicate want of speed), the back powerful, and loins strong, muscular and slightly arched.

Legs and Feet — The forelegs should be perfectly straight, strong and heavy in bone; elbows close to the body. The feet should be compact, with well arched toes, round, tough, elastic pads, protected by hair between the toes and pads. In the hind legs the muscles should be clean, well defined, and hocks well down.

Tail — Strong at the insertion, and generally tapering towards the end, free from coarseness. It should not be inserted too high or too low, and should be carried with a slight curve upwards, never curled.

Coat — Light wheaten to red wheaten. A little white on the chest and toes permissible but excessive white here and on the belly and above paws is undesirable.

Size — A mature Ridgeback should be a handsome, upstanding dog; dogs should be of a height of 25 to 27 inches (63.5 to 68.58 cm) and bitches 24 to 26 inches (60.96 to 66.04 cm). Minimum bench standard — dogs 25 inches, bitches 24 inches.

Weight — (desirable) dogs 75 pounds (34.02 kg); bitches 65 pounds (29.48 kg).

General Facts

A breed that originated in South Africa, formerly called the 'Lion Dog' because it was widely used as a hunter of big game. The breed descends from the ridged dogs of the Hottentots, crossed with numerous other breeds including the Mastiff. Despite the many crosses, the ridge, which is the hallmark of the breed, persists. This is a line of hair growing up the centre back opposite to the lie of the coat.

When the first specimens were exhibited in their country of origin at dog shows, there was quite a variety of ridges seen. Some, it is reported, were quite unsightly. To improve the appearance of the animal, the breed standard was written to include a precisely detailed description of the form the ridge should take — length, limits and placement of the crowns. Some of the best specimens are said to show white on the chest and toes and, all other points being equal, such markings should not penalize a good dog.

The breed is clean, easily cared for, courageous and very loyal to those he loves. He makes an excellent choice of family pet in the right setting, with outdoor exercise facilities available to him.

Rottweiler

General Appearance and Character — The Rottweiler is a good sized, strongly built, active dog. He is affectionate, intelligent, easily trained to work, naturally obedient and extremely faithful. While not quarrelsome, he possesses great courage and makes a splendid guard. His demeanour is dignified and he is not excitable.

Head — Of medium length, skull broad between the ears; stop well pronounced as is also the occiput. Muzzle not very long. Should not be longer than distance from stop to occiput. Nose well developed with relatively large nostrils and always black. Flews should not be too pronounced, also black. Jaws strong, muscular; teeth strong, incisors of lower jaw must touch the inner surface of upper incisors. Eyes medium size, dark brown, express faithfulness, good humour and confidence. Ears comparatively small, set high and wide; hang over about on a level with top of head. Skin on head should not be loose. Neck of fair length, strong, round and very muscular, slightly arched and free from throatiness.

Forequarters — Shoulders should be well placed, long and sloping, elbows well let down but not loose. Legs muscular and with plenty of bone and substance, pasterns straight and strong. Feet strong, round and close, with toes well arched. Soles very hard, toenails dark, short and strong.

Body — Chest is roomy, broad and deep. Ribs well sprung. Back straight, strong and rather short. Loins strong and deep; flanks should not be tucked up. Croup short, broad but not sloping.

Hindquarters — Upper thigh short, broad, very muscular. Lower thigh very muscular at top, strong and sinewy at bottom. Stifles fairly well bent, hocks strong. Hind feet somewhat longer than front ones but should be close and strong with toes well arched. There should be no dewclaws. Tail should be short, placed high (on level with back) and carried horizontally. Dogs are frequently born with a short stump tail and when tail is too long, it must be docked close to body.

Coat — Hair should be short, coarse and flat. The undercoat, which is absolutely required on neck and thighs, should not show through outer coat. The hair should be a little longer on the back of front and hind legs and on tail.

Colour — Black with clearly defined markings on cheeks, muzzle, chest and legs, as well as over both eyes. Colour of markings: tan to mahogany brown. A small spot of white on chest and belly is permissible but not desirable.

Height — Shoulder height for males is 23 3/4 to 27 inches (60.325 to 68.58 cm); for females 21 3/4 to 25 3/4 inches (55.245 to 65.405 cm), but height should always be considered in relation to the general appearance and conformation of the dog.

Faults — Too lightly built or too heavily built, swayback, roach back, too long body, lack of spring of ribs. Head too long and narrow or too short and plump. Lack of occiput, snipey muzzle, cheekiness, topline of muzzle not straight, light or flesh coloured nose, hanging flews, overshot or undershot, loose skin on head, ears set too low, or ears too heavy, long or narrow or rose ear, or ears uneven in size. Light, small or slanting eyes, or lack of expression, neck too long, thin or weak, or very noticeable throatiness. Lack of bone and muscle, short or straight shoulders, front legs too close together or not straight, weak pasterns, splay feet, light nails, weak toes. Flat ribs, sloping croup. Too heavy or plump body. Flanks drawn up. Flat thighs, cowhocks or weak hocks, dewclaws. Tail set too high or too low or that is too long or too thin. Soft, too short, too long or too open coat, wavy coat or lack of undercoat. White markings on toes, legs, or other parts of body, markings not well defined or smudgy.

The one-colour tan Rottweiler with either black or light mask or with black streak on back as well as other colours such as brown or blue are not recognized and are believed to be cross-bred, as is also a long-haired Rottweiler. Timid or stupid appearing animals are to be positively rejected.

General Facts

Large dogs left behind by Roman legions on their march across the Alps established themselves near the present town of Rottweil and have come to be known as the Rottweiler. A strong, intelligent breed they have been used as herders, drovers, guard dogs and during World War I were recruited for war service.

St. Bernard

Short-haired — General — Powerful, tall, strong, muscular, head powerful, expression intelligent. Dark masked dogs appear more stern but never ill-natured.
Head — Powerful, imposing. Skull massive, wide, slightly arched, sides slope in gentle curve into strongly developed, high cheekbones. Occiput moderately developed; orbital ridge strongly developed, forms near right angle with horizontal axis of head. Deeply imbedded between eyes and starting at root of muzzle, a furrow runs over whole skull. Strongly marked in first half, gradually disappearing toward base of occiput. Lines at sides of head diverge considerably from outer corner of eyes toward back of head. Skin of forehead forms rather noticeable wrinkles which converge toward furrow. Wrinkles most visible when dog is in action without giving impression of morosity. Wrinkles too strongly developed not desired. Slope from skull to muzzle sudden and rather steep. Muzzle short, does not taper, vertical depth at root greater than length; bridge of muzzle greater than length; is not arched, but straight; in some dogs slightly broken. A rather wide, well marked, shallow furrow runs from root of muzzle over entire bridge of muzzle to nose. Flews of upper jaw strongly developed, not sharply cut, but turning in a curve into lower edge and slightly overhanging. Flews of lower jaw must not be deeply pendant. Bite in proportion to head, is only moderately developed. Black roof of mouth desirable.
Nose — Very substantial, broad, wide open nostrils, like lips, always black.
Ears — Medium size, rather high set, strongly developed burr at base; stand slightly away from head at base, then drop with sharp bend to side and cling to head without a turn. Flap is tender and forms rounded triangle, slightly elongated toward point, front edge lying firmly to head; back edge may stand somewhat away from head, especially when dog at attention. A strongly developed base gives skull a squarer, broader and much more expressive appearance.
Eyes — Set more to the front than sides, of medium size, dark brown, intelligent, friendly expression, set moderately deep. Lower eyelids, as a rule, do not close completely and, if so, form an angular wrinkle toward the inner corner of eye. Eyelids too deeply pendant and show conspicuously the lachrymal glands, or a very red, thick haw, and eyes that are too light, are objectionable.
Neck — Set high, very strong and in action is carried erect. Otherwise horizontally or slightly downward. Junction of head and neck very muscular and rounded at sides which makes neck appear rather short. Dewlap of throat and neck well pronounced; too strong development not desirable.
Shoulders — Sloping and broad, very muscular, powerful. Withers are strongly pronounced.
Chest — Very well arched, moderately deep, not reaching below the elbows.
Back — Very broad, perfectly straight as far as the haunches, from there gently sloping to the rump, merging imperceptibly into root of tail.
Hindquarters — Well developed. Legs very muscular.
Belly — Distinctly set off from very powerful loin section, only little drawn.
Tail — Starting broad and powerful directly from rump is long, very heavy, ending in a powerful tip. Hangs straight down in repose, turning gently upward in lower third only. In many specimens tail is carried with the edge slightly bent and thus hangs in shape of an 'f'. In action all dogs carry tail more or less turned upward. May not be carried too erect or rolled over back. Slight curling of tip more admissible.
Forearms — Very powerful, extraordinarily muscular.
Forelegs — Straight, strong.
Hindlegs — Hocks of moderate angulation. Dewclaws not desired; if present, must not obstruct gait.
Feet — Broad, toes strong, moderately closed, knuckles high.
Coat — Very dense, lying smooth, tough but not rough to touch. Thighs slightly bushy; at root tail has longer, denser hair, becomes shorter towards tip. Tail bushy, not forming flag.
Colour — White with red or red with white, red in various shades; brindle patches with white markings. Colours red and brown-yellow of equal value. Necessary markings: white chest, feet, tip of tail, nose band, collar or spot on nape; the latter and blaze very desirable. Never of one colour or without white. All other colours faulty except dark shadings on head and ears.
Height at Shoulder — Dog ought to be 70 cm minimum; bitch 65 cm.
Long-haired — As short-haired except coat which is medium long, straight to slightly wavy. Hair usually more wavy on back. Tail bushy; rolled or curly hair on tail not desirable; tail with parted hair or a flag tail faulty. Face and ears covered with short, soft hair; longer at base of ear permissible. Forelegs only slightly feathered; thighs very bushy.

Saluki

Head – Long and narrow, skull moderately wide between the ears, not domed, stop not pronounced, the whole showing great quality. Nose black or liver.
Ears – Long and covered with long silky hair hanging close to the skull and mobile.
Eyes – Dark to hazel and bright; large and oval, but not prominent.
Teeth – Strong and level.
Neck – Long, supple and well muscled.
Chest – Deep and moderately narrow.
Forequarters – Shoulders sloping and set well back, well muscled without being coarse.
Forelegs – Straight and long from the elbow to the knee.
Hindquarters – Strong, hipbones set well apart and stifle moderately bent, hocks low to the ground, showing galloping and jumping power.
Loin and Back – Back fairly broad, muscles slightly arched over loin.
Feet – Of moderate length, toes long and well arched, not splayed out, but at the same time, not cat-footed; the whole being strong and supple and well feathered between the toes.
Tail – Long, set on low and carried naturally in a curve, well feathered on the underside with long, silky hair, not bushy.
Coat – Smooth and of a soft silky texture, slight feather on the legs, feather at the back of the thighs and sometimes with slight woolly feather on the thigh and shoulder.
Colours – White, cream, fawn, golden, red, grizzle and tan tri-colour (white, black and tan) and black and tan.
General Appearance – The whole appearance of this breed should give an impression of grace and symmetry and of great speed and endurance coupled with strength and activity to enable it to kill gazelle or other quarry over deep sand or rocky mountains. The expression should be dignified and gentle with deep, faithful, far-seeing eyes. Dogs should average in height from 23 to 28 inches (58.42 to 71.12 cm) and bitches may be considerably smaller, this being very typical of the breed.
The Smooth Variety – In this variety the points should be the same with the exception of the coat, which has no feathering.
Note: Still quite rare on this continent, the first smooth Saluki in the world to gain his championship, Rasim Ramullah of Pine Paddocks, was owned in the United States. It is reported that smooths are greatly favoured in Sweden.

General Facts

Saluki fanciers will tell you that whenever a dog is mentioned in the Bible, that dog is a Saluki. This could be. It is a desert hound of ancient origin used to run down jackal and gazelle. A member of the greyhound family, the Saluki's presence has more or less been overshadowed by his more spectacular descendant, the Afghan hound. But ever so surely, his advantages are being discovered. He makes a clean, devoted house pet, excellent watchdog and his coat is easily managed. He needs running room for sure and should never be walked off lead, no matter how thoroughly obedience trained. The Saluki loves to dash off for a run on his own. A dog that was bred to run down gazelle, is not easy to catch up with. Archeologists have traced the Saluki's history back 9,000 years. His likeness appears in ancient carvings and on Egyptian tombs. It is said the dogs were so highly prized they were never sold but exchanged. The first Salukis are thought to have been brought to Europe by the Crusaders.

The breed has been known by a variety of names including Persian Greyhound, Arabian Saluki, Saluki Shami and Slughi. In 1923, the English Kennel Club gave them their official breed name, Saluki, or Gazelle Hound. In 1927, the Saluki Club of America was organized and soon thereafter the breed was officially recognized by the American Kennel Club. An active Canadian club sees to it that the breed is well represented in this country at dog shows and the breed is regularly to be found among the dogs placing in the Hound Group, a few making it all the way to Best in Show. Smooths, though uncommon, are also to be seen occasionally. An excellent photograph of the Smooth coat is to be found in 'The World Encyclopedia of Dogs', Jones and Hamilton.

Feathered or smooth, fanciers claim the Saluki's intelligence makes him almost human. In fact, when one Sheik was asked if he did not think it unclean to share his tent with a dog, he replied, "That's not a dog, it's a Saluki!"

Ch. Kristik's Nukilik Chinook. No. 1 Samoyed in Canada, 1977. At three years, his record is three Group 1sts, five Group 2nds, two Group 3rds, five Group 4ths and one Canadian bred Best in Show. Samoyed

General Appearance — The Samoyed, being essentially a working dog, should present a picture of beauty, alertness and strength, with agility, dignity and grace. As his work lies in the cold climate, his coat should be heavy and weather resistant, and of good quality rather than quantity. The male carries more of a 'ruff' than the female. He should not be long in the back, as a weak back would make him practically useless for his legitimate work, but at the same time a close-coupled body would also place him at a great disadvantage as a draft dog. Breeders should aim for the happy medium, a body not long but muscular, allowing liberty, with a deep chest and well sprung ribs, strong arched neck, straight front and especially strong loins. Males should be masculine in appearance and deportment without unwarranted aggressiveness; bitches feminine without weakness of structure or apparent softness of temperament. Bitches may be slightly longer in back than males. They should both give the appearance of being capable of great endurance but be free from coarseness. Because of the depth of chest required, the legs should be moderately long. A very short-legged dog is to be depreciated. Hindquarters should be particularly well developed, stifles well bent and any suggestion of unsound stifles or cowhocks severely penalized. General appearance should include movement and general conformation indicating balance and good substance.

Gait — A Samoyed should gait with a good, well-balanced movement. He should move with an easy, agile stride that is well timed. The gait should be free with a good reach in the forequarters and a sound, driving power in the hindquarters. A choppy or stilted gait should be penalized.

Coat — The body should be well covered with a thick, close, soft and short undercoat, with harsh hair growing through it, forming the outer coat, which should stand straight away from the body and be quite free from curl. The legs should have good feathering.

Head — Powerful and wedge shaped with a broad, flat skull, muzzle of medium length, a tapering foreface, not too sharply defined. The stop should be not too abrupt — nevertheless well defined. Ears should not be too long but rounded at the tips, set well apart and well covered inside with hair. Eyes dark, set well apart and deep with alert, intelligent expression. Lips black, flews should not drop predominantly at corners of the mouth. Hair short and smooth before the ears. Nose and eyerims black for preference, but may be brown. Strong jaws with level teeth.

Back — Medium in length, broad and very muscular. Bitches may be slightly longer in back than males.

Chest and Ribs — Chest broad and deep. Ribs well sprung, giving plenty of heart and lung room.

Hindquarters — Very muscular, stifles well let down, cowhocks or straight stifles should be severely penalized.

Forelegs — Straight and muscular. Good bone. In or out at the elbow to be severely penalized.

Feet — Long, flattish and slightly spread out. Soles well padded with hair.

Tail — Long and profuse, carried over the back when alert, sometimes dropped when at rest. A judge should see the tail over the back once when judging. A double hook should be penalized.

Size and Weight — Dogs 20 to 22 inches (50.80 to 55.88 cm) at the shoulder; bitches 18 to 20 inches (45.72 to 50.80 cm); weight in proportion to size.

Colour — Pure white, cream, biscuit, or white and biscuit.

Disposition — Alert and intelligent and should show animation. Friendly, but conservative. Unprovoked aggressiveness to be severely penalized.

Disqualifications — Blue eyes, dewclaws on the hind legs. Any colour other than pure white, cream, biscuit or white and biscuit.

Penalties — Over and under allowed height. Cowhocks or straight stifles. In or out at the elbow. Choppy or stilted gait. Double hook in the tail. Unprovoked aggressiveness.

General Facts

It should be noted that the breed standard for the Samoyed as approved by the American Kennel Club in 1963 calls for a taller dog than that described in the Canadian standard. In the U.S., males 21 to 23½ inches and bitches 19 to 21 inches are specified, over and under these limits to be 'penalized according to the extent of the deviation'. In addition, the Canadian breed standard lists dewclaws on the hind legs as a disqualification, but dewclaws are not mentioned in the American standard. These are the significant differences. For a complete comparison those interested should read the AKC breed standard as published.

Ch.(Can., Am. & Bda.) Fairlaur Diablo. No. 1 Schipperke since 1975 and greatest winning Schipperke in Canadian history. American Best in Show and multiple Canadian Best in Show winner. Schipperke

Appearance and General Characteristics – Excellent and faithful little watchdog, suspicious of strangers. Active, agile, indefatigable, continually occupied with what is going on around him, careful of things that are given him to guard, very kind with children, knows the ways of the household; always curious to know what is going on behind closed doors or about any object that has been moved, betraying his impressions by his sharp bark and upstanding ruff, seeking the company of horses, a hunter of moles and other vermin; can be used to hunt, a good rabbit dog.

Colour – Any solid colour other than white.

Head – Foxlike, fairly wide, narrowing at the eyes, seen in profile flat skull, tapering muzzle not too elongated nor too blunt, not too much stop.

Nose – Small and black.

Eyes – Very dark brown, small, oval, rather than round, neither sunken nor prominent.

Expression – Should have questioning expression; sharp and lively, not mean or wild.

Ears – Very erect, small, triangular, placed high, strong enough not to be capable of being lowered except in line with the body.

Teeth – Meeting evenly. A tight scissors bite is acceptable.

Shoulders – Muscular and sloping.

Chest – Broad and deep in brisket.

Body – Short, thick-set and cobby. Broad behind the shoulders, seeming higher in front because of ruff. Back strong, short, straight and level or slightly sloping down toward rump. Ribs well sprung.

Loins – Muscular and well drawn up from the brisket but not to such an extent as to cause a weak and leggy appearance of the hindquarters.

Forelegs – Straight under body, with bone in proportion, but not coarse.

Hindquarters – Somewhat lighter than the foreparts, but muscular, powerful, with rump well rounded, tail docked to no more than one inch (2.54 cm) in length.

Feet – Small, round and tight (not splayed), nails straight, strong and short.

Coat – Abundant and slightly harsh to the touch, short on the ears and on the front of legs and on the hocks, fairly short on the body, but longer around neck beginning back of the ears, and forming a ruff and a cape; a jabot extending down between the front legs, also longer on rear where it forms a culotte, the points turning inward. Undercoat dense and short on body, very dense around neck making ruff stand out. Culotte should be as long as the ruff.

Weight – 12 to 18 pounds (5.443 to 8.165 kg).

Faults – Light eyes, large round prominent eyes, ears too long or too rounded, narrow head and elongated muzzle, too blunt muzzle, domed skull, smooth short coat with short ruff and culotte, lack of undercoat, curly or silky coat, body coat more than three inches (7.62 cm) long, slightly overshot, or undershot, sway-back. Bull Terrier shaped head, straight hocks. Straight stifles and shoulders, cowhocks, feet turning in or out, legs not straight when viewed from front. Lack of distinction between length of coat, ruff and culotte.

Disqualifications

Drop or semi-erect ears. Badly overshot or undershot. Dudley nose.

General Facts

'Little Skipper' is one of the nicknames by which this breed is known. It was once a familiar sight guarding the canal barges in Belgium and Holland where its small size fitted the breed admirably for life in limited quarters. Little has been confirmed as to the origin of the Schipperke except the fact that it is native to Belgium where it has been known for at least 100 years, perhaps much longer. By 1880 the breed had become firmly established as a popular house pet in Belgium and soon many were exported to England and the U.S.A. A foxy-looking, tailless little dog, with a big ruff around its neck, the Schipperke has an outline all its own. Although any colour except white is allowable under the breed standard as approved by The Canadian Kennel Club, the American breed standard permits 'solid black' as the only approved colour. 'Any colour other than solid black' is a disqualification. This no doubt accounts for the fact that most Schipperkes, especially those in the show ring, are black. The other difference between the two breed standards is that a 'Dudley nose' is a disqualification in Canada but not in the U.S.

Ch. Tannenbaum Miss Gotrocks. Dam of multiple Best in Show winning Ch. (Can. & Bda.) Tannenbaum Purse Snatcher and Ch. Tannenbaum Sunday Punch. Canada's Top Miniature Schnauzer 1976 and 1977. Owner, Mrs. Joan Morden, Tannenbaum Reg., 4208 Britannia Rd., R.R. 6, Milton, Ont. L9T 2Y1.

Schnauzer (Miniature)

General Appearance — A robust, active dog of terrier type, resembling his larger cousin the Standard Schnauzer in general appearance, and of an alert, active disposition. Sturdily built, nearly square in proportion of body length to height, with plenty of bone and without any suggestion of toyishness.

Head — Strong and rectangular, its width diminishing slightly from ears to eyes, and again to tip of nose. Forehead unwrinkled; skull flat and fairly long; foreface parallel to top skull with a slight stop; and is at least as long as top skull. Muzzle is strong in proportion to skull; it ends in a moderately blunt manner, with thick whiskers which accentuate the rectangular shape of the head.

Teeth — Meet in a scissors bite.

Eyes — Small, dark brown and deep-set. Oval in appearance and keen in expression.

Ears — When cropped ears are identical in shape and length with pointed tips. In balance with head and not exaggerated in length. Set high on skull, carried perpendicularly at inner edges with as little bell as possible along outer edges. When uncropped ears are small and V-shaped, folding close to skull.

Neck — Strong, well arched, blending into the shoulders and with the skin fitting tightly at the throat.

Body — Short and deep with brisket extending at least to the elbows. Ribs well sprung and deep extending well back to a short loin. The underbody does not present a tucked-up appearance at the flank. Topline straight; declines slightly from withers to base of tail. The overall length from chest to stern bone equals the height at the withers.

Forequarters — Have flat, somewhat sloping shoulders and high withers. Forelegs straight and parallel when viewed from all sides. Strong pasterns and good bone. They are separated by a fairly deep brisket which precludes a pinched front. Elbows close and ribs spread gradually from first rib so as to allow space for the elbows to move close to body.

Hindquarters — Have strong-muscled, slanting thighs; well bent at stifles and straight from hock to so-called heel. There is sufficient angulation so that, in stance, the hocks extend beyond the tail. The hindquarters never appear overbuilt or higher than the shoulders.

Feet — Short and round (cat feet) with thick, black pads. Toes are arched and compact.

Action — The trot is the gait at which movement is judged. The dog must gait in a straight line. Coming on, the forelegs are parallel, with the elbows close to the body. The feet turn neither inward nor outward. Going away, the hind legs are parallel from the hocks down, and travel wide. Viewed from the side, the forelegs have a good reach, while the hind legs have a strong drive with good pick-up of hocks.

Tail — Set high and carried erect. It is docked only long enough to be clearly visible over the top line of the body when the dog is in proper length of coat.

Coat — Double, with a hard, wiry outer coat and a close under coat. The body coat should be plucked. When in show condition, the proper length is not less than three-quarters of an inch (1.905 cm) except on neck, ears and skull. Furnishings are fairly thick but not silky.

Size — From 12 to 14 inches (30.48 to 35.56 cm). Ideal size 13½ inches (34.29 cm).

Colour — Recognized colours are salt and pepper, black and silver, and solid black. The typical colour is salt and pepper in shades of grey; tan shading is permissible. The salt and pepper mixture fades out to light grey or silver white in the eyebrows, whiskers, cheeks, under throat, across chest, under tail, leg furnishings, under body and inside legs. The light underbody hair is not to rise higher on the sides of the body than the front elbows.

The black and silvers follow the same pattern as the salt and peppers. The entire salt and pepper section must be black.

Black is the only solid colour allowed. It must be a true black with no grey hairs and no brown tinge except where the whiskers may have become discoloured. A small white spot on the chest is permitted.

Faults — Toyishness, raciness or coarseness. Head coarse and cheeky. Chest too broad or shallow in brisket. Tail set low. Sway or roach back. Bowed or cowhocked hindquarters. Loose elbows. Sidegaiting, paddling in front or high hackney knee action. Weak hind action. Coat too soft or too smooth and slick in appearance. Shyness or viciousness. Undershot or overshot jaw. Level bite. Eyes light and/or large and prominent in appearance.

Disqualifications — Dogs or bitches under or over height limits. Colour solid white or white patches on the body.

Ch. Brita von Silberfell. Sire: Ch. (Can. & Am.) Lawanda's Andante. Dam: Ch. (Can. & Am.) Mardan's Summer Dream Titania. Top Canadian owned Standard Schnauzer in 1976 and No. 2 in Canada that year. She is a typical example of Von Silberfell type and temperament. Breeder/owner, Claire Snetsinger, Von Silberfell Reg., R.R. 1, Limehouse, Ont. L0P 1H0.

Schnauzer (Standard)

A robust, sinewy, heavy-set dog of the terrier type, sturdily built, square in proportion of body length to height, with good muscle and plenty of bone. His nature combines high-spirited temperament with extreme reliability. His rugged build and dense, harsh coat are accentuated by arched eyebrows, bristly mustache and luxurious whiskers.

Height — At withers, from 18 to 20 inches (45.72 to 50.80 cm) for males, and from 17 to 19 inches (43.18 to 48.26 cm) for females.

Disqualifications — Animals under or over these measurements.

Head — Strong and rectangular, diminishing slightly from ear to eyes, and again to tip of nose. Total length about one-third the length of back, measuring from withers to beginning of tail.

Skull — Moderately broad between the ears, width not exceeding two-thirds of length. Faults — too narrow or pronounced.

Forehead — Flat and unwrinkled.

Cheeks — Well muscled, but not too strongly developed. Faults — protruding cheek bones.

Muzzle — Strong and in proportion to skull, ending in moderately blunt manner, with wiry whiskers accenting rectangular shape of head. Faults — too long or too short, pointed or lacking whiskers; dish-faced or down-faced.

Nose — Powerful, black and full, with ridge running almost parallel to extension of forehead. Lips tight, not overlapping.

Ears — Evenly shaped, set high and carried erect when cropped. If uncropped, they should be small and V-shaped, of moderate thickness and carried rather high and close to head. Faults — low-set, houndy ears and badly cut ears.

Eyes — Medium size, dark brown, oval and turned forward. Vision should not be obstructed from the front or profile by too long an eyebrow. The brow should be arched and wiry. Faults — too large, round or protruding, light or yellow-ringed eyes.

Jaw — Level, powerful and square. Faults — overshot or undershot.

Teeth — Sound, strong and white, with canines meeting in scissors bite. Faults — pointed or irregular.

Neck — Nape should be strong, slightly arched and set cleanly on the shoulders. Skin should be tight, fitting closely to the throat. Faults — too short, thick, long and throaty.

Shoulders — Somewhat sloping, strongly muscled. Faults — loose, straight or low shoulders, or steep-set front.

Chest — Moderately broad, with the breastbone plainly discernible and reaching at least to the height of the elbows, extending slowly backwards. Belly well drawn up toward the back, but no tuck-up. Faults — too broad or too narrow, shallow or false chest.

Back — Strong, stiff, straight and short, with a well developed short loin section, the ribs well sprung. Length of the back from the withers to the set-on of tail should approximate the height at withers. Faults — too long, sunken or roached.

Forelegs — Straight and vertical when seen from all sides, with bone carried well down to the feet; elbows set close to body and pointing directly backward. Faults — legs too high, low, thin, or weak; elbows turned out or in. Pasterns sunken or any weakness of joint, bone or muscular development.

Feet — Small and compact; round with thick pads, strong nails. Toes well arched and pointing straight ahead. Faults — toed-in or toed-out and long or spreading feet.

Hindquarters — Strongly muscled, with thighs slanting and flat, never appearing overbuilt or higher than the shoulders. Faults — hocks let down, cowhocks or any weakness of joint.

Body — Compact, strong, short coupled and substantial so as to permit great flexibility.

Tail — Set moderately high and carried erect. Cut down to two joints and should not be longer than two inches. Faults — too steep, level or too long a croup.

Coat — Hard and wiry, standing up on the back and, when seen against the course of the hair, neither short nor lying flat. The outer coat should be harsh, the undercoat soft. It should be trimmed only to accent the body outline and should not be more than an inch long except on the ears and skull. Faults — soft, smooth, curly; too long or short; too closely trimmed, dyed or excessively powdered.

Colour — Pepper and salt or similar equal mixtures, light or dark including pure black. Faults — solid colours other than black, also very light or whitish, spotted or tiger colours. A small white spot on the breast is not a fault.

Action — Sound, strong, quick, free, true, level.

Disqualifications — Shy, savage, highly nervous dogs; over or below height limits.

Ch. (Eng. & Am.) Roderick of Jenmist. "Head, skull, ear set, expression make an impressive picture. Good neck, pleasing in topline, good spring of rib. I was impressed by his powerful jaw structure and large teeth, but one of the best things about him undoubtedly was his hind action; — well constructed and well muscled, moved out with great drive and yet with true economy of effort." Critique by W. Ronald Irving (judge, Ardingly, Eng.). Owners, Mr. and Mrs. L. Guimond, Wirehill Reg., 358 Derry Rd. W., R.R. 6, Mississauga, Ont. L5M 2B5.

Sealyham Terrier

The Sealyham should be the embodiment of power and determination, ever keen and alert, of extraordinary substance, yet free from clumsiness.

Height — At withers about 10½ inches (26.67 cm). Weight 21 pounds (9.53 kg) for dogs and 20 pounds (9.07 kg) for bitches. It should be borne in mind that size is more important than weight.

Head — Long, broad and powerful, without coarseness. It should, however, be in perfect balance with the body, joining neck smoothly. Length of head, roughly three-quarters height at withers, or about one inch longer than neck. Breadth between ears a little less than one-half length of head.

Skull — Very slightly domed, with a shallow indentation running down between the brows, and joining the muzzle with a moderate stop.

Cheeks — Smoothly formed and flat, without heavy jowls.

Jaws — Level, powerful and square. Overshot or undershot bad faults.

Teeth — Sound, strong and white, with canines fitting closely together.

Nose — Black, with large nostrils. White, cherry or butterfly bad faults.

Eyes — Very dark, deeply set and fairly wide apart, of medium size, oval in shape with keen terrier expression. Light, large or protruding eye bad faults.

Ears — Folded level with top of head, with forward edge close to cheek. Well rounded at tip, and of length to reach outer corner of eye. Thin, not leathery, and of sufficient thickness to avoid creases. Prick, tulip, rose or hound ears bad faults.

Neck — Length slightly less than two-thirds of height of dog at withers. Muscular without coarseness, with good reach, refinement at throat, and set firmly on shoulders.

Shoulders — Well laid back and powerful, but not overmuscled. Sufficiently wide to permit freedom of action. Upright or straight shoulder placement highly undesirable.

Legs — Forelegs strong, with good bone; and as straight as is consistent with chest being well let down between them. Down on pasterns, knuckled over, bound, and out at elbow, bad faults. Hind legs longer than forelegs and not so heavily boned.

Feet — Large but compact, round with thick pads, strong nails. Toes well arched and pointing straight ahead. Forefeet larger, though not quite so long as hind feet. Thin, spread or flat feet bad faults.

Body — Strong, short-coupled and substantial, so as to permit great flexibility. Brisket deep and well let down between forelegs. Ribs well sprung.

Back — Length from withers to set on of tail should approximate height at withers, or 10½ inches (26.67 cm). Top line level, neither roached nor swayed. Any deviations from these measurements undesirable.

Hindquarters — Very powerful, and protruding well behind the set on of tail. Strong second thighs, stifles well bent, and hocks well let down. Capped or cowhocks bad faults.

Tail — Docked and carried upright. Set on far enough forward so that spine does not slope down to it.

Coat — Weather-resisting, comprised of soft, dense undercoat and hard, wiry top coat. Silky or curly coat bad fault.

Colour — All white, or with lemon, tan or badger markings on head and ears. Heavy body markings and excessive ticking should be discouraged.

Action — Sound, strong, quick, free, true and level.

Note — The measurements were taken with calipers.

General Facts

About the middle of the last century a sportsman by the name of Edwardes created the breed that is now called the Sealyham Terrier. He did not set out to develop a breed. All he was seeking was a tough terrier to use for his personal otter hunting. The breeds used to found Edwardes strain are not known, but it is known that stock that did not measure up to his strict behaviour standards was destroyed. The survivors were tough and came to be known as Sealyhams, named after Edwardes' estate in Wales. The breeder died in 1891 but his terriers live on. And despite their rugged heritage the Sealy adapted well to family life.

Never so popular as many of the terrier breeds, the Sealyham continues to have a strong following in Britain and, to a lesser degree, on this continent. Sturdy and small in size, the breed makes an excellent choice of pet for city dwellers. The harsh, double coat does need particular grooming to keep the Sealy looking neat — stripping for show, but pets may be clipped.

Ch. (Can., Am. & Bda.) Marengohill's Hello Sunshine. Sunny is top winning English Setter in Canada for 1977 and 1978 (subject to confirmation) with wins in the U.S., Bermuda and Canada including five Bests in Show, 33 Group 1sts, and 67 other group placings and 136 Bests of Breed. Setter (English)

Head — Long and lean with a well defined stop. The skull oval from ear to ear, of medium width, giving brain room but with no suggestion of coarseness, with but little difference between the width at base of skull and at brows and with a moderately defined occipital protuberance. Brows should be at a sharp angle from the muzzle. Muzzle should be long and square, of width in harmony with the skull, without any fullness under the eyes and straight from eyes to tip of nose. A dish face or Roman nose objectionable. Lips square and fairly pendant. Nose black or dark liver in colour, except in white, lemon and white, orange and white, or liver and white dogs, when it may be of lighter colour. Nostrils should be wide apart and large in openings. Jaws of equal length. Over- or under-shot jaw objectionable. Ears should be carried close to head, well back and set low, of moderate length, slightly rounded at ends and covered with silky hair. Eyes bright, mild, intelligent, dark brown in colour.

Neck — Long, lean, arched at crest, not too throaty.

Shoulders — Formed to permit perfect freedom of action to forelegs. Shoulder blades long, wide, sloping moderately well back and standing fairly close together at the top.

Chest — Of good depth but not of excessive width.

Ribs — Back of shoulders should spring gradually to middle of body then taper to back ribs which should be of good depth.

Back — Strong at junction with loin and should be straight or sloping upward very slightly to top of shoulder, the whole forming a graceful outline of medium length without sway or drop. Loins strong, moderate in length, slightly arched, but not to the extent of being roached or wheel-backed. Hipbones wide apart without too sudden drop to root of tail.

Forelegs — Arms flat and muscular, bone fully developed and muscles hard and devoid of flabbiness; of good length from point of shoulder to elbow and set at such an angle as will bring the legs fairly under dog. Elbows should have no tendency to turn either in or out. Pastern short, strong and nearly round with slope from pastern joint to foot deviating very slightly forward from perpendicular.

Hind Legs — Thighs wide, muscular with well developed lower thighs. Stifles well bent and strong. Hocks wide and flat. Pastern short, strong and nearly round, with slope from pastern joint to foot deviating very slightly from the perpendicular.

Feet — Closely set and strong, pads well developed and tough, toes well arched and protected with short, thick hair.

Tail — Straight and tapering to a fine point with only sufficient length to reach the hocks or less. Feather must be straight and silky, falling loosely in a fringe and tapering to the point when the tail is raised. No bushiness. Tail should not curl sideways or above level of back.

Coat — Flat and of good length, without curl; not soft or woolly. Feather on legs moderately thin and regular.

Height — Dogs about 25 inches (63.5 cm); bitches about 24 inches (60.96 cm).

Colours — Black, white and tan; black and white; blue belton; lemon and white; lemon belton; orange and white; orange belton; liver and white; liver belton; and solid white.

Markings — Dogs without heavy patches of colour on body, but flecked all over preferred.

Symmetry — Harmony of all parts to be considered. Symmetrical dogs will have level backs or be very slightly higher at the shoulders than at the hips. Balance, harmony of proportion, and an appearance of breeding and quality to be looked for, and coarseness avoided.

Movement and Carriage — An easy, free and graceful movement, suggesting rapidity and endurance. A lively tail and a high carriage of head. Stiltiness, clumsiness or a lumbering gait are objectionable.

Setter (Gordon)

General Impression — Good sized, sturdily built dog, well muscled, plenty of bone and substance; active, upstanding, stylish, appearing capable of doing a full day's work in the field. Strong, rather short back, well sprung ribs, short tail. Fairly heavy head, finely chiseled, intelligent, noble and dignified expression, showing no signs of shyness; clear colours and straight or slightly waved coat. A dog that suggests strength and stamina rather than extreme speed.

Size — Shoulder height for males 24 to 27 inches (60.96 to 68.58 cm); for females 23 to 26 inches (58.42 to 66.04 cm).

Weight — Males 55 to 75 pounds (24.947 to 34.019 kg); females 45 to 65 pounds (20.412 to 29.483 kg). As a guide, the greater heights and weights are preferred, provided character and quality also combined. Dogs over and under these heights and weights to be discouraged.

Head — Deep rather than broad, with plenty of brain room, nicely rounded good size skull, broadest between ears. Head should have a clearly indicated stop. Below and above the eyes lean, and cheek as narrow as leanness of head allows. Muzzle fairly long with almost parallel lines, not pointed either as seen from above or from side. Flews not pendulous but with clearly indicated lips. Nose big, broad with open nostrils, black.

Eyes — Of fair size, neither too deep set nor too bulging, dark brown, bright and wise.

Ears — Set low on the head, fairly large and thin.

Neck — Long, lean, arched to the head and without throatiness.

Shoulders — Should be fine at the points, deep and sloping well back, giving a moderately sloping topline.

Chest — Deep and not too broad in front; the ribs well sprung, leaving plenty of lung room.

Forelegs — Big boned, straight, not bowed either in or out, with elbows free, well let down and not inclined either in or out.

Hind Legs — Hind legs, hip to hock long, flat, muscular; from hock to heel, short, strong. Stifle and hock joints well bent, not inclined either in or out.

Feet — Both fore and hind feet should have close knit, well arched toes with plenty of hair between, full toe pads, deep heel cushions.

Tail — Short, should not reach below hocks, carried horizontal or nearly so, thick at root, finishing in a fine point. Feather starts near root of tail, should be slightly waved or straight, have a three square appearance growing shorter uniformly toward end.

Coat — Soft, shining, resembling silk, straight or slightly waved — latter preferred — but not curly, long hair on ears, under stomach and on chest, on back of fore and hind legs to feet.

Colour and Markings — Deep, shining, black with tan markings, either rich chestnut or mahogany red. Tan shining, not dull, yellowish or straw colour, not mixed with black hairs. Black penciling allowed on toes. Borderlines between black and tan should be clearly defined. There should not be any tan hairs mixed in black. Symmetry and quality most essential. A dog well balanced in all points preferable to one with outstanding good qualities and defects. A smooth free movement with high head carriage.

Tan Markings

1. Two clear spots over eyes not over three-quarters of an inch (1.9 cm) in diameter.
2. On sides of muzzle, tan should not reach above base of nose, resembling a stripe around end of muzzle from one side to the other.
3. On throat.
4. Two large, clear spots on the chest.
5. On inside of hind legs and inside of thighs showing down front of stifle and broadening to outside of hind legs from hock to toes. It must not completely eliminate the black on the back of hind legs.
6. On forelegs from knees or a little above downward to toes.
7. Around the vent.

A white spot on the chest allowed, the smaller the better.

Faults — Unintelligent appearance; Bloodhound or Collie type; head — houndy, pointed, snipey, drooping or upturned muzzle; mouth too small or large; eyes too light in colour, too deep set or prominent; ears — set too high or unusually broad and heavy; thick, short neck; shoulder and back irregularly formed; chest too broad; crooked legs, outturned elbows, toes scattered, flat footed; too long, badly carried or hooked at end tail; coat curly, dull; colour yellow or straw coloured tan lines not defined, white feet, too much white on chest; no tan hairs in black which often appears around eyes.

Shetland Sheepdog

General Description — Small, alert, rough coated, long haired working dog. Must be sound, agile, sturdy. Outline symmetrical. Dogs appear masculine; bitches feminine.

Size — From 13 to 16 inches (33.02 to 40.64 cm) at shoulder. Over and under these limits disqualifies.

Coat — Double, the outer long, straight, harsh; undercoat short, furry, so dense as to give the entire coat its 'stand-off' quality. Hair on face, tips of ears and feet smooth. Mane and frill abundant, particularly in males. Forelegs well feathered, hind legs heavily so, but smooth below hock joint. Hair on tail profuse.

Colour — Black, blue merle and sable (ranging from golden through mahogany) marked with varying amounts of white and/or tan. Rustiness in black or blue coats; washed out colours; self-colour in merles, i.e. no merling or mottling; conspicuous white body spots; faults. Dogs more than 50 percent white penalized to point of elimination from competition.

Disqualification — Brindle.

Temperament — Loyal, affectionate, responsive. May be reserved with strangers but does not show fear.

Head — Refined in shape; viewed from top or side, a long blunt wedge tapering slightly from ears to nose which must be black.

Skull and Muzzle — Top of skull flat, showing no prominence at top of occiput. Cheeks flat, merging smoothly into well-rounded muzzle. Skull and muzzle of equal length; slight but definite stop; planes are parallel. Jaws clean, powerful. Deep, well developed underjaw, rounded at chin, should extend to base of nostril. Lips tight. Upper and lower lips meet and fit smoothly all the way around. Teeth level, evenly spaced. Scissors bite.

Eyes — Medium with dark, almond-shaped rims, set somewhat obliquely in skull. Blue or merle eyes permissible in blue merles only.

Ears — Small, flexible, placed high, carried three-fourths erect, with tips breaking forward. When in repose ears fold lengthwise and are thrown back into the frill.

Expression — Contours and chiseling of the head, shape, set and use of ears, placement, shape and colour of eyes, combine to produce expression. Normally it should be alert, gentle, intelligent and questioning. Toward strangers eyes should show watchfulness and reserve but no fear.

Neck — Muscular, arched and of sufficient length to carry head proudly.

Body — Appears moderately long as measured from shoulder joint to ischium, but much of this length is due to proper angulation and breadth of shoulder and hindquarter, as the back itself should be comparatively short. Back level, strongly muscled. Chest deep, brisket reaching to point of elbow. Ribs well sprung but flattened at lower half to allow free play of foreleg and shoulder. Abdomen moderately tucked up.

Forequarters — From withers the shoulder blades should slope at 45 degree angle forward and downward to shoulder joint. At withers they are separated only by the vertebra, but must slope outward sufficiently to accommodate the desired spring of rib. Upper arm joins shoulder blade as nearly as possible at a right angle. Elbow joint equidistant from ground and withers. Forelegs straight viewed from all angles, muscular, clean, strong bone. Pasterns very strong, sinewy, flexible. Dewclaws may be removed.

Feet (front and hind) — Oval, compact with toes well arched, fitting tightly together. Pads deep and tough, nails hard and strong.

Hindquarters — A slight arch at loins, croup should slope gradually to rear. Hipbone set at a 30 degree angle to the spine. Thighs broad and muscular. Thighbone set into pelvis at right angles, corresponding to angle of shoulder blade and upper arm. Stifle bones join thighbone, are distinctly angled at stifle joint. Overall length of stifle at least equal to length of thighbone, preferably longer. Hocks clean cut, angular, sinewy, with good bone and strong ligamentation. Hock short, straight viewed from all angles. Dewclaws should be removed. Feet (see Forequarters).

Tail — Sufficiently long so when it is laid along back edge of hind legs the last vertebra will reach the hock joint. Carriage at rest is straight down or in slight upward curve. When alert, tail lifted but it should not be curved forward over back.

Gait — Trot should denote effortless speed and smoothness. No jerkiness nor stiff, stilted up-and-down movement. Drive should be from rear, true, straight dependent upon correct angulation, musculation and ligamentation of entire hindquarter. Reach of foreleg is dependent upon correct angulation together with correct width of chest and construction of rib cage. Foot should lift only enough to clear ground as leg swings forward. Forelegs and hind legs move almost perpendicular to ground at the walk, slanting a little inward at slow trot, at fast trot the dog single-tracks. There should be no crossing of feet nor throwing of weight from side to side.

Shih Tzu

General Appearance — Very active, lively and alert, with a distinctly arrogant carriage. The Shih Tzu is not a toy dog.
Head and Skull — Head broad, round and wide between the eyes, shock headed, with hair falling well over the eyes; good beard and whiskers; the hair growing upwards on the nose gives a distinctly chrysanthemum-like effect. Muzzle square, short, but not wrinkled like a Pekingese, flat and hairy.
Eyes — Large, dark and round but not prominent.
Ears — Large and carried drooping; so heavily coated that they appear to blend with the hair of the neck.
Mouth — Level or slightly underhung — overshot jaws undesirable.
Forequarters — Legs short and straight and muscular. The legs should look massive on account of the wealth of hair.
Body — Body between withers and root of tail should be considerably longer than the height of withers; well ribbed up.
Hindquarters — Legs short, straight and muscular. The legs should look massive on account of the wealth of hair.
Tail — Heavily coated and curled well over back; set on high.
Coat — Long and dense, but not curly; looks harsher than it feels to the touch.
Colour — All colours; but a white blaze on the forehead and white tip to tail are highly prized. Dogs with liver markings may have liver noses and lighter eyes.
Weight and Size — About 11 inches (27.94 cm) at the withers, but considerable variation from this standard is permissible, provided other proportions are correct and true to type.

General Facts

The most confusing point about the breed standards for the Shih Tzu as approved by The Canadian Kennel Club and the American Kennel Club is the classification. In Canada, the breed is included in the Non-Sporting Group and the Canadian standard states 'The Shih Tzu is not a toy dog' and suggests a height of 11 inches at the shoulders as ideal. But in the U.S., the breed is classified in the Toy Group with a suggested height at the withers of nine to ten and a half inches, and height should be 'no more than 11 inches nor less than 8 inches'. The American standard also covers 'faults' in detail and is more explicit in its descriptions of breed characteristics.

However you wish to regard the Shih Tzu, a toy or 'not a toy', it is a charming little dog with a long and impressive history. It is said that the breed originated in Tibet where it was regarded as a 'holy dog'. Shortly after the turn of the 16th century it is said to have become established in China where it became a pet of the Imperial Court. The name 'Shih Tzu' is Chinese for 'lion', and the most highly prized specimens were those resembling the 'king of beasts' in colour. Today, in the show ring, all colours are acceptable without preference. The Shih Tzu has a very arrogant carriage, with head fall and heavily coated, highly carried tail often calling forth the question "is it coming or going?"

In 1930, the breed made its appearance in the western world but was not an instant success. The reason for this is thought to be that it bore such a strong resemblance to other oriental breeds. Photographs of some of the early imports suggest another answer. They look like unkempt little bundles of dog fur, hardly a breed to challenge the supremacy of the elegant Pekingese.

But styles and fashions change and as his grooming took on a more finished look the more attracted people were to the little lion dog. And the better they got to know him, the better the Shih Tzu was liked. Those who live with them claim there is no breed quite so charming, knowing or so independent.

Since being recognized in the United States in 1969, the breed has become very popular and usually accounts for large entries at championship events in both the U.S. and Canada. At one time it was feared that the breed could become too popular but this threat, fortunately, seems to have passed the crisis point. One reason could be that pet owners are not inclined to take care of the coats correctly. And the flowing coat is one characteristic that makes this breed distinctive. It should have daily brushing and a thorough grooming at least once a week. The Shih Tzu makes a fine watch dog, a delightful pet and companion and is well suited to city living.

Siberian Husky

General Appearance and Conduct — An alert, gracefully built, medium-sized dog, quick and light on his feet, free and graceful in action. Body strong, moderately compact; chest strong, deep; shoulders and hindquarters well muscled; straight strong legs with medium bone. Coat dense, very soft, brush tail carried curved over back when at attention; trailing in repose. Head finely chiseled, often foxlike appearance; eyes have keen, friendly expression. Gait free, tireless, almost effortless when free or on loose leash but showing great strength when pulling; trot brisk, smooth, fast. Bitches smaller than dogs, averaging up to two inches shorter and ten pounds less in weight. Siberians range in build from moderately compact (never cobby) to moderately rangy; in all builds bone must be medium, the back powerful, never slack, and shoulder height never exceeding 23½ inches.

Head — Skull medium in proportion to body; width between ears medium to narrow, gradually tapering to eyes and moderately rounded. Muzzle medium length. Both finely chiseled. Lips dark, close-fitting; jaws and teeth strong, scissors bite. Ears medium, erect, close fitting, set high, well covered with hair on inside. There is an arch at the back of the ears. Ears slightly taller than width at base, moderately rounded at tips. When dog at attention, ears carried practically parallel on top of head with inner edges quite close together at base. Eyes either brown or blue, one blue eye and one brown eye permissible but not preferable; set slightly obliquely in skull. Expression keen, friendly and foxlike, distinctly interested, sometimes mischievous.

Nose — Black preferred; brown allowed in specimens of reddish colouring; flesh-coloured nose and eye rims allowed in white dogs. Some dogs, especially black and white ones, have what is often termed a 'snow nose', i.e. a nose normally solid black but acquiring a pink streak in winter; permissible but not preferable.

Coat — Thick, soft, double, consisting of a soft, dense, downy undercoat of fur next to skin and an outer coat of soft, smooth texture giving a smooth, full-furred appearance and clean-cut outline. Coat usually medium long; a longer coat allowed but texture must remain the same in any length.

Tail — Well furred brush carried over back in sickle curve when running or at attention, trailing out behind when working or in repose. Tail should not 'snap' flat to back. Hair on tail usually of medium length varying somewhat with length of coat.

Colour — All colours and white allowed and all markings. Commonest are various shades of wolf and silver greys, tan (a light sable), and black with white points. A large variety of markings, especially head markings, is found in the Siberian including many striking and unusual ones not found in any other breed. Frequently found are the cap-like mask and spectacle markings.

Chest, Ribs and Shoulders — Chest should be deep and strong but not too broad. Ribs well arched, deep. Shoulders well developed, powerful.

Back, Loins and Quarters — Back of medium length, not too long nor cobby like the Elkhound's and strongly developed. Loins well muscled and slightly arched and should carry no excess weight of fat. Hindquarters powerful and showing good angulation.

Legs — Straight and well muscled with good bone (but never heavy bone like the Eskimo or Alaskan Malamute). Stifles well bent. Dewclaws occasionally appear on the hind legs. They are not a sign of impure breeding but, as they interfere with the dog's work, they should be removed, preferably at birth.

Feet — Oblong in shape and not so broad as the Eskimo's or Malamute's, well furred between pads which are tough and thickly cushioned; compact; neither too large nor too small. The Siberian's foot, like that of other true Arctic dogs, is a 'snowshoe foot', i.e. it is somewhat webbed between the toes, like a retriever's foot. Good feet are very important and therefore feet should always be examined in the ring. Faults — soft or splayed; feet too large or clumsy; too small or delicate.

Height — Dogs from 21 to 23½ inches (53.34 to 59.69 cm) at the shoulder; bitches from 20 to 22 inches (50.80 to 55.88 cm).

Weight — Dogs from 45 to 60 pounds (20.412 to 27.215 kg); bitches from 34 to 50 pounds (15.422 to 22.680 kg).

Disqualification — Weight over 60 pounds in a male or over 50 in a female. (Anything over these weights indicates cross-breeding) Height and weight are very important, and the upper limit in each must be rigidly maintained.

Summary — Most important and characteristic points are medium size and bone, soft coat, high set ears, freedom and ease of action, good disposition. Any clumsy, heavy or unwieldly appearance or gait should be penalized. Obvious structural faults common to all breeds are just as undesirable in a Siberian Husky as in any other breed.

Silky Toy Terrier

The Silky Toy Terrier is a lightly built, moderately low-set, toy dog of pronounced terrier character and spirited action.

Head — The head is strong, wedge-shaped, and moderately long. The skull is a trifle longer than the muzzle, in proportion about three-fifths for the skull, two-fifths for the muzzle.

Skull — Flat, and not too wide between the ears.

Stop — Shallow.

Ears — Small, V-shaped and pricked. They are set high and carried erect without any tendency to flare obliquely off the skull.

Eyes — Small, dark in colour, and piercingly keen in expression. Light eyes are a fault.

Teeth — Strong and well aligned. Scissors bite. A bite markedly undershot or overshot is a serious fault.

Nose — The nose is black.

Neck and Shoulders — The neck fits gracefully into sloping shoulders. It is medium long, fine and to some degree crested along its top line.

Body — Low-set, about one fifth longer than the dog's height at the withers. A too short body is a fault. The back line is straight, with just perceptible rounding over the loins. Brisket medium wide, and deep enough to extend down to the elbows.

Tail — The tail is set high and carried erect or semi-erect but not over gay. It is docked and well coated but devoid of plume.

Forequarters — Well laid back shoulders, together with good angulation at the upper arm, set the forelegs nicely under the body. Forelegs are strong, straight and rather fine boned.

Hindquarters — Thighs well muscled and strong, but not so developed as to appear heavy. Legs moderately angulated at stifles and hocks, with the hocks low and equidistant from the hock joints to the ground.

Feet — Small, cat-like, round, compact. Pads are thick and springy while the nails are strong and dark coloured. White or flesh-coloured nails are a fault. The feet point straight ahead, with no turning in or out. Dewclaws, if any, are removed.

Coat — Flat in texture, fine, glossy, silky; on matured specimens the desired length of coat from behind the ears to the set on of the tail is from 5 to 6 inches (12.7 to 15.24 cm). On the top of the head the hair is so profuse as to form a topknot, but long hair on face and ears objectionable. Legs from knee and hock joints to feet should be free from long hair. The hair is parted on the head and down over the back to the root of the tail.

Colour — Blue and tan. The blue may be silver blue, pigeon blue or slate blue, the tan deep and rich. The blue extends from the base of the skull to the tip of the tail, down the forelegs to the pasterns, and down the thighs to the hocks. On the tail the blue should be very dark. Tan appears on muzzle and cheeks, around the base of the ears, below the pasterns, and hocks, and around the vent. There is a tan spot over each eye. The topknot should be silver or fawn.

Temperament — The keenly alert air of the terrier is characteristic, with shyness or excessive nervousness to be faulted. The manner is quick, friendly, responsive.

Movement — Should be free, light footed, lively, and straight-forward. Hindquarters should have strong propelling power. Toeing in or out is to be faulted.

Size — Weight ranges from 8 to 10 pounds (3.63 to 4.54 kg). Shoulder height from 9 to 10 inches (22.86 to 25.4 cm). Pronounced diminutiveness (such as a height of less than 8 inches (20.32 cm) is not desired; it accentuates the quality of toyishness as opposed to the breed's definite terrier character.

General Facts

The Canadian and the American breed standards for the Silky Toy Terrier are identical.

A made-in-Australia breed that has been variously known as the Australian Silky and the Sydney Silky, it is thought that it owes its ancestry to the Australian Terrier, the Yorkshire Terrier, with possibly some Norwich and Skye Terrier blood thrown in for good measure. It is the only toy breed to originate 'down under' and prior to World War II was rarely seen outside its homeland.

The breed's most striking characteristic is its coat, which gleams when in good condition. A sparkling addition to the Toy Group, it in no way resembles the Yorkshire Terrier, as some thought it might. The breed standard has been very carefully written to keep the Silky with an identity of its own, with emphasis on its terrier characteristics. Makes an attractive, fun-loving family pet suited to any size of home accommodation.

Soft-coated Wheaten Terrier

Origin and Purpose — The Soft-coated Wheaten Terrier originated in Ireland. It was an all-purpose working farm dog used for destroying vermin, hunting small animals and guarding against intruders.

General Appearance — Medium sized, hardy, well balanced sporting terrier, covered abundantly with a soft, wavy coat of clear wheaten colour. The breed requires moderation in all points and any exaggerated features are to be shunned. The Soft-coated Wheaten Terrier should present a square outline with an overall appearance of a strong, well coordinated, happy animal.

Temperament — Good tempered, spirited and game. Affectionate and loyal. Alert and intelligent. Defensive without aggression. He does not start a fight but should always stand his ground; exhibits less aggressiveness than is sometimes encouraged in other terriers.

Size — Ideal height for males is 47 cm (18½ inches), for bitches 44.5 cm (17½ inches). Ideal weight for males is 16 to 18 kg (35 to 40 pounds), for bitches 14 to 16 kg (30 to 35 pounds).

Coat and Colour — Abundant, single coated, soft textured and wavy, showing no trace of wooliness or harshness at maturity. The hair does not shed. Colour is pale gold to warm honey. Some dark shading may be found on the ears and muzzle, but should not be present in the body coat. Latitude in coat colour must be given to dogs less than 24 months of age. For show purposes, the coat should be trimmed to present a neat outline. The head, with the exception of the fall and beard, should be trimmed to present a rectangular outline and should be in balance with the rest of the body. The ears should be relieved of fringe, but not taken down to the leather. The tail should be trimmed enough to be tidy. Overstylizing is to be penalized.

Head — Well balanced and moderately long with skull and foreface of equal length and in good proportion to the body. The skull is flat and not too wide. Cheeks are clean; moderate stop. The muzzle is square, powerful and strong, with no suggestion of snipiness. The nose is black and large for the size of the dog. Lips are tight and black. Teeth are strong and white, meeting in a scissors or level bite with scissors preferred. The eyes are dark hazel or brown, medium sized and well protected under a strong brow. Eye rims are black. Coat should fall forward over the eyes. The ears slightly forward, close to the cheeks, pointing to the ground rather than the eye. 'Rose' or 'flying' ears are objectionable.

Neck — Medium in length and set well upon the shoulders, sloping into the back.

Forequarters — The Soft-coated Wheaten Terrier should have good reach in front. The shoulders should be well laid back at a 45 degree angle with a clean, smooth appearance. The forelegs are straight when viewed from all angles and are well boned and muscled. Dewclaws should be removed. Feet are round and compact with good depth of pad. Nails are dark, pads black.

Body — The body is compact. The chest is deep but not round. The ribs are well sprung. The back is strong with relatively short coupling. The anatomical slope of the croup is ten degrees, but with muscle fill-in must appear level.

Hindquarters — The Soft-coated Wheaten Terrier requires good drive from behind, so requires a strong, well muscled rear assembly. The legs should be well developed with powerful muscles, well bent stifles, turning neither in nor out. The hocks are well let down and parallel when viewed from behind. Dewclaws on rear legs must be removed. The nails are dark.

Tail — The tail is docked so that half to two-thirds of its original length remains. It is high set, carried gaily but never over the back.

Gait — The gait is free, graceful and lively, having good reach in front and strong drive from behind, straight action fore and aft.

Faults — Coat texture deviations, any colour other than wheaten (with latitude given to young dogs), black hairs throughout the body coat, cowhocks, shuffling, crabbing, roach or slack back, poor pigment, snipey muzzle, rose or flying ears, overstylizing of the coat.

Disqualifications — Over or undershot mouth, over aggression, nose not solid black, yellow or light eyes.

General Facts

An ancient Irish breed, some authorities believe that the Soft-coated Wheaten Terrier is the progenitor of both the Kerry Blue and Irish Terriers. It was first officially recognized by the Irish Kennel Club in 1937 and in 1943 by The Kennel Club (England). Since coming to this continent in the early 1970s, the breed has attracted a considerable following and is now officially recognized on both sides of the border.

Spaniel (American Cocker) Black

Note: All varieties of American Cocker Spaniel are judged according to the same breed standard. Varieties are divided according to colour and markings.

Blacks — Colour and Markings — Blacks should be jet black, those showing shadings of brown or liver in the sheen of the coat or feathering should be penalized though not disqualified.

Skull — Well developed, rounded, no tendency towards flatness, or pronounced roundness of dome. Forehead smooth, eyebrows and stop clearly defined, median line distinctly marked, gradually disappearing until lost plus on halfway to crown. Bony eye sockets well chiseled; no fullness under eyes nor prominence in cheeks; cheeks and sides of muzzle to be smooth, clean-cut.

Muzzle and Teeth — Distance from tip of nose to stop (in line with corners of eyes) one-half distance from stop to base of skull. Muzzle broad, deep; jaws square, even; upper lip of sufficient depth to cover lower jaw to give square appearance. Teeth sound, regular, set at right angles to respective jaws; scissors bite. Nose large enough to balance muzzle and foreface, nostrils well developed, black in blacks, black and tans; in reds, buffs, livers and parti-colours and roans may be black or brown, darker colouring preferable.

Eyes — Eyeballs round, full, set in to look directly forward and give eye a slightly almond shape appearance. Eye neither weak nor goggled. Expression intelligent, alert, soft, appealing. Iris dark brown to black in blacks and black and tans; buffs and creams, and in darker shades of parti-colours and roans of lighter shades, not lighter than hazel, the darker the better.

Ears — Lobular, set on a line no higher than lower part of eye, leather fine, extending to nostrils; well clothed with long, silky, straight or wavy hair.

Neck and Shoulders — Neck long enough to allow nose to reach ground easily, muscular, free from throatiness. Should rise strongly from shoulders, arch slightly as it tapers to join head. Shoulders deep, clean cut, sloping without protrusion, so set that upper points of withers at an angle which permits wide spring of rib.

Body — Height at withers approximates length from withers to set on of tail. Chest deep, reaches to elbows, front wide enough for adequate heart and lung room yet not so wide as to interfere with forward movement of forelegs. Ribs deep, well sprung throughout. Body short in couplings and flank, depth at flank somewhat less than at last rib. Back strong, sloping evenly, slightly downward from withers to tail. Hips wide with quarters well rounded, muscular. Body appears short, compact, firmly knit, gives impression of strength.

Legs and Feet — Forelegs straight, strongly boned, muscular, set close to body, well under scapulae. Elbows well let down, turn neither in nor out. Pasterns short, strong. Hind legs strongly boned and muscled, stifles well turned, powerful, clearly defined thighs. Hocks strong, well let down, parallel when in motion and at rest. Feet compact, round firm, pads deep, strong, horny and hair between toes; turn neither in nor out.

Tail — Set on and carried on line with topline of back, when dog at work action incessant.

Coat — Flat or slightly waved, soft, dense; ears, chest, abdomen and legs well feathered.

Weight — Not under 22 pounds (9.979 kg) or over 28 pounds (12.701 kg). Weights under or in excess of these limits shall be severely penalized. Puppies exempt from minimum limitation.

General Description — Embodying the foregoing we have a serviceable looking dog with a refinedly chiseled head; standing on straight legs and well up at the shoulders; of compact body and wide muscular quarters. The Cocker Spaniel's sturdy body, powerful quarters and strong, well boned legs show him to be a dog capable of considerable speed combined with great endurance. Above all he must be free and merry, sound, well balanced throughout and in action show keen inclination to work; equable in temperament with no suggestion of timidity.

Disqualifications

Solid colours, and black and tans — White in any location other than on chest and throat.

Black and Tans — See requirements as set out.

Parti-colours — Dogs which, in the opinion of the judge are 90 percent or more one solid colour and possess limited markings of another colour on the skull, neck, toes or other locations.

There is to be no disqualification on the grounds of height.

Spaniel (American Cocker) ASCOB

Colour and Markings — Solid colours other than black should be of sound shade, but lighter coloured feathering, while not favoured, does not disqualify; a small amount of white on the chest and throat of solid colours should be penalized, but does not disqualify; white in any other location on solid colours does disqualify.

Skull — Well developed, rounded, no tendency towards flatness, or pronounced roundness of dome. Forehead smooth, eyebrows and stop clearly defined, median line distinctly marked, gradually disappearing until lost plus on halfway to crown. Bony eye sockets well chiseled; no fullness under eyes nor prominence in cheeks; cheeks and sides of muzzle to be smooth, clean-cut.

Spaniel (American Cocker) Parti-colour

Colours and Markings — At least two definite colours appearing in clearly defined markings distinctly distributed over the body are essential. Dogs which are, in the opinion of the judge, 90 percent or more one solid colour and possess limited markings of another colour on the skull, neck, toes or other locations are to be disqualified as they are neither solids nor parti-colours. Roans may follow any typical roaning shade or pattern, and are classed as parti-colours.
Skull — Well developed, rounded, no tendency towards flatness, or pronounced roundness of dome. Forehead smooth, eyebrows and stop clearly defined, median line distinctly marked, gradually disappearing until lost plus on halfway to crown. Bony eye sockets well chiseled; no fullness under eyes nor prominence in cheeks; cheeks and sides of muzzle to be smooth, clean-cut.
Muzzle and Teeth — Distance from tip of nose to stop (in line with corners of eyes) one-half distance from stop to base of skull. Muzzle broad, deep; jaws square, even; upper lip of sufficient depth to cover lower jaw to give square appearance. Teeth sound, regular, set at right angles to respective jaws; scissors bite. Nose large enough to balance muzzle and foreface, nostrils well developed, black in blacks, black and tans; in reds, buffs, livers and parti-colours and roans may be black or brown, darker colouring preferable.

Eyes — Eyeballs round, full, set in to look directly forward and give eye a slightly almond shape appearance. Eye neither weak nor goggled. Expression intelligent, alert, soft, appealing. Iris dark brown to black in blacks and black and tans; buffs and creams, and in darker shades of parti-colours and roans of lighter shades, not lighter than hazel, the darker the better.
Ears — Lobular, set on a line no higher than lower part of eye, leather fine, extending to nostrils; well clothed with long, silky, straight or wavy hair.
Neck and Shoulders — Neck long enough to allow nose to reach ground easily, muscular, free from throatiness. Should rise strongly from shoulders, arch slightly as it tapers to join head. Shoulders deep, clean cut, sloping without protrusion, so set that upper points of withers at an angle which permits wide spring of rib.
Body — Height at withers approximates length from withers to set on of tail. Chest deep, reaches to elbows, front wide enough for adequate heart and lung room yet not so wide as to interfere with forward movement of forelegs. Ribs deep, well sprung throughout. Body short in couplings and flank, depth at flank somewhat less than at last rib. Back strong, sloping evenly, slightly downward from withers to tail. Hips wide with quarters well rounded, muscular. Body appears short, compact, firmly knit, gives impression of strength.

Legs and Feet — Forelegs straight, strongly boned, muscular, set close to body, well under scapulae. Elbows well d down, turn neither in nor out. Pasterns short, strong. Hind legs strongly boned and muscled, stifles well turned, powerful, clearly defined thighs. Hocks strong, well let down, parallel when in motion and at rest. Feet compact, round firm, pads deep, strong, horny and hair between toes; turn neither in nor out.
Tail — Set on and carried on line with topline of back, when dog at work actio incessant.

Coat — Flat or slightly waved, soft, dense; ears, chest, abdomen and legs we feathered.
Weight — Not under 22 pounds (9.979 kg) or over 28 pounds (12.701 kg). Weights under or in excess of these limit shall be severely penalized. Puppies exempt from minimum limitation.
General Description — Embodying the foregoing we have a serviceable looking dog with a refinedly chiseled head; standing on straight legs and well up at the shoulders; of compact body and with muscular quarters. The Cocker Spaniel's sturdy body, powerful quarters and strong, well boned legs show him to be a dog capable of considerable speed combined with great endurance. Above all he must be free and merry, sound, we balanced throughout and in action show keen inclination to work; equable in temperament with no suggestion of timidity.
Disqualifications
Solid colours, and black and tans — White in any location other than on ches and throat.
Black and Tans — See requirements as set out.
Parti-colours — Dogs which, in the opinion of the judge are 90 percent or more one solid colour and possess limited markings of another colour on the skull, neck, toes or other locations.

There is to be no disqualification on the grounds of height.

Spaniel (American Cocker) Black / Tan

Colour and Markings — Tan markings on jet black body; markings distinct; the richer the shade of tan the better; amount of tan ten percent or less located, (1) clear spot over each eye, (2) on sides of muzzle, not to extend up, over and join, on cheeks and undersides of ears, (3) on all feet extends up toward knee and hock joint, (4) under tail, around vent. Tan on chest not essential; solid tan chest undesirable and penalized. Tan solely on stern and undersides of ears disqualifies. Black hairs and pencilling on tan markings do not penalize but brindled tan is not rich. The same penalties and disqualifications apply to white markings on the Black and Tan as apply to solid colours.

Skull — Well developed, rounded, no tendency towards flatness, or pronounced roundness of dome. Forehead smooth, eyebrows and stop clearly defined, median line distinctly marked, gradually disappearing until lost plus on halfway to crown. Bony eye sockets well chiseled; no fullness under eyes nor prominence in cheeks; cheeks and sides of muzzle to be smooth, clean-cut.

Muzzle and Teeth — Distance from tip of nose to stop (in line with corners of eyes) one-half distance from stop to base of skull. Muzzle broad, deep; jaws square, even; upper lip of sufficient depth to cover lower jaw to give square appearance. Teeth sound, regular, set at right angles to respective jaws; scissors bite. Spaniel (Brittany)

General Description — Compact, closely knit, medium size, leggy, Strong, vigorous, energetic, quick. Not too light yet never heavy boned.
Weight — 30 to 40 pounds, (13.608 to 18.144 kg).
Height — At withers 17½ to 20½ inches (44.45 to 52.07 cm).
Coat — Dense, flat or wavy, never silky; little fringe on ears; legs should not have heavy feathering.
Skin — Fine, fairly loose.
Colour — Dark orange and white, liver and white. Some ticking desirable, but not belton. Roan patterns permissible. Colour pattern piebald. Faded colours undesirable.
Skull — Medium length, rounded, slightly wedge shaped but evenly made. Not quite as wide as long, never so broad as to look coarse, or narrow as to look racy. Well defined, gently sloping stop. Median line indistinct. Occipital crest palpable only. Lateral walls well rounded.
Muzzle — Medium length, about two thirds length of skull; tapers gradually in both dimensions as it approaches nostrils. Never broad, heavy, snipey, Roman nose or dish-face.
Nose — Nostrils well open. Never shiny. Colour fawn, tan, light shades of brown or deep pink. Butterfly nose to be severely penalized.
Ears — Set high above level of eyes. Short, leafy, reach about half length of muzzle. Lie flat, close to head, tip rounded slightly; well covered with dense, short hair, little fringe.
Lips — Tight, upper overlaps lower jaw only enough to cover under lip. Lips dry; drooling to receive heavy penalty; flews to be penalized.
Teeth — Scissors bite, overshot, undershot heavily penalized.
Neck — Medium length, free from throatiness; strong but not overmuscled; well set into sloping shoulders.
Body Length — Same as height at withers. Length taken from manubrium to tip of ischium.
Withers — Shoulders not more than two thumbs' width apart at withers. Higher at withers than rump.
Shoulders — Sloping, muscular; blade and upper arm meet at 90 degree angle.
Back — Short, straight, slight slope from withers to tail; slight drop from hips to root of tail; flank three to four finger widths wide.
Chest — Deep, reaches to elbow; ribs well sprung but not so much as to hinder movement.
Flanks — Rounded, fairly full, not extremely tucked up; loins short, strong.
Hindquarters — Broad, strong, muscular; thighs powerful, stifles well bent.
Tail — Naturally tailless or not over four inches long. Natural or docked; set on high at about same level as spine.
Front legs — Perpendicular viewed from front, not set too wide, elbows and feet turn neither in nor out. From side perpendicular to pastern which is slightly bent; leg bones clean, graceful, not too fine. Heavy bone, spindly legs faulty. Ground to elbows, elbows to withers equidistant.
Hind Legs — Stifles well bent, but not so far as to throw hock joint far out behind dog. A Brittany should not be condemned for straight stifle until the judge has checked the dog in motion from the side. When at a trot, the Brittany's hind foot should step into or beyond the print left by the front foot. Stifle joint should not turn out. Thighs well feathered, but not profusely, halfway to the hock. Hocks, or back pasterns, moderately short, pointing neither in nor out; perpendicular when viewed from side. They should be firm when shaken by the judge.
Feet — Strong, proportionately smaller than other spaniels, with close fitting, well arched toes and thick pads. The Brittany is not 'up on his toes'. Toes not heavily feathered. Flat feet, splayed feet, paper feet etc. are to be heavily penalized. An ideal foot is half way between the hare and cat foot.
A Guide to the Judge — The points indicate only relative values. To be also taken into consideration are type, gait, soundness, spirit, optimum height, body length and general proportions.

Disqualifications — Any Brittany Spaniel measuring under 17½ inches (44.45 cm) or over 20½ inches (52.07 cm). Any black in the coat or a nose so dark in colour as to appear black. A tail substantially more than four inches (10.16 cm) in length.

General Facts

Although the background of the Brittany Spaniel is obscure, authorities believe that the breed is a close cousin to the Welsh Springer Spaniel. Originating in the French provinces, it was first registered on this continent in 1934.

Ch. (Can. & Am.) Frastan Harvester. A heavy boned English import. No. 1 Clumber in 1977. Puppies are typey and winning from Canada to California. A fun dog and a credit to the breed. Owners, Bill and Arline Lloyd, Beau Chien Reg., R.R. 2, Milton, Ont. L9T 2X6.

Spaniel (Clumber)

General Appearance and Size — General appearance, a long, low, heavy-looking dog, of a very thoughtful expression, betokening great intelligence. Should have the appearance of great power. Sedate in all movements, but not clumsy. Weight of dogs averaging between 55 and 65 pounds (24.947 to 29.483 kg); bitches from 35 to 50 pounds (15.876 to 22.68 kg).

Head — Large and massive in all its dimensions; round above eyes, flat on top, with a furrow running from between the eyes upon the centre. A marked stop and large occipital protuberance. Jaw long, broad and deep. Lips of upper jaw overhung. Muzzle not square but at the same time powerful looking. Nostrils large, open and flesh coloured, sometimes cherry coloured.

Eyes — Eyes large, soft, deep-set and showing haw. Hazel in colour, not too pale, with dignified and intelligent expression.

Ears — Ears long and broad at the top, turned over on the front edge; vine-shaped; close to the head; set on low and feathered only on the front edge, and there but slightly. Hair short and silky, without the slightest approach to wave or curl.

Neck and Shoulders — Neck long, thick and powerful, free from dewlap, with a large ruff. Shoulders immensely strong and muscular, giving a heavy appearance in front.

Body — Long, low and well ribbed up. The chest is wide and deep, the back long, broad and level, with very slight arch over the loin.

Legs and Feet — Forelegs short, straight and very heavy in bone, elbows close. Hind legs only slightly less heavily boned than the forelegs. They are moderately angulated, with hocks well let down. Quarters well developed and muscular. No feather above the hocks, but thick hair on the back of the legs just above the feet. Feet large, compact and well filled with hair between the toes.

Coat and Feathers — Coat silky and straight, not too long, extremely dense; feather long and abundant.

Colour and Markings — Colour, lemon and white, and orange and white. Fewer markings on body the better. Perfection of markings, solid lemon or orange ears, evenly marked head and eyes, muzzle and legs ticked.

Stern — Stern set on a level and carried low.

General Facts

Heaviest of the spaniels, the Clumber was developed in France and is said to be a cross between the Basset Hound and the now extinct Alpine Spaniel.

The breed's first promoter, the Duc de Noailles, moved his dogs to England before the start of the French Revolution, leaving them in the care of the Duke of Newcastle at Clumber Park. The Duc was killed during the Revolution but his dogs continued to be bred in England under the breed name of 'Clumber Spaniel'.

King George V was a Clumber fancier who bred and showed them from his Sandringham kennels. While some authorities doubt the authenticity of the Duc de Naoilles story, most agree that the Clumber was deliberately bred as a heavyweight spaniel, slower moving than the other spaniel breeds — so portly gentlemen could keep pace with them — and sturdy enough to work in dense undergrowth.

This is one breed which, though favoured by royalty, never achieved the heights of popularity enjoyed by other breeds with royal patronage. For example the Welsh Corgi Pembroke, the Rough Collie, Wire Fox Terrier etc. Many think this is a pity because the Clumber embodies many desirable characteristics. According to one writer the Clumber is '—most dignified and yet most docile. Most daring and yet most tractable'.

Little used as a gundog these days, the Clumber enjoys a small but enthusiastic following among pet owners and exhibitors. He is to be seen more frequently, in small numbers, at American dog events. And to a lesser degree in Canada. The Clumber makes an unusual and attractive family pet, loyal, calm and comfortable to live with. Added to the breed's many attributes is a coat that needs little in the way of special grooming care.

Spaniel (English Cocker)

General Appearance — Attractive, active, merry, sporting; body short, limbs strong, stands well up at the withers. Movements are alive with energy; his gait powerful and frictionless. He is alert at all times, the carriage of head and incessant action of tail while at work give the impression that he is bred for hunting and enjoys it. Well balanced, strongly built, full of quality; capable of top speed combined with great stamina. His head imparts an individual stamp, has that brainy appearance expressive of the highest intelligence and is in proportion to his body.

Character — His love and faithfulness to master and household, alertness and courage are characteristic. Noted for intelligence and merry disposition; a responsive and willing worker both in the field and as a companion.

Head — Skull and forehead to be well developed, arched and slightly flattened on top when viewed both from the stop to end of skull as well as from ear to ear; cleanly chiseled under eyes. Proportion desired approximately one-half for muzzle and one-half for skull. Muzzle square with definite stop; in proportion with width of skull; muzzle and jaws of sufficient strength and size to carry game; length of muzzle should provide room for development of olfactory nerve to insure good scenting qualities. Nostrils black except in reds, livers, parti-colours and roans of the lighter shades where brown is permissible, black preferred. Lips square, full, free from flews. Teeth even, set squarely. Faults — muzzle too short, snipey. Jaw overshot, undershot. Lips snipey, pendulous. Skull too flat or too rounded, cheeky, coarse. Stop insufficient or exaggerated.

Eyes — Medium size, full, slightly oval; set squarely and wide apart. Dark brown except in livers and light parti-colours where hazel permissible, but the darker the better. Expression intelligient, alert, bright, merry. Light, round or protruding eyes, conspicuous haw are faulty.

Ears — Lobular, set low and close to head; leather fine, extends at least to nose, well covered with long, silky, straight or slightly wavy hair.

Neck — Long, clean, muscular; arched towards head; set cleanly into sloping shoulders.

Body — Close coupled, compact, firmly knit, giving impression of great strength without heaviness. Brisket should reach to elbow, slopes gradually up to loin. Ribs spring gradually to middle of body, tapering to back ribs which should be of good depth, extend well back.

Shoulders and Chest — Shoulders sloping and fine; chest deep, well developed, not too wide and round to hinder action of forelegs.

Back and Loin — Back short, strong. Length from withers to tail set should approximate height from ground to withers. Height of dog at withers should be greater than height at hip joint, providing gradual slope between these points. Loin short, powerful, slightly arched.

Forelegs — Straight and strong with bone nearly equal in size from elbow to heel; elbows set close to body with free action from shoulders; pasterns short, straight and strong.

Feet — Size in proportion to legs; firm, round, catlike with thick pads, strong toes. Faults — too large, small; spreading or splayed.

Hindquarters — Hips rounded; thighs broad; well developed, muscular, giving abundance of propelling power. Stifles strong, well bent. Hock to pad moderately short, strong, well let down. Excessive angulation; lightness of bone; stifle too short; hock too long or turned in or out are faults.

Tail — Set to conform with top line of back. Merry in action. Faults — too low set, habitually carried too high; too short or long.

Colour — Various. In self colours a white shirt frill undesirable. In parti-colours, colouring must be broken on body, distributed evenly. No large portion of any one colour; should show white on saddle. A dog of any solid colour with white feet and chest is not a parti-colour. In roans it is desirable that white hair be distributed over body, the more evenly the better. Roans come in blue, liver, red, orange, lemon. In black and tans coat should be black; tan over eyes, on sides of muzzle, on throat and chest, on forelegs from knees to toes and on hind legs on inside of legs, also on stifle and extending from hock to toes. White feet undesirable in any self colour.

Coat — Short and fine on head; on body flat, slightly wavy, silky. Medium length with enough undercoat for protection. Well feathered but not so profuse as to hide true lines or interfere with field work.

Height — Males 16 to 17 inches; females 15 to 16 inches; deviations severely penalized but not disqualified. Weight — Males 28 to 34 pounds; females 26 to 32 pounds — most desirable.

Ch. Immigrants Quiller Yukon. Owner handled to No. 2 Springer in Canada with 50 Bests of Breed, 30 group or group placings, a specialty winner and a Best in Show. Owners, Kivor and Diana Notton, Immigrant Reg., R.R. 1, Orono, Ont. L0B 1M0.

Spaniel (English Springer)

General Appearance and Type — Medium size, compact, docked tail; coat moderately long, glossy, usually liver and white or black and white; legs feathered, also ears, chest, brisket. Ears pendulous, expression soft, sturdy build, carriage proud, body deep, legs strong, back short, level; thighs well developed, good shoulders, feet.

Temperament — Eager to please, poised, attentive.

Size and Proportion — Ideal height for dogs 20 inches; bitches 19 inches. Topline equal to height, never longer. Dog in good condition weighs 49 to 54 pounds.

Colour and Coat — Liver or black with white markings; liver and white (or black and white) with tan markings; blue or liver roan; or predominantly white with tan, black or liver markings. Ears, chest, legs, belly nicely furnished; head, forelegs, below hocks on front of hind legs hair short, fine. Body coat flat or wavy, medium length, waterproof, weather and thorn proof. Texture fine, hair clean, glossy, trim to tidy and give smart appearance allowed.

Head — Impressive, not heavy; strong, refined, in proportion to body, approximately same length as neck; skull medium, fairly broad, flat on top slightly rounded at side and back; occiput rounded. Foreface same length as skull; muzzle about half width of skull; stop moderate. In profile planes parallel. Jaws long enough to allow dog to carry game easily; square, lean, strong, even. Upper lip comes down full, square, cover line of lower jaw, lips not to be pendulous. Nostrils well open, broad, liver or black depending on colour of coat; cheeks flat, nicely chiseled under eyes. Teeth strong, clean, scissors bite.

Eyes — Set well apart, fairly deep; colour of iris harmonizes with coat colour; expression alert, kindly, trusting. Lids tight, no haw showing.

Ears — Level with line of eye on side of skull, not too far back; flaps long, fairly wide, hang close to cheeks; leather thin, reaches tip of nose.

Neck — Moderately long, muscular, arched, blends into shoulders.

Body — Well coupled, strong, compact; chest deep, width not to interfere with front action; brisket to level of elbows; ribs fairly long, spring to mid-body then taper; back straight, strong; loins strong, short; slight arch over loins and hips; hips nicely rounded, blend smoothly into hind legs; topline slopes gently withers to tail; tail follows natural line of body. Moderate up-curve at flank but not enough so dog appears small waisted or 'tucked up'.

Tail — Tail bespeaks Springer's temperament and conformation. Merry action; set somewhat low following natural line of croup. Carriage to be nearly horizontal, slightly elevated when dog excited; not docked too short, should be well fringed; permissible to shape feathering.

Forequarters — Shoulder blades slope back to form 90 degree angle with forearm; shoulders lie flat, mold smoothly into contour of body; forelegs straight with same degree of size to foot. Bone strong, slightly flattened, knee straight, almost flat; pasterns short, strong; elbows close to body, free action from the shoulders.

Hindquarters — Hip joints set rather wide, hips nicely rounded; thighs broad, muscular; stifle joint strong, moderately bent; hock joint somewhat rounded, not small and sharp in contour, moderately angulated. Leg hock joint to foot pad, short, strong; viewed from rear hocks parallel whether dog standing or in motion.

Feet — Round or slightly oval, compact, well arched, medium size, pads thick, well feathered between toes. Excess hair removed to show natural shape.

Movement — Good movement depends on balanced front and rear assemblies; they must match in angulation and muscular development for smooth, effortless gait. Properly laid back shoulders just as important as excellent rear quarters that provide driving power. Viewed from the front legs should appear to swing forward in a free, easy manner with no tendency for feet to cross or interfere with each other; from rear hocks drive well under body following on a line with forelegs, rear legs parallel, neither too wide nor too close. From side dog should show good long forward stride, no high stepping or wasted motion.

In judging the Springer, the overall picture is a primary consideration. Judge should look for type which includes general appearance, outline and temperament and also for soundness as seen when the dog is in motion. Because the dog with the smooth easy gait must be reasonably sound and well balanced he is to be highly regarded but not to the extent of forgiving him for lacking Springer type. A quite untypical dog, leggy, foreign in head and expression, may move well but he should not be placed over a good all round specimen that has a minor fault in movement. The English Springer Spaniel is first and foremost a sporting dog of the spaniel family and he must look and behave and move in character.

Spaniel (Irish Water)

Head — Skull rather large and high in dome with prominent occiput; muzzle square and rather long with deep mouth opening and lips fine in texture. Teeth strong and level. Nose large with open nostrils and liver in colour. Head should be cleanly chiseled, not cheeky, and should not present a short, wedge-shaped appearance. Hair on face should be short and smooth.

Topknot — A characteristic of the true breed, should consist of long, loose curls growing down into a well-defined peak between the eyes and should not be in the form of a wig, i.e. growing straight across.

Eyes — Medium in size and set almost flush, without eyebrows. Colour of eyes hazel, preferably of dark shade. Expression of the eyes should be keenly alert, intelligent, direct and quizzical.

Ears — Long, lobular, set low with leathers reaching to about the end of the nose when extended forward. The ears should be abundantly covered with curls becoming longer toward the tips and extending two or more inches below the ends of the leathers.

Neck — Long, arching, strong and muscular, smoothly set into sloping shoulders.

Shoulders and Chest — Shoulders should be sloping and clean; chest deep but not too wide between the legs. The entire front should give the impression of strength without heaviness.

Body, Ribs and Loins — Body should be of medium length, with ribs well sprung, pear-shaped at the brisket, and rounder toward the hindquarters. Ribs should be carried well back. Loins should be short, wide and muscular. The body should not present a tucked-up appearance.

Hindquarters — As high as or a trifle higher than the shoulders and should be very powerful and muscular with well developed upper and second thighs. Hips should be wide; stifles should not be too straight; and hocks low set and moderately bent. Tail should be set low enough to give a rather rounded appearance to the hindquarters and should be carried nearly level with the back. Sound hindquarters are of great importance to provide swimming power and drive.

Forelegs and Feet — Forelegs medium in length, well boned, straight and muscular with elbows close set. Both fore and hind feet should be large, thick and somewhat spreading, well clothed with hair both over and between the toes, but free from superfluous feather.

Tail — The so-called 'rat tail' is a striking characteristic of the breed. At the root it is thick and covered for two to three inches with short curls. It tapers to a fine point at the end, and from the root-curls, is covered with short, smooth hair so as to look as if the tail had been clipped. The tail should not be long enough to reach the hock joint.

Coat — Proper coat is of vital importance. The neck, back and sides should be densely covered with tight, crisp ringlets entirely free from wooliness. Underneath the ribs the hair should be longer. The hair on lower throat should be short. The forelegs should be covered all around with abundant hair falling in curls or waves, but shorter in front than behind. The hind legs should also be abundantly covered by hair falling in curls or waves, but the hair should be short on the front of the legs below the hocks.

Colour — Solid liver; white on chest objectionable.

Height and weight — Dogs 22 to 24 inches (55.88 to 60.96 cm); bitches 21 to 23 inches (53.34 to 58.42 cm). Dogs 55 to 65 pounds (24.947 to 29.483 kg); bitches 45 to 58 pounds (20.412 to 26.308 kg).

General Appearance — That of a smart, upstanding, strongly built but not leggy dog, combining great intelligence and the rugged endurance with a bold, dashing eagerness of temperament.

Gait — Should be square, true, precise and not slurring.

Ch. Bankdams Taffy Bark. Taffy is the first Welsh Springer to gain his championship in western Canada. He was No. 1 Welsh Springer Spaniel in Canada in 1977 (W.S.S.C.C.). Owners, Mr. and Mrs. G. Wilkinson, Bankdam Reg., R.R. 2, Tofield, Alta. T0B 4J0.

Spaniel (Welsh Springer)

proposed new standard

General Appearance — A symmetrical, compact, strong, merry, very active dog; not stilty, obviously built for endurance and activity.

Size — A dog not to exceed 19 inches in height at the shoulder and a bitch 18 inches. Weight should be 35½ pounds.

Coat and Colour — Straight or flat and thick, of a silky texture, never wiry nor wavy. A curly coat is most objectionable. Rich red and white only.

Head — A short, chubby head is objectionable.

Skull — Proportionate, of moderate length, slightly domed, clearly defined stop, well chiselled below the eyes.

Muzzle — Medium length, straight, fairly square; the nostrils well developed, and either flesh coloured, liver or black acceptable.

Jaw — Strong, neither undershot nor overshot.

Eyes — Hazel, or dark, medium size, not prominent, nor sunken, nor showing haw.

Ears — Set moderately low and hanging close to the cheeks, comparatively small and gradually narrowing towards the tip, covered with nice setter-like feathering. While the length of feathering on the ears is of little consequence, the leather must be small.

Neck — Long and muscular, clean in throat, neatly set into long and sloping shoulders.

Forelegs — Medium length, straight, well-boned, moderately feathered.

Body — Not long; strong and muscular with deep brisket, well-sprung ribs; length of body should be proportionate to length of leg and very well balanced; with muscular loin slightly arched and well coupled up.

Hindquarters — Strong and muscular, wide and fully developed with thick and muscular second thighs.

Hind Legs — Hocks well let down; stifles moderately bent (neither twisted in nor out), moderately feathered.

Feet — Round with thick pads, firm and cat-like, not too large or spreading.

Tail — Well set on and low, never carried above the level of the back, lightly feathered and with lively action.

Faults — Coarse skull, light bone, curly coat, loaded or poorly-angulated shoulders, stilted movement.

Disqualifications — Dogs over 19 inches, bitches over 18 inches.

General Facts

A working spaniel of ancient lineage this breed is also known as a 'Starter' in his native Wales. In order of size the Welsh Springer comes between the Cocker and the English Springer. His coat is a distinctive feature, always being rich red and pearly white. It is said to be 'self-cleaning'. That is because it is quite oily and caked-on mud falls out leaving no trace as the dog dries.

Welsh Springers are seldom seen at Canadian shows but there does seem to be increasing interest in the breed south of the border. The breed is reputed to be robust and hardy, living to a ripe old age. An excellent gun-dog, Welsh Springers are easy to train but the experts advise beginning field and obedience training at an early age in order to overcome the breed's tendency to be a lone hunter.

The proposed new standard contains two significant changes. First is the 'Height Disqualification'. The Welsh Springer Spaniel standard currently in use in Canada makes no mention at all of desirable height or weight while those in effect in Great Britain and the United States give approximate heights at 19 inches for males, 18 inches for females. These are approximate heights only and a dog or bitch measuring over these would not be disqualified from competition.

The other significant difference in the proposed Canadian breed standard is the inclusion of 'black' as an approved nose colour. Both the American and British breed standards call for a 'dark coloured' nose while flesh coloured is also allowed.

As a gundog, the Welsh Springer Spaniel is a keen worker who enjoys the field. But the breed is said to work equally well in water. These attributes seem to point to a strong relationship to the Brittany Spaniel and researchers believe that the two breeds did share similar ancestry.

Tibetan Terrier

General Appearance — A profusely coated dog of sturdy build, square in proportion with the tail curled over the back. The facial hair covers the eyes and muzzle, providing protection from the elements. The large round feet, with no discernible arch, produce a showshoe effect while providing traction for traversing and climbing in extreme terrain.

Temperament — Reserved without evidence of shyness or viciousness, but capable of acquitting himself adequately when the situation demands.

Size — Height 14 to 16 inches (35.46 to 40.64 cm); weight 18 to 30 pounds (8.165 to 13.608 kg). The weight must be proportionate to the height, maintaining a sturdy, compact build.

Coat and Colour — Double coated. Undercoat fine wool. Topcoat profuse, fine, but not silky or woolly, long, either straight or waved. Any colour or colours including white.

Head — (a) Skull of medium length and width, not coarse, slightly domed, narrowing slightly from ear to eye, there shall be a distinct but not exaggerated stop. The cheekbones curved but not over-developed so as to bulge. Length from eye to tip of nose should be equal to that from eye to the occiput. (b) Muzzle. The jaws between the canines should form a distinct curve. The lower jaw should carry a small but not over-exaggerated amount of beard. The head should be well furnished with long hair falling forward over the eyes. (c) Nose. 'Black' — any other colour to be DISQUALIFIED. (d) Mouth. Level bite preferred, overshot more than 1.6 mm or undershot by more than 3.175 mm, or wry mouth to be severely penalized. (e) Eyes. Large, dark, neither prominent nor sunken; should be set fairly wide apart. Eyelids dark. (f) Ears. Pendant, not too close to the head, v-shaped, not too large; heavily feathered.

Neck — Neck is well set on shoulders, slightly arched, carried erect.

Forequarters — Shoulders sloping, strongly muscled, flat and well laid back. Forelegs should be straight when viewed from front or side. In motion, elbows should move close to the body and parallel to line of travel. Pasterns are short and slightly sloping. Feet should turn neither in nor out and must be large, round and heavily furnished with hair between toes and pads. Dog should stand well down on his pads, the foot has no arch.

Body — Compact and powerful, length from point of shoulder to root of tail equal to height at withers. Well ribbed up. Loin slightly arched.

Hindquarters — Strongly muscled, in balance with forequarters. Thighs broad with well-bent stifles. Hocks well let down, turning neither in nor out. Both front and hind feet are structurally the same.

Tail — Medium in length, set on fairly high and carried in a gay curl over the back. Very well feathered. There is often a kink near the tip.

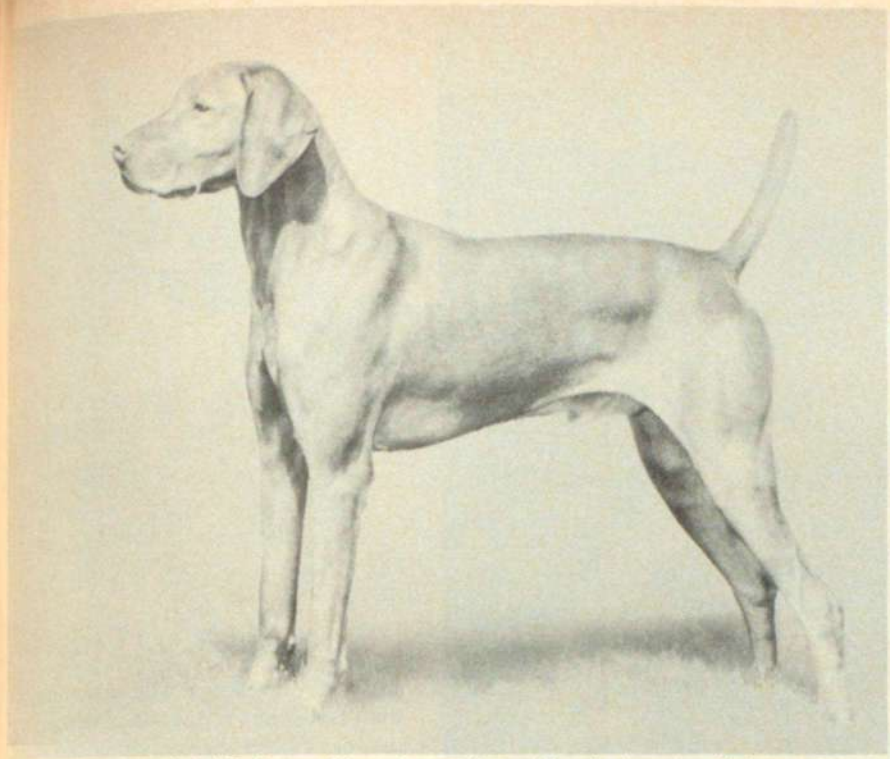
Gait — When in motion, legs and feet should move parallel to the line of travel with hind legs tracking the fore. A dog with correct foot moves with elasticity and drive, indicating great agility and endurance.

Faults — Poor coat; mouth overshot by more than 1.6 mm or undershot more than 6.35 mm; weak, snipey foreface; wry mouth.

Disqualification — Nose any other colour than black.

General Facts

An ancient breed said to have originated in the Lost Valley in Tibet and known as 'the Holy Dog'. The breed bears many similarities to the Puli and it is thought that visitors to Tibet may have stolen some of these dogs (for they were never sold but kept as companions in the monasteries) and taken them to Hungary where they founded the Hungarian working breed. Tibetan Terriers make delightful house pets and excellent watchdogs.



Ch. (Can. & Am.) Napkeltei Talizman. Many times a Best of Breed winner, multiple group placements in Canada and the eastern U.S. Scion of a long line of distinguished Vizslas. Owner, Dr. P. A. Wright, Napkelte Reg., R.R. 3, Clair Rd. E., Guelph, Ont. N1H 6H9.

Vizsla

A Hungarian sporting dog also known as the 'Yellow Pointer'. An all-purpose gundog with excellent scenting and retrieving characteristics; a strong swimmer, also retrieves well from water.

General Appearance — A short-haired, medium sized sporting dog; conveys the impression of an alert, muscular, well balanced animal, aristocratic.

Temperament — Intelligent, calm, obedient, easy to train. Sensitive, strong protective instinct, not overly aggressive. An eager happy hunter, at home on land or in water.

Size — Measured at the withers males are 23 inches, females 22 inches (58.42 and 55.88 cm). A dog of good bone and substance in this size range weighs 50 to 65 pounds (22.680 to 29.483 kg), a bitch about ten pounds less. Length to height ratio should be approximately 1:1.

Coat and Colour — Hair short, dense, lying close to skin. Each hair thick and elastic. Coat should have glossy sheen. Correct colour is a golden rust (the golden colour of a crust of bread). In some strains slightly lighter or darker shades may predominate. A white mark on chest under two inches diameter, permissible, not desirable.

Head — Skull lean and muscular with median line down forehead. Top line of skull straight. Skull narrow in relation to width, male slightly wider. Occiput slightly visible. Stop slight and sloping rather than abrupt. Muzzle approximately same length as skull; narrow, ends squarely with clean, straight lines. Jaws strong, well developed, bite scissors or even. Lips smooth, well developed, cover teeth tightly. Lips extend in level line 3/4 length of muzzle. Eyes almond shaped, bright, intelligent. Colour in harmony or darker than coat colour; moderately deep set; eyelids close neatly. Nictitating membrane not overly exposed. Ears thin, silky, moderately tapered with rounded ends. Just meet under jaw or reach to corner of mouth but should not extend as far as the canines; set about ½ inch below level of skull, hang close to cheeks.

Neck — Medium length in proportion to body. Well muscled with definite arch at nape, widens to blend smoothly into forequarters, skin smooth and tight.

Forequarters — Shoulder blades of medium length held tightly in place, meet humerus at 90 degree angle. Musculature firm, smooth, clearly defined. Upper-arm — bone heavy, smooth, well muscled; skin firm, pliable, smooth; equal in length to scapula. Lower-arm — strong, big bones with good muscles. Straight viewed from front or side. Angle of elbow joint approximately 135 degrees. Angle formed by pastern and lower leg nearly straight about 175 to 180 degrees. Paws catlike, toes tightly closed, big rough pads. Feet webbed. Nails short, firm, well curved, colour similar to that of eyes, nose and coat. Dew claws should be removed.

Body — Topline broad, smooth, slightly arched over loin and croup to base of tail; slight depression at juncture of withers and back. Chest deep, reaching down to elbows, moderately broad; oval, well sprung ribs, narrowing between elbows for free leg movement. Width between forelegs at least six inches for male, five inches for bitch (15.24 and 12.70 cm). Loin broad, strong and well muscled. Croup heavily muscled, smoothly rounded to base of tail. Abdomen trim, neat, moderate tuck-up.

Hindquarters — Pelvic bones wide and strong, musculature well developed. Upper thigh heavy, straight, round, smooth; muscle attachments powerful, broad, evenly distributed; 90 degree angle at hip joint. Lower thigh well muscled; longer than femur; angle at stifle joint 110 to 120 degrees. Angle at hocks 125 to 130 degrees. Paws same as front.

Tail — In motion it is carried outstretched at or above the horizontal. A portion is docked, approximately ⅓ so that tip is level with juncture of upper and lower thigh. Thicker at base than tip.

Gait — From front, legs swing forward in free manner, no tendency for feet to cross over or swing wide. From rear, gait is true-tracking. Topline level when dog in motion while head is carried high and tail 'flags' constantly at proper level.

Faults — Very nervous dogs to be heavily penalized; very dark or very light colour coat; hare feet; light yellow, green, blue or 'Pop' eyes; throatiness; dogs ten pounds (4.536 kg) over or under standard weight; dew claws; roached, hollow or camel backs; too steep a croup; undershot or overshot bites.

Disqualifications — (a) A dog two or more inches (5.08 cm) over or under the standard height, (b) White markings over two inches (5.08 cm) on chest or white anywhere other than chest.

'A Display Champion' of record. The same breeding produced the only field trial champion Weimaraner for pointing breeds in Canada, 1978. Owner, Mrs. Hilda Pugh, Display Reg., 135 Macpherson Ave., Toronto, Ont. M5R 1W9.

Weimaraner

General Appearance — A medium-sized grey dog with light eyes, he should present a picture of great driving power, stamina, alertness and balance. Above all, the dog should indicate ability to work hard in the field.

Height — Height at withers: dogs 25 to 27 inches (63.50 to 68.58 cm); bitches 23 to 25 inches (58.42 to 63.50 cm).

Head — Moderately long and aristocratic, with moderate stop and slight median line extending back over the forehead. Rather prominent occipital bone and trumpets set well back, beginning at the back of the eyesockets. Measurement from tip of nose to stop to equal that from stop to occipital bone. The flews should be moderately deep, enclosing a powerful jaw. Foreface perfectly straight, delicate at the nostrils. Skin tightly drawn. Neck clean-cut and moderately long. Expression kind, keen, intelligent.

Ears — Long and lobular, slightly folded and set high. The ear when drawn snugly alongside the jaw should end approximately two inches (5.08 cm) from the point of the nose.

Eyes — In shades of light amber, grey or blue-grey, set well enough apart to indicate good disposition and intelligence. When dilated under excitement the eyes may appear almost black.

Teeth — Well set, strong and even; well developed and proportionate to jaw with correct scissors bite, the upper teeth protruding slightly over the lower teeth but not more than 1.6 mm. Complete dentition is greatly to be desired.

Nose — Grey.

Lips and Gums — Pinkish flesh shades.

Body — The back should be moderate in length, set in straight line, strong and should slope slightly from the withers. The chest should be well developed and deep, shoulder well laid on and snug. Ribs well sprung and long. Abdomen firmly held; moderately tucked-up flank. The brisket should drop to the elbow.

Coat — Short, smooth and sleek in shades of mouse-grey to silver-grey, usually blending to a lighter shade on the head and ears. Small white mark allowable on the chest, but not on any other part of the body. White spots that have resulted from injuries shall not be penalized.

Legs — Forelegs straight and strong, with the measurement from the elbow to the ground approximately equaling the distance from the elbow to the top of the withers.

Hindquarters — Well-angulated stifles and straight hocks. Musculation well developed.

Feet — Firm and compact, webbed, toes well arched, pads closed and thick, nails short and grey or amber in colour.

Dewclaws — Allowable only on forelegs, there optional.

Tail — Docked. At maturity it should measure approximately six inches (15.24 cm) with a tendency to be light rather than heavy and should be carried in a manner expressing confidence and sound temperament.

Gait — The walk is rather awkward. The trot should be effortless, ground covering and should indicate smooth coordination. When seen from the rear, the hind feet should parallel the front feet. When viewed from the side, the top line should remain strong and level.

Temperament — The dog should display a temperament that is keen, fearless, friendly, protective and obedient.

Very Serious Faults — Any long-haired coat or coat darker than mouse-grey to silver-grey is considered a most undesirable recessive trait. White, other than a spot on chest. Eyes any other colour than grey, blue-grey or light amber. Black, mottled mouth. Non-docked tail, Cryptorchidism. Dogs exhibiting strong fear. Viciousness.

Serious Faults — Poor gait. Very poor feet. Cowhocks. Faulty backs, either roached or sway. Badly overshot or undershot jaw. Monorchidism. Snipey muzzle. Short ears. Yellow in white marking. Undersize.

Faults — Doggy bitches. Bitchy dogs. Improper muscular condition. Badly affected teeth. More than four missing teeth. Back too long or too short. Faulty coat. Neck too short, thick or throaty. Low tail set. Elbows in or out; feet east and west.

Minor Faults — Tail too short or too long. Pink nose. Oversize should not be considered a serious fault, providing correct structure and working ability are in evidence.

General Facts

Thought to have resulted from crossing several breeds of hounds and pointers, the Weimaraner became a distinct breed by 1810. Grand Duke Karl August of Weimar is credited with this German breed's early development.

Welsh Corgi (Pembroke)

General Appearance — Low set, strong, sturdily built, alert and active, giving an impression of substance and stamina in a small space; outlook bold, expression intelligent and workmanlike. The movement should be free and active, elbows fitting closely to the sides, neither loose nor tied. Forelegs should move well forward, without too much lift, in unison with thrusting action of hind legs.
Head and Skull — Head to be foxy in shape and appearance, with alert and intelligent expression, skull to be fairly wide and flat between the ears; moderate amount of stop. Length of foreface to be in proportion to the skull as three is to five. Muzzle slightly tapering. Nose black Eyes — Well set, medium size, hazel in colour and blending with colour of coat.
Ears — Pricked, medium sized, slightly pointed. A line drawn from the tip of the nose through the eyes should, if extended, pass through, or close to, the tip of the ear.
Mouth — Teeth level, or with the inner side of the upper front teeth resting closely on the front of the under ones.
Neck — Fairly long.
Forequarters — Legs short and as straight as possible. 'Straight as possible' means straight as soundness and deep broad chest will permit. It does not mean terrier-straight. Ample bone carried right down to the feet. Elbows should fit closely to the sides, neither loose nor tied. Forearm should curve slightly round the chest.
Body — Of medium length, with well-sprung ribs. Not short-coupled or terrierlike. Level top line. Chest broad and deep, well let down between the forelegs.
Hindquarters — Strong and flexible, slightly tapering. Legs short. Ample bone carried right down to the feet. Hocks straight when viewed from behind.
Feet — Oval, the two centre toes slightly in advance of two outer toes, pads strong and well arched. Nails short.
Tail — Short, preferably natural.
Coat — Of medium length and dense; not wiry.
Colour — Self colours in red, sable, fawn, black and tan, or with white markings on legs, chest and neck. Some white on head and foreface is permissible.
Weight and Size — Dogs 20 to 24 pounds (9.072 to 10.886 kg); bitches 18 to 22 pounds (8.165 to 9.979 kg). Height from 10 to 12 inches (25.40 to 30.48 cm) at shoulder.

General Facts

Whenever royal patronage is given to a breed it can look forward to immense popularity. This was the case with the Pembroke Welsh Corgi. In 1936, King George VI bought his daughters their first Corgi and the breed was suddenly in the limelight. Royalists around the world followed the king's example and Corgis became, and still are, a favourite household pet.

The two breeds of Corgi, the Pembrokeshire and the Cardiganshire, are very similar except for the tail. The Pembroke's tail is docked as short as possible. Some, in fact, being born tailless. While the Cardigan's tail is left natural. Both breeds were developed in Wales where the low-slung cattle drovers have been known since the 12th century. They are said to be descended, at least partly, from the Spitz family and there are a number of breed characteristics to support this. It is said that puppies bred from generations of kennel-raised dogs still retain their cattle driving instinct.

Corgis are strong and sturdy looking little dogs, giving the impression of a rugged dog in a small compass. They make excellent house pets, ideal for small city quarters. They are easily trained and take well to obedience work. Their exercise needs are well attended to by a daily walk. But, true to their nature, a run in the country always pleases.

Although both breeds of Corgi are much alike, the Cardigan is slightly higher on leg, a bit more pointed in muzzle than the Pembroke and, of course, has a tail. The Pembroke is much better known and far more popular than his close relative. Both have the advantage of requiring little in the way of grooming attention except for standard hygienic care. Both, too, have retained their strong driving instinct.

Welsh Terrier

Head — The skull should be flat, rather wider between the ears than the Wire-haired Fox Terrier. Jaw should be powerful, clean-cut, rather deeper and more punishing — giving the head a more masculine appearance than that usually seen on a Fox Terrier. Stop not too defined, fair length from stop to end of nose, the latter being of a black colour.
Ears — The ear should be V-shaped, small, not too thin, set on fairly high, carried forward and close to the cheek.
Eyes — The eye should be small, not being too deeply set in or protruding out of skull, of a dark hazel colour, expressive and indicating abundant pluck.
Neck — The neck should be of moderate length and thickness, slightly arched and sloping gracefully into the shoulders.
Body — The back should be short, and well-ribbed up, the loin strong, good depth and moderate width of chest. The shoulders should be long, sloping, and well set back. The hindquarters should be strong, thighs muscular and of good length, with the hocks moderately straight, well let down, and fair amount of bone. The stern should be set on moderately high, but not too gaily carried.
Legs and Feet — The legs should be straight and muscular, possessing fair amount of bone, with upright and powerful pasterns. The feet should be small, round and catlike.
Coat — The coat should be wiry, hard, very close and abundant.
Colour — The colour should be black and tan, or black grizzle and tan, free from black penciling on toes.
Size — The height at shoulder should be 15 inches (38.10 cm) for dogs, bitches proportionately less; 20 pounds (9.07 kg) shall be considered a fair average weight in working condition, but this may vary one pound (.454 kg) or so either way.
Disqualifications — (1) Nose: white, cherry or spotted to a considerable extent with either of these colours. (2) Ears: prick, tulip or rose. (3) Undershot jaw or pig-jawed mouth. (4) Black below hocks or white to an appreciable extent.

General Facts

Historians generally agree that the Welsh Terrier is descended from the Old English Black and Tan Terrier. Some of England's earliest sporting prints portray couples of rough coated black and tan terriers, similar to the modern Welsh Terrier.

It is said that as far back as 1737 considerable in-breeding took place in order to preserve the purity of the breed, a practice which, no doubt, established the strong Welsh character of today. The first show at which separate classes were held for Welsh Terriers was held at Caernarfon, Wales, in 1885. Then, as the popularity of the breed grew, classes were put on throughout the British Isles. In 1886, the English Kennel Club sanctioned the Welsh Terrier breed standard and basically this same standard is in use today. In Britain, a slightly larger dog is permitted — 15½ inches at the shoulders and weighing 20 to 21 pounds.

The first two specimens of the breed came to America in 1885. Both were imported and shown by Mr. Prescott Lawrence. The Welsh were first shown in separate classes in 1888 and in 1903 the first Welsh Terrier champion was recorded in the American Kennel Club stud book.

In Canada, the breed was first shown at a Toronto dog show in 1903 held in conjunction with Canada's Industrial Exhibition. These were British bred Welsh Terriers imported from 'Glansevin' kennels by Miss Beardmore of Torrington Farm, Toronto.

The breed has been spared the horrors of overpopularity but it continues to attract a loyal following of supporters. An alert breed of small stature, he makes an excellent choice for a city pet. The harsh, rough coat does need particular attention to keep it looking trim and regular exercise helps to maintain him in good spirits and hard flesh. Although he is popularly compared to a 'miniature Airedale', because of his similar colouration, the Welshman is very much his own breed. He is spunky, loyal and an excellent watchdog. It is said that the breed still retains much of its hunting instinct and that with very little training he could be used as a gundog. He does take well to obedience work and is a smart performer in the obedience trial ring. Quite able to take care of himself, the Welsh Terrier, it is said, does not go looking for trouble but, if the need arises, can give as good as he gets. Hardy, long-lived and fun to be with. The person who wrote 'Put some fun in your life, match wits with a terrier' could have been writing about the Welsh.

West Highland White Terrier

Origin and Purpose — Developed in Scotland to be a hunter of fox and otter, the 'Westie' was purposely selective-bred pure white in order that the dog could be readily distinguished from his quarry.
General Appearance — Small, game, well-balanced, hardy looking terrier full of self-esteem and showmanship. Strong, deep chested, active, neatly presented.
Temperament — Alert, gay, courageous, self-reliant and friendly.
Faults — Excess timidity or pugnacity.
Size — Dogs at withers measure 11 inches (27.94 cm), bitches one inch less (2.54 cm).
Faults — One inch over or under height very objectionable.
Coat and Colour — Very important, seldom seen to perfection. Double coated; outer of straight, hard hair at least two inches (5.08 cm) long on body of mature dogs with proper blending of the shorter coat on neck and shoulders. Silkiness, tendency to curl, open or single coats are serious faults. Coat must be white; nose black; black pigmentation most desirable on lips, eye rims, pads of feet, nails and skin. Coat any colour other than white; nose other than black are serious faults.
Skull — Fairly broad, in proportion to powerful jaw, not too long, slightly domed, gradually tapers to eyes. Stop defined; eyebrows heavy. Too long or too narrow skull are faults.
Muzzle — Slightly shorter than skull, powerful, gradually tapers to nose which should be large. Jaws level, powerful, teeth set well, large for size of dog. Six incisors between canines of both jaws. Scissors bite or level mouth. Muzzle longer than skull; teeth much undershot; defective or missing are serious faults.
Eyes — Wide-set, medium, dark, slightly sunk in head, sharp, intelligent. Too small, full or light-coloured eyes are very objectionable.
Ears — Small, carried tightly erect, set wide and ending in sharp point; never cropped. Hair on ears short, smooth, velvety. Ears free of fringe at the tips. Round-pointed, drop, broad and large ears very objectionable, as are mule ears, ears set too close or not held tightly erect.
Neck — Of sufficient length to allow proper set-on of head, muscular, gradually thickening towards base, merges nicely into sloping shoulders. Necks short or too long are faulty.
Forequarters — Forelegs muscular, relatively short, but long enough to set dog up, not too close to ground. Height from withers to ground approximately equal to length from withers to set-on of tail; height elbow to withers and elbow to ground should be approximately equal. Shoulders well laid back, well knit at backbone. Chest relatively broad, front legs spaced apart accordingly. Front legs set in under shoulder blades with definite body overhang before them; should be reasonably straight, covered with short, hard hair. Forefeet larger than hind ones, round proportionate in size, strong; thickly padded, covered with short, hard hair; may turn out slightly.
Faults — Steep shoulders, loaded shoulders, out at elbows; too light bone. Fiddlefront a serious fault.
Chest and Body — Chest very deep extending at least to elbows with breadth in proportion to size of dog. Body compact, of good substance, level back, ribs deep, well-arched in upper half of rib, presenting a flattish side appearance; loins broad, strong; hindquarters strong, muscular and wide across the top. Shallow chest, long or weak back, barrel ribs, high rump faulty.
Hindquarters — Muscular, hind legs relatively short, sinewy; thighs very muscular, well angulated, not set wide apart; hocks well bent, parallel viewed from rear. Hind feet smaller than forefeet, thickly padded. Too light bone, cowhocks, weak hocks, lack of angulation are faults.
Tail — Relatively short, when standing erect should be approximately level with top of skull; covered with hard hairs, no feather, as straight as possible, carried gaily but not curled over back. Tail should be set on high enough so that the spine does not slope down to it. Tail must never be docked. Tail set too low; tail too long or carried at half mast or over back are faults.
Movement — Free, straight and easy all around. Front legs should be freely extended forward by shoulder. Hind action free, strong and fairly close. Hocks freely flexed and drawn close under body so that when moving off the foot the body is thrown or pushed forward with some force. Stiff, stilted or too wide movement behind; lack of reach in front and/or drive behind are faults.
Attention of Judges — A West Highland White Terrier must not be judged or trimmed as a Scottish Terrier. This is a distinct breed differing in head, body, hindquarters, movement and general overall type. Any faking such as blackening the nose or bleaching the coat should disqualify the dog.

Ch. (Can. & Am.) Dondelayo Buccaneer. Canada's top winning Whippet of all time. Twenty-nine times Best in Show. Sire of over 80 champions. Breeder, Anne Knight. Owner, Max Magder, Lorricbrook Reg. 5043 Guelph Line, R.R. 2, Milton, Ont. L9T 2X6.

Whippet

General Appearance — The Whippet should be a dog of moderate size, very alert, that can cover a maximum of distance with a minimum of lost motion, a true sporting hound. Should be put down in hard condition but with no suggestion of being muscle-bound.

Head — Long and lean, fairly wide between the ears, scarcely perceptible stop, good length of muzzle which should be powerful without being coarse. Nose entirely black.

Ears — Small, fine in texture, thrown back and folded. Semipricked when at attention. Gay ears are incorrect and should be severely penalized.

Eyes — Large, intelligent, round in shape and dark hazel in colour, must be at least as dark as the coat colour. Expression should be keen and alert. Light yellow or oblique eyes should be strictly penalized. A sulky expression and lack of alertness to be considered most undesirable.

Teeth — White, strong and even. Teeth of upper jaw should fit closely over the lower. An undershot mouth shall disqualify.

Neck — Long and muscular, well-arched and with no suggestion of throatiness, widening gradually into the shoulders. Must not have any tendency to an 'ewe' neck.

Shoulders — Long, well-laid back with long, flat muscles. Loaded shoulders are a very serious fault.

Brisket — Very deep and strong, reaching as nearly as possible to the point of the elbow. Ribs well sprung but with no suggestion of barrel shape. Should fill in the space between the forelegs so that there is no appearance of a hollow between them.

Forelegs — Straight and rather long, held in line with the shoulders and not set under the body so as to make a forechest. Elbows should turn neither in nor out and move freely with the point of the shoulder. Fair amount of bone, which should carry right down to the feet. Pasterns strong.

Feet — Must be well formed with strong, thick pads and well-knuckled-up paws. A thin, flat, open foot is a serious fault.

Hindquarters — Long and powerful, stifles well bent, hocks well let down and close to the ground. Thighs broad and muscular, the muscles should be long and flat. A steep croup is most undesirable.

Back — Strong and powerful, rather long with a good, natural arch over the loin creating a definite tuck-up of the underline but covering a lot of ground.

Tail — Long and tapering, should reach to a hipbone when drawn through between the hind legs. Must not be carried higher than the top of the back when moving.

Coat — Close, smooth and firm in texture.

Colour — Immaterial.

Size — Ideal height for dogs, 19 to 22 inches (48.26 to 55.88 cm); for bitches 18 to 21 inches (45.72 to 53.34 cm). These are not intended to be definite limits, only approximate.

Gait — Low, free moving and smooth, as long as is commensurate with the size of the dog. A short, mincing gait with high knee action should be severely penalized.

Disqualification — Undershot mouth.

General Facts

Height limitations are identical in both the Canadian and American breed standard for Whippets. However, in the U.S. there is a disqualification for a 'dog that measures one-half inch above or below the measurements specified under size'. Also in the American standard 'Blue or china-coloured eyes' are a disqualification as is a dog that is 'one-quarter inch or move overshot'.

The British standard, on the other hand, calls for a Whippet somewhat smaller with 18½ and 17½ inches being the preferred heights for dogs and bitches respectively. There is, however, no disqualification specified in the British breed standard.

Like the Greyhound, the Whippet is of ancient origin. However, the present-day dog is thought to represent a cross between the Greyhound and a terrier. No matter, there is ample evidence to place the Whippet in Britain as far back as the 17th century. The breed came to be known as 'the poor man's Greyhound', and was used to course rabbits. Later, as the sport of dog racing became popular, the speedy little Whippet came into his own. It is said that specimens have been clocked at speeds of up to 35 miles per hour.

In Britain, the breed has always enjoyed great popularity as a house pet and to see a pair of Whippets being walked in London's parks is a fairly common sight. Neat and easily cared for, his assets are now being more appreciated on this continent.

Magmellan Fitzwilliam Avoca. From well known old lines, this young honest hound by Avoca Iceman already exemplifies the presence, size, power and agility his breed demands for performance. Owner, Mrs. William R. Morrison, Avoca Reg., Balbriggan Farms, R.R. 6, Smiths Falls, Ont. K7A 4S7.

Wolfhound (Irish)

General Appearance — Of great size and commanding appearance, the Irish Wolfhound is remarkable in combining power and swiftness with keen sight.

The largest and tallest of the galloping hounds, in general type he is a rough-coated, Greyhoundlike breed; very muscular, strong though gracefully built; movements easy and active; head and neck carried high, the tail carried with an upward sweep with a slight curve towards the extremity.

The minimum height and weight of dogs should be 32 inches (81.28 cm) and 120 pounds (54.43 kg); of bitches 30 inches (76.20 cm) and 105 pounds (47.63 kg); these to apply only to hounds over 18 months of age. Anything below this should be debarred from competition. Great size, including height at shoulder and proportionate length of body, is the desideratum to be aimed at, and it is desired to firmly establish a race that shall average from 32 to 34 inches (81.28 to 86.36 cm) in dogs, showing the requisite power, activity, courage and symmetry.

Head — Long, the frontal bones of the forehead very slightly raised and very little indentation between the eyes. Skull, not too broad. Muzzle, long and moderately pointed. Ears, small and Greyhoundlike in carriage.

Neck — Rather long, very strong and muscular, well arched, without dewlap or loose skin about the throat.

Chest — Very deep. Breast, wide.

Back — Rather long than short. Loins arched.

Tail — Long and slightly curved, of moderate thickness, and well covered with hair.

Belly — Well drawn up.

Forequarters — Shoulders muscular, giving breadth of chest, set sloping. Elbows well under, neither turned inwards nor outwards.

Legs — Forearm muscular, and the whole leg strong and quite straight.

Hindquarters — Muscular thighs and second thigh long and strong as in the Greyhound, and hocks well let down and turning neither in nor out.

Feet — Moderately large and round, neither turned inwards nor outwards. Toes, well arched and closed. Nails, very strong and curved.

Hair — Rough and hard on body, legs and head; especially wiry and long over eyes and under-jaw.

Colour and Markings — The recognized colours are grey, brindle, red, black, pure white, fawn, or any other colour that appears in the Deerhound.

Faults — Too light or heavy a head, too highly arched frontal bone; large ears and hanging flat to the face; short neck; full dewlap; too narrow or too broad a chest; sunken or hollow or quite straight back; bent forelegs; overbent fetlocks; twisted feet; spreading toes, too curly a tail; weak hindquarters and a general want of muscle; too short in body. Lips or nose liver coloured or lacking pigmentation.

List of Points in Order of Merit

1. Typical — The Irish Wolfhound is a rough-coated Greyhoundlike breed, the tallest of the coursing hounds and remarkable in combining power and swiftness.
2. Great size and commanding appearance.
3. Movements easy and active.
4. Head, long and level, carried high.
5. Forelegs, heavily boned, quite straight; elbows well set under.
6. Thighs long and muscular; second thighs, well-muscled, stifles nicely bent.
7. Coat, rough and hard, specially wiry and long over eyes and under jaw.
8. Body, long, well ribbed up, with ribs well sprung, and great breadth across hips.
9. Loins arched, belly well drawn up.
10. Ears, small, with Greyhoundlike carriage.
11. Feet, moderately large and round; toes, close, well arched.
12. Neck, long, well arched and very strong.
13. Chest, very deep, moderately broad.
14. Shoulders muscular, set sloping.
15. Tail, long and slightly curved.
16. Eyes, dark.

Note — The above in no way alters the 'Standard of Excellence', which must in all cases be rigidly adhered to; they simply give the various points in order of merit. If in any case they appear at variance with Standard of Excellence, it is the latter which is correct.

General Facts

The Irish Wolfhound has a history tracing back to pre-Christian times. Tallest of all dogs he was used to hunt elk and wolf in Ireland. In danger of extinction in the mid-19th century it has scored a successful revival thanks to the efforts of a British Army Officer by the name of Captain George Graham. The gentlest of dogs with children, yet strongly protective when the need arises. Makes a wonderful family pet in a country setting.

Ch. (Can., Am. & Bda.) Ragamuchkin Adamant George. Finished his American championship with a four-point major at Ravenna under Ed Jenner, owner-handled. Won his Canadian title in eight days with two five-point and one three-point win. Just finished his Bermuda title with majors all the way, and three Group 2nds. Owner, Sandra Nelles Edwards, Brecon Reg., 9893 Leslie St., R.R. 2, Gormley, Ont. L0H 1G0.

Yorkshire Terrier

General Appearance — Should be that of a longcoated toy terrier, the coat hanging quite straight and evenly down each side, a parting extending from the nose to the end of the tail. The animal should be very compact and neat, the carriage being very upright, and having an important air. The general outline should convey the existence of a vigorous and well proportioned body.

Head — Should be rather small and flat, not too prominent or round in the skull, nor too long in the muzzle, with a perfect black nose. The fall on the head to be long, of a rich golden tan, deeper in colour at the sides of the head about the ear roots, and on the muzzle where it should be very long. The hair on the chest a rich bright tan. On no account must the tan on the head extend on to the neck, nor must there by any sooty or dark hair intermingled with any of the tan.

Eyes — Medium, dark and sparkling, having a sharp, intelligent expression, and placed so as to look directly forward. They should not be prominent, and the edge of the eyelids should be of a dark colour.

Ears — Small, V-shaped and carried semi-erect, or erect, and not far apart, covered with short hair, colour to be of a very deep rich tan.

Mouth — Perfectly even, with teeth as sound as possible. An animal having lost any teeth through accident not a fault, providing the jaws are even.

Body — Very compact, and a good loin. Level on the top of the back.

Coat — The hair on body moderately long and perfectly straight (not wavy), glossy like silk, and of a fine silky texture. Colour, a dark steel blue (not silver blue) extending from the occiput (or back of skull) to the root of tail, and on no account mingled with fawn, bronze or dark hairs.

Legs — Quite straight, well covered with hair of a rich golden tan a few shades lighter at the ends than at the roots, not extending higher on the forelegs than the elbows, nor on the hind legs than the stifle.

Feet — As round as possible, and the toenails black.

Tail — Cut to medium length; with plenty of hair, darker blue in colour than the rest of the body, especially at the end of the tail, and carried a little higher than the level of the back.

Tan — All tan hair should be darker at the roots than in the middle, shading to a still lighter tan at the tips.

General Facts

The breed standard for the Yorkshire Terrier currently in use in Canada differs in a number of respects from the one now approved by the American Kennel Club, 1966. The American standard specifies a weight limit: 'Must not exceed seven pounds', but this is not a disqualification should a dog exceed it. Allowance is made for puppy coats as their colour clears from black to the mature steel blue. It also gives some trimming direction and approved ways of tying up the fall of hair on the head. A scissors or level bite is specified; dewclaws generally removed from hind legs; may be removed from forelegs.

As the name implies, this tiny breed was 'created' by breeders in Yorkshire, England. Just over 100 years old, it is surprising that little is known about its creation. Progenitors are thought to be the Maltese, the Black and Tan Terrier and possibly the Skye Terrier. When a single specimen of the breed was exhibited at Leeds in 186?, dog writers predicted the breed would have no future. But the ladies proved them wrong. They loved the elegant little lap dogs so much that today the breed heads the list of dogs exported from Great Britain.

Essentials of the standards

BORZOI
Height, 28 to 31 inches; bitches smaller. Weight 75 to 105 pounds. Built on flowing lines, head long and lean inclined to Roman nose; ears lie back on neck, raised when at attention. Neck moderately long, chest narrow but very deep; arch over loins; tail long, set on and carried low; coat silky, fairly long, usually white marked with lemon, tan, brindle, grey or black. Whole-coloured specimens of these colours occasionally appear. Coat may be flat, wavy or curly but never woolly. Smooth on head, ears and front of legs; neck frill profuse, rather curly; feather on hindquarters and tail, long and profuse, less so on chest and back of forelegs. Elegant, aristocratic, courageous, muscular power with extreme speed.

BOUVIER DES FLANDRES
A large, rough-coated working dog measuring 23-1/2 to 27-1/2 inches at the shoulder; bitches a minimum 22-1/2 inches; head medium long, skull flat on top, moderately wide between ears, brow arched, stop shallow, good fill under eye; ears set high, cropped, erect; eyes set oblique, dark; muzzle wide, deep; cheeks clean, jaws powerful, lips dry, teeth strong, white, scissors bite; nose black, nostrils wide open; neck well rounded, slightly arched, throat dry; shoulders long, sloping; brisket deep; back short, strong, straight; loins short, taut, slightly arched in top line; rump broad, square; ribs deep, well sprung; tail set high, docked; forelegs straight; hindquarters firm, well muscled, hocks well let down, slightly angulated at stifle and hock; feet round, nails black, pads thick; coat double, colour fawn to black, pepper and salt, grey, brindle.

BRIARD
A strong, substantially built working dog, 23 to 27 inches in height with a long, slightly wavy coat that is both stiff and strong. All solid colours except white are allowed, dark being preferable. Head is large, rather long; stop well marked. Ears placed high, not too large, may be cropped or uncropped. When natural they are not carried too flat; when cropped carried semi-erect. Tail long and well feathered. Except for young dogs that may be below the minimum, size below the limit is a disqualification. As is absence of two dewclaws on each hind leg. Other disqualifications are — short hair on the head, face or feet; tail lacking or cut; nose light in colour or spotted; eyes spotted; hair curled; white hair on feet; spotted colours of the coat.

CAVALIER KING CHARLES SPANIEL
Active, graceful, well-balanced dog with a long, silky coat which may have a slight wave but must be free from curl. Feather generous. Desirable weight is from 10 to 18 pounds. Head flat between ears, stop shallow; nostrils black; muzzle tapered; eyes large, dark round, spaced wide; ears long, set high, feathered; body compact; tail in balance with body. Colours — Black and Tan — raven black with particular markings; Ruby — whole-coloured rich red. Blenheim — chestnut markings well broken on white ground. Tri-colour — black and white well broken up with tan markings. Black and white is permissible, but not desirable. Faults — light eyes, bad mouths; white marks on whole coloured specimens. Coarseness. Putty nose. Flesh marks. Nervousness.

COLLIE (SMOOTH)
The Smooth variety of Collie is judged by the same standard as the Rough Variety (see page 89) except that the references to the quantity and the distribution of the coat are not applicable to the Smooth variety, which has hard, dense, smooth coat.

COONHOUND (BLACK AND TAN)
A smooth-coated working hound with a short, dense black coat with particular tan markings. Gives impression of power, agility and alertness. Males 25 to 27 inches; bitches smaller. Head is clean, long, balanced; planes parallel; nostrils well open, black; skull outline tends to be oval; eyes hazel to dark brown, almost round, not deeply set; ears set low, well back, hang in graceful folds, reach beyond tip of nose; scissors bite. Neck muscular; shoulders powerful, chest deep and not flatsided; back level; slopes withers to rump; tail set slightly below level of back line, carried free. Dewclaws are a fault. Feet catlike. Oversized dogs not to be penalized if sound, undersize faulty. Disqualification — white on chest or other parts of the body if it exceeds one and a half inches in diameter.

DACHSHUND (STANDARD SMOOTH)
Low set, short legged, robust, muscular dog weighing over ten pounds. Coat is short, thick, smooth and shining without bald patches. Tail tapers to a point, set in a continuation of the spine, not carried too gaily. Skull slightly arched, ears rounded, not too long, carriage animated. Chest deep, strong, breastbone prominent; topline as straight as possible between withers and tail; hindquarters strongly developed. Feet compact, toes arched, front and hind; nails according to coat colour. For a fuller description of desired conformation and acceptable colours see page 90, 91 and 92.

DACHSHUND (STANDARD LONG-HAIRED)
The distinctive characteristic differentiating this coat from the short-haired or smooth-haired Dachshund is the rather long silky hair. It should be soft, sleek, glistening, often slightly wavy, longer under neck, on underside of body and on ears and behind the legs where it is a pronounced feather. Longest on underside of tail. Short hair on ear not desirable. Too luxurious a coat masks type, making dog appear coarse. Coat should remind one of the Irish Setter and should give dog an elegant appearance. Hair on paws not too thick; it is faulty for hair to be equally long over all the body. Colour of hair, nose and nails is exactly as for the smooth-haired Dachshund. See also pages 90, 91 and 92.

DACHSHUND (MINIATURE LONG-HAIRED)
The coat of the Miniature Long-haired Dachshund is exactly like that described for the Standard Long-haired. Essentially, in texture it should remind one of the coat of the Irish Setter. Body conformation follows that of the other dachshund breeds except that a Miniature Dachshund over 4.54 kg (ten pounds) is not eligible to compete at shows held under the Dog Show Rules of The Canadian Kennel Club. If, at such a show, a Miniature Dachshund is officially weighed and is found to exceed 4.54 kg, said dog shall be declared absent and not permitted in competition at the show. Within the limits imposed, symmetrical adherence to the general Dachshund conformation, combined with smallness and mental and physical vitality should be the outstanding characteristics of the Miniature Dachshund.

DEERHOUND (SCOTTISH)
A tall, elegant, rough-coated coursing hound measuring 30 to 32 inches for dogs; bitches 28 inches and up. Weight 85 to 110 pounds for dogs; bitches 75 to 95 pounds. Preferred colour is dark blue grey; darker, lighter greys or brindles; yellow, sandy red or red fawn, especially with black ears and muzzles, equally high in estimation. White chest and toes acceptable but a white blaze on the head or a white collar is a disqualification. Head long, tapering; ears set high, folded as a Greyhound, semi-erect when excited. Neck long; shoulders well sloped; tail reaches below hocks. General conformation resembles that of Greyhound. Movement is easy, active and true.

DREVER
Sturdy, compact hound with a close, straight coat in all recognized hound colours. Bristly on underside of long tail which should be carried hanging, higher when dog is in motion but never over back. External sexual characteristics well developed; head relatively large, nostrils black and wide; bite scissors; eyes dark brown, eyelids thin and close fitting. Ears medium long, wide, rounded at tips; set neither high nor low; neck powerful with tight skin; paws firm with close toes; pads well developed and hard. Height of dogs not to exceed 16 inches nor to be less than 12-1/2 inches; bitches maximum 15 inches, minimum 12 inches.

ENGLISH TOY SPANIEL
A 9 to 12 pound toy breed with a long, silky, soft and wavy coat; extremely long, feathered ears. Head domed, eyes large, dark and set wide; nose short, well turned up between eyes, black with deep and wide-open nostrils; body compact as a Pug; legs strong; back short and broad; chest wide. Mane profuse; ears and feet well feathered; feather well up back of legs; tail docked, well flagged, falls as a fan does. Colours of the Two Varieties: King Charles and Ruby — solid coloured, the King Charles being black with particular tan markings; the Ruby a rich chestnut red. Blenheim and Prince Charles — broken-coloured dogs. Blenheim is red and white; the Prince Charles tri-coloured — ground colour white with black markings and particular tan markings. White patches on chest or other parts disqualify in the solids.

FOX TERRIER (WIRE)
The general conformation of the Wire Fox Terrier is identical to that of the Smooth Fox. It differs only in the type of coat as follows: 'This variety of the breed should resemble the smooth sort in every respect except the coat, which should be broken. The harder and more wiry the texture of the coat is, the better. On no account should the dog look or feel woolly; and there should be no silky hair about the poll or elsewhere. The coat should not be too long, so as to give the dog a shaggy appearance but, at the same time, it should show a marked and distinct difference all over from the smooth species.' Standard for the Smooth variety is detailed on page 98.

FOXHOUND (AMERICAN)
A typical sporting hound with a close, hard, medium-long coat in any recognized hound colour. Dogs should not measure over 25 inches or under 22 inches at the withers; bitches not over 24 nor under 21 inches. Tail is set moderately high, carried gaily, but not over back; has a slight curve and a very slight brush. Head slightly domed at occiput, ears set moderately low, reach almost to end of nose, close to head, rounded tip. Eyes large, set well apart, expression soft, brown or hazel in colour; muzzle of fair length, straight, square. Quarters strong, muscular; chest deep, ribs well sprung. Feet foxlike; pads full, hard; toes well arched, nails strong.

FOXHOUND (ENGLISH)
A typical sporting hound with a close, hard, medium-long coat in any recognized hound colour. Ears set low, lie close to cheeks and may be rounded, that is, 1-1/2 inches is taken off end of ears. Nostrils open; scissors bite. Overshot and undershot bites are disqualifications. Body strong, compact, powerful, with legs 'as straight as a post'. A straight stifle being preferred to bend, such as in a Greyhound. Although the standard specifies particular girth measurements, it says nothing about height or weight. The English Foxhound is both taller and heavier than the American, scaling from 23 to 25 inches at the withers and weighing from 70 to 80 pounds on the average.

FRENCH BULLDOG
Active, intelligent, muscular; bone heavy, coat smooth, body compact and of medium or small structure. There are two weight classifications. Lightweight under 22 pounds; heavyweight class 22 to 28 pounds, not over. Head large, square; stop well defined; muzzle broad, deep, well laid back; nose short; nostrils broad; nose and flews black except in case of lighter coloured dogs; flews thick, broad, hanging over lower jaw at sides; eyes wide, set low in skull; bat ears; body short, well rounded; forelegs short, stout, straight, muscular, set wide; hind legs strong, longer than front; loins elevated above shoulders. Brindle, fawn white, brindle and white acceptable colours. Skin soft, loose; coat fine, short, smooth.

GRIFFON
(WIRE-HAIRED POINTING)
Medium sized, rather low on leg, short-backed, hard-coated sporting dog. Males measure 21-1/2 to 23-1/2 inches, females two inches less. Skull long, muzzle square with mustache and eyebrows; eyes large, open, iris yellow or light brown; medium size ears, flat or slightly curled, set rather high; nose brown; neck no dewlap, rather long; shoulders long, sloping; ribs slightly rounded; forelegs straight, muscular, furnished with rather short wire hairs; thighs long, well developed; feet round, firm, well formed; tail carried straight or gay, furnished with hard coat without plume, cut to one third its length; colour steel grey with chestnut splashes, grey white with chestnut, chestnut, dirty white with chestnut, never black.

ITALIAN GREYHOUND
A miniature English Greyhound, more slender in all proportions, elegant, graceful, symmetrical. Skull long, flat, narrow; muzzle very fine; nose dark; teeth level; ears rose-shaped, placed well back, soft, delicate; eyes rather large, bright. Neck long, arched; shoulders long, sloping; chest deep, narrow; back curved and drooping at hindquarters; forelegs straight, pasterns fine; hind legs-thighs muscular; well let down hocks, hare feet. Tail rather long, fine, carried low; coat glossy, skin fine, supple; all shades of fawn, red, mouse, blue, cream and white are recognized. Black and tan markings not allowed. Action high stepping. Two size classes - eight pounds and under, and eight pounds and over.

KARELIAN BEAR DOG
(essentials of the proposed standard)
Medium sized, robust dog measuring 21 to 24 inches at the shoulder, bitches slightly less, with a straight, stiff outer coat in black with particular white markings and a soft, dense undercoat. Head is blunt wedge in shape with cocked ears; forehead slightly arched, stop moderate; nose black, well developed; muzzle tapers only slightly; eyes small, brown, alert. Neck muscular; body sturdy; chest capacious; slight tuck-up; forelegs sturdy, straight; paws thick, high, round; hindlegs well angulated; tail medium length, usually arched, full arch most desirable; dewclaws not desirable. Allowed but not desirable are white dogs with black markings, wolf grey colour or spots.

KOMONDOR
A large white Hungarian working dog covered all over with a distinctive white corded coat, the longer and more ragged the better. Minimum height at shoulder is 25 inches for males, 23-1/2 inches for females. Head balanced, stop moderate, ears low set, eyes dark, eyelids slate grey, nose black, neck moderately arched, chest deep, body and quarters strong, well angulated, tail reaches to hocks. Disqualifications — blue white eyes, coat colour other than white.

MANCHESTER TERRIER
A smooth-coated black and tan terrier with erect or button ears and moderately long tail, weighing from 12 to 22 pounds. Head is narrow, mouth level; muzzle slightly wedge shaped, tapering to nose, well filled under eyes; lips tight; eyes small, bright, set moderately close, very dark, oblong in shape, obliquely set, neither deep nor protruding; nose is black; neck slim, graceful, slightly arched; shoulders sloping; chest narrow, deep; body short; loins powerful; back slightly arched at loin and falling again to joining of tail to same height as shoulder; legs straight, strong, in proportion; feet compact, split up between toes, well arched; nails black; two middle toes in front feet longer than others, hind feet catlike. Particular emphasis is given to tan markings.

MEXICAN HAIRLESS
A small, active dog about the size of a small Fox Terrier, symmetrical, well proportioned, with rather broad chest and ribs and slender legs. Head slender, skull narrow, cheeks lean, muzzle long, pointed. There should be a tuft of coarse hair on top of skull in the centre but a bit forward. Eyes neither deep set nor bulging; rims pink or dark, eyes hazel, yellow or dark; neck of good length, slender, well arched; chest rather broad; legs fairly long and slender; ribs well rounded; back level; rump slightly rounded; skin smooth, soft, of any colour; hare feet, nails black in dark skin, pale in pale skin dogs; tail long, smooth, carried out. Cut or broken ears or tail disqualifications, likewise a fuzz or hair except as described.

NORFOLK TERRIER
Small, lovable, hardy, alert, fearless. Compact and strong with short back, good substance and bone. Skull wide, slightly rounded, good width between ears; muzzle wedge shaped, strong, length slightly less than half length of skull. Stop well defined; eyes oval, deep set, dark brown or black; expression alert, keen; ears medium v-shaped, slightly rounded at tip, drop forward close to cheek; lips tight, jaw strong; teeth strong, rather large, bite scissors. Neck medium long, strong; forequarters clean, powerful shoulders with short, powerful, straight legs; body compact, back short, topline level, ribs well sprung; hindquarters well muscled, stifle well turned, hocks well let down, straight; feet round, pads thick; tail medium docked, not too gay; coat hard, wiry, straight in all shades of red. White marks or patches undesirable but shall not disqualify; ideal height 10 inches.

OTTERHOUND
In general appearance — always excepting the coat — the Otterhound much resembles the Bloodhound; he should be perfect in symmetry, strongly built, hard and enduring, with unfailing powers of scent, and a natural antipathy to the game he is bred to pursue. The head is large, broader in proportion than the Bloodhound's, the forehead high, the muzzle a fair length, the nostrils wide; ears long, thin, pendulous, fringed with hair; neck not long, looks shorter because of abundance of hair on it; shoulders slope well, legs straight, feet a good size but compact; back strong, wide; ribs, particularly the back ribs, well let down, thighs big, firm, hocks well let down; stern thickly covered with hair, carried up; colours grizzle or sandy with black and tan more or less clearly defined.

PHARAOH HOUND
Medium sized, clean cut, graceful hound with a short, fine coat, rich tan in colour with allowable white markings; measuring 23 to 25 inches for males; bitches 21 to 24 inches. Skull is long, lean, chiseled; foreface slightly longer than skull; stop slight; planes parallel; jaws powerful, scissors bite; nose flesh or light fawn, blends with coat; eyes deep amber, oval, set moderately deep; ears medium high set, carried erect, very flexible, broad at base, fine and large; neck long, lean, well muscled, throat clean, slightly arched; shoulders sloping, strong; forelegs straight, parallel; pasterns upright; slight slope croup to root of tail; brisket deep, hindquarters strong, muscular, hocks well let down; limbs parallel; toes tight; tail medium set, reaches to hock; gait free and flowing.

POINTER (GERMAN LONG-HAIRED)
A strong, streamlined sporting dog with a smooth, slightly waved coat in shades of brown, measuring not less than 22 inches at the shoulder. Head is long, equidistant stop to nose tip, stop to occiput. Crown slightly curved; ears lie close to skull, rounded at tips; eyes brown, well closed, set neither too deep nor too prominent; nose dark brown; neck strong; chest deep rather than wide; deeper than elbow joint; abdomen tucked up; back straight, strong, loins muscular; croup slightly sloped; tail set high, not carried too high with good feathers; shoulders lie flat, elbows in, pasterns slightly sloping; hocks well angled, toes well closed, pads firm, strong. Coat not excessive nor too short. Hair between toes but not protruding; coat has ability to shed water easily.

POINTER (GERMAN WIRE-HAIRED)
A harsh-coated pointer in liver and white. Males measure 24 to 26 inches; bitches smaller but not less than 22 inches. Head moderately long, skull broad, stop medium, muzzle fairly long, lips a trifle pendulous but close and bearded; nose dark brown, nostrils wide open; teeth strong, bite scissors; ears rounded, close to sides of head; eyes brown, medium, oval, bright; eyebrows bushy. Neck medium long, slightly arched, no dewlap; body a little longer than it is high; back short, straight, strong, slopes slightly withers to croup; chest deep, capacious, ribs well sprung, loins taut, slender, tuck-up apparent; hips broad, croup nicely rounded, tail docked. Forelegs straight, sloping shoulders, elbows close; thighs strong, muscular; hind legs moderately angulated; feet webbed, arched high, pads thick, hard, nails strong. Coat weather resisting; outer straight, harsh; undercoat dense.

POODLE (MINIATURE)
The Miniature Poodle is under 15 inches (38.10 cm) at the withers with a minimum height in excess of 10 inches (25.40 cm). Any Poodle which is 15 inches or over or 10 inches or under at the withers shall be disqualified from competition as a Miniature Poodle. The standard for all three varieties of the Poodle breed are identical except in respect to height. For more detailed description see page 124. Note: So long as the dog is definitely a Miniature, diminutiveness is only the deciding factor when all other points are equal; soundness and activity are every whit as necessary in a Miniature as they are in a Standard Poodle. It is imperative that Miniatures be moved in the ring as fully and decidedly as Standard Poodles.

POODLE (STANDARD)
The Standard Poodle is 15 inches or over at the withers. Any Poodle which is less than 15 inches (38.10 cm) in height shall be disqualified from competition as a Standard Poodle. In general appearance the Poodle is active, intelligent, smart and elegant looking; squarely built; skull slightly full, moderately peaked with slight stop; muzzle long, straight, fine; teeth strong and level; nose sharp, nostrils well defined; eyes oval, dark; ears set low; neck strong; shoulders well laid back; forelegs straight; chest deep; back short; tail set high; hind legs muscular, well angulated; feet small, oval; coat profuse, harsh, even length, frizzy or curly, clipped either in Continental or English Saddle trim except for dogs under one year of age which may be shown with coat long except face, feet and base of tail; gait springy and straight-forward.

PUDELPOINTER
An agile, versatile hunting dog; powerful, graceful, keen. Coat is dense, hard, tight to body, medium long with fine woolly undercoat in dark liver to autumn leaves. Small white marks on chest and paws permitted. Head long, wide, balanced; beard and eyebrows well developed; ears medium, close to head, well covered with hair; eyes rather large, dark amber, well closed eyelids. Open eyelids disqualify dogs for breeding purposes. Neck medium long, well muscled, arched; chest wide, deep, ribs rather barrel round; back short, strong loins and croup, wide with muscles well developed; tail in line with croup; forequarters well angulated as are hindquarters; paws round, closed, pads hard; tail rather thin, carried level, docked, no feathering.

PULI
A distinctive, shaggy looking working breed measuring 16 to 18 inches at the shoulder for males; two inches less for bitches. Coat is uniformly corded. Colours are black, reddish-black, grey-reddish-black, all shades of grey and occasionally white. Black and white are acceptable but not to be encouraged. A sturdy, active dog with steady, quiet temperament built on the lines of any robust working breed. Tail is medium long and carried over back. Gait gay and bouncy. Disqualifications — any other colours than mentioned; particolours etc. Puppies are usually born jet-black, the desirable adult colour not coming for some months.

RETRIEVER (CURLY-COATED)

working group and seventh highest of all breeds in Australia.

Good news is bound to spread. Australians boast that their Cattle Dog is the world's best and cattle owners in other parts of the world decided to test that claim. The heelers became one of the more unusual exports of Australia. The herding wonders can be found working cattle in New Zealand, South Africa, Switzerland, Sweden, New Guinea, the U.S. and Canada.

Most of those who came to Canada went to Alberta's cattle country where 70 percent are actively working cattle. A breed club was formed in 1976 and reorganized last year as the Australian Cattle Dog Club of Alberta. The group is dedicated to promoting wider acceptance and distribution of the breed in Canada as well as to gain full CKC recognition.

COFFEE TABLE BOOKS

THE LOVE OF DOGS — This attractive volume contains 135 photographs, many in colour, and discusses choosing a puppy, training and showing, with step-by-step illustrations. Other beautiful pictures include favourite breeds and working dogs in action. For yourself or as a gift for a dog loving friend, $6.95. WORLD ENCYCLOPEDIA OF DOGS — An informative and eye-catching addition to any library. It contains a comprehensive coverage of the dog's ancestry and employment as a working dog, plus an international A-Z section of breed standards. Answers almost any question that might be posed by dog owners or prospective owners. Beautifully illustrated by over 150 colour photographs as well as drawings. $11.95. THE GREAT BOOK OF DOGS — Describes each of over 300 different breeds, many you may never have seen, and tells the fascinating story of their evolution and long association with man. In addition to breed standards and interesting anecdotes, unique personalities of each breed are captured in paintings and drawings by Piero Cozzaglio. An international anthology, $13.99. These books are available by sending cheque or money order, plus 75c handling, to Dogs in Canada, Suite 500, 3 Church St., Toronto, Ont. M5E 1M2.

Regular Meeting of the Board of Directors Saturday, January 6, 1979

A regular meeting of the Board of Directors of The Canadian Kennel Club was held in the Board Room of the Club's Offices, Toronto, commencing at 9:30 A.M. on Saturday, January 6th, 1979.

Members of the Board present for all or part of this meeting: Mr. Gordon M. Ashcroft, Mr. Robert L. Blyth, Mr. John Devlin Jr., Mrs. Irving Diamond, Mr. Ed Dixon, Mr. Peter Elston, Mr. W. W. Fraser, Mrs. Lorna Jackson, Mrs. Flora Mackenzie, Mrs. Hilda Pugh, Mr. John Ross, Mr. G. Ellwood Smith, Mrs. Phyllis Smith.

Chairman (except where otherwise indicated): Mrs. Hilda Pugh, President.

Chairman's opening remarks

The President, in declaring the meeting open, said: "I would like to wish you all a happy New Year. We have accomplished considerable in the last year, and as a very efficient working Board we can look forward to even greater progress in 1979."

Urgent matters

The President solicited and obtained the Board's wishes with regard to priority which would be given certain items on the agenda of the meeting.

Staff restructuring committee

SUBJECT: A notice of motion given by Mrs. Diamond that the Board rescind motion #614-12-78 reading as follows: "THAT, no appointment for this senior management position be made today, Saturday, December 9, 1978, unless there is a 2/3's majority on a secret ballot by the Directors present."

The President ruled that a motion to rescind motion #614-12-78 would not be acceptable as the motion in question related only to the meeting held on December 9, 1978, and with the adjournment of that meeting it had no further force or effect.

Mr. Ashcroft, Chairman of the Staff Restructuring Committee, submitted a report (dated January 4th) with regard to the selection and appointment of a person to fill the senior management position currently vacant.

The Board agreed that immediately following the morning tea break it would consider the report submitted by Mr. Ashcroft.

Dates of 1979 Board Meetings

SUBJECT: The President pointed out that it is the custom of the Board, at its first meeting in the calendar year, to set the dates for the remaining meetings in the year.

Motion # 1-1-79
Moved by Mrs. Diamond, seconded by Mr. Devlin:
"THAT, regular meetings of the Board in 1979, if required, be held on alternate Wednesdays and Saturdays through the year."
FOR THE MOTION: Mr. Ashcroft, Mrs. Diamond, Mrs. Mackenzie, Mr. Ross, Mr. G. E. Smith, Mr. Blyth, Mr. Elston, Mrs. Jackson, Mr. Dixon, Mrs. P. Smith, Mr. Frser, Mr. Devlin, Mrs. Pugh.
Motion carried

A discussion followed with regard to the selection of suitable dates.

Motion # 2-1-79

Breed Standards

SUBJECT: Mr. Ross, Chairman of the Breed Standards Committee, reported that the Committee is of the opinion that the present system of approving a breed standard for a breed newly recognized in Canada is cumbersome, and asked that the Committee's recommendations, as set out in its report to the Board dated December 29th (Section 4 of report), on changing the present policies in this regard be placed on the agenda of the next annual meeting of the Board.

Mr. Ross also asked that the Committee's recommendations, as set out in its report to the Board dated December 29th (Section 6 of report), with regard to changing current policies on altering a current breed standard, be placed on the agenda of the next annual meeting of the Board.

SUBJECT: A section of a report (dated December 29th) of the Breed Standards Committee reading as follows: "The Breed Standards Committee felt that the suggestion that the Breed Standards Book be combined into one volume, with a good, marketable cover, was an excellent one. It was felt such a book should be comprised of 4 sections:

(1) A section such as is in the A.K.C. book on the origin and purpose of each breed (suggestion: could we obtain permission to copy the A.K.C. pages for that section).

(2) Section with photographs of each breed (where possible, dogs to be Canadian dogs). This would be an advertising section, with only 4 pictures to be allowed, with the first 2 pictures submitted of each sex to be accepted. Ad rates to be set quite high. Note: these pages would more than pay for themselves. It was also felt that both sexes should be represented, as in many breeds there is a marked difference between the sexes (besides the obvious!!).

(3) A section with the standards as currently approved.

(4) A section of anatomical drawings showing common faults, as well as proper structure."

Motion # 39-1-79
Moved by Mr. Ross, seconded by Mrs. Jackson:
"THAT, a Breed Standard book be published in accordance with the recommendations of the Breed Standards Committee as set forth in the Committee's report dated December 29, 1978."
FOR THE MOTION: Mr. Ashcroft, Mrs. Diamond, Mrs. Mackenzie, Mr. Ross, Mr. G. E. Smith, Mr. Blyth, Mr. Elston, Mrs. Jackson, Mr. Dixon, Mrs. P. Smith, Mr. Fraser, Mr. Devlin, Mrs. Pugh.

Motion carried

SUBJECT: A recommendation of the Breed Standards Committee that the Amendments Committee (By-laws) be asked to draft, for the Board's consideration, an amendment to Article XXVI, Section 3, of the Club's

By-laws to provide for the removal of breed(s) from the list of recognized breeds.

Mr. Ross pointed out that in its report the Committee had suggested the text of the proposed amendment.

Proposed Amendments to C.K.C. By-laws

SUBJECT: The Acting Manager:

(1) reported that on October 4th, 1978, he had received from Mrs. L. Whent and other members notice of proposed amendments to the following sections of the Club's By-laws:
Article XII, Section 5, Subsection 1:
Article X, Section 7:
Article XV:
Article XXXI, Section 2:
Article XXXI, Section 1;

(2) reported that the current C.K.C. By-laws require that where ordinary members exercise the privileges of submitting proposed amendments to the Club's By-laws, then notice of such proposed amendments must reach the C.K.C. Secretary 'not later than September 1st in the year preceding the year of the biennial election of the Board';

(3) reported that he had advised Mrs. Whent that because the submission of these proposed amendments had not taken place by the deadline stipulated in (2) above, he had informed her that the proposed amendments could not be processed as provided in Article XXXVIII of the Club's By-laws;

(4) reported that out of consideration for these members he had nonetheless informed the Registrar of the two proposed amendments having to do with Article XXXI; and had forwarded a copy of the other proposed amendments to the Chairman of the By-laws Committee;

(5) pointed out that the reverse side of the 'Notice of Proposed Amendment' forms had indicated that the proposed amendments would be acceptable up to October 15th rather than the date of September 1st stipulated in the By-laws;

(6) read a letter from the Registrar reporting that the Registration Committee unanimously agreed with the proposed amendments to Article XXXI submitted by Mrs. Whent et al.

Motion # 40-1-79
Moved by Mr. Ashcroft, seconded by Mr. Devlin:
"THAT, these proposed amendments be referred to the Amendments Committee (By-Laws) and be placed on the agenda of the next annual meeting of the Board."
FOR THE MOTION: Mr. Ashcroft, Mrs. Diamond, Mrs. Mackenzie, Mr. Ross, Mr. G. E. Smith, Mr. Blyth, Mr. Elston, Mrs. Jackson, Mr. Dixon, Mrs. P. Smith, Mr. Fraser, Mr. Devlin, Mrs. Pugh.

ABSENT: Mr. Blyth, Mr. Elston, Mr. Fraser.

Motion lost.

Membership List to Directors

SUBJECT: Mr. Dixon stated that there are occasions when it would be extremely helpful to a member of the Board to obtain from the Registration Division a list of members in his or her zone or labels which could be used to address letters to such members.

In the discussion which followed, reference was made to a previous decision of the Board that such lists would not be provided. It was suggested that if the Board reversed this policy and authorized the provision of such lists, then the Board could deal with any abuse of the privilege.

Motion # 53-1-79
Moved by Mr. Dixon, seconded by Mrs. Mackenzie:
"THAT, the Directors have access to the addresses of members in their provinces."
FOR THE MOTION: Mr. Ashcroft, Mrs. Diamond, Mrs. Mackenzie, Mr. Ross, Mr. G. E. Smith, Mrs. Jackson, Mr. Dixon, Mrs. P. Smith, Mr. Devlin, Mrs. Pugh.
ABSENT: Mr. Blyth, Mr. Elston, Mr. Fraser.

Motion carried

Listing of Officers, Directors and Representatives in "Dogs in Canada"

SUBJECT: A recommendation of Mr. Dixon that there be re-established the practice of publishing in each issue of "Dogs in Canada" the names and addresses of each member of the Board.

Motion # 54-1-79
Moved by Mr. Ross, seconded by Mr. Ashcroft:

POLICIES APPLICABLE TO THE DETERMINATION OF FEES

Schedule of Fees

The schedule of fees applicable to services provided by the C.K.C. through its Registration Division is divided into two sections, one applicable to applicants who are "ORDINARY" members of The Canadian Kennel Club, the other to applicants who are "ASSOCIATE" or "NON-RESIDENT" members of the C.K.C., also, those applicants who are not members of The Canadian Kennel Club.

Who is the applicant?

Litters:

In the case of an application for registration of litter, the applicant is the owner of the litter at its birth, or the lessee of the dam of the litter where the lease of dam is registered with the C.K.C.

Individual Dogs:

Dog born in Canada: The applicant is the owner of the dog at its birth.

Imported Dog: The applicant is the person who imported the dog to Canada. (NOTE: Such ownership must be recorded on foreign certificate of registration submitted with the application for registration.)

Dog owned in the United States: The applicant is the owner of record shown on the American certificate of registration.

Transfer of ownership:

In all cases the applicant is the person from whom the dog is being transferred, NOT the person to whom it is being transferred.

Registration of Lease:

The applicant is the recorded owner of the dog, not the person to whom the dog is leased.

Registration of tattoo identification combination:

The applicant is the person to whom the combination is to be allotted.

Order for certified pedigree:

The applicant is the person submitting the request for a certified pedigree.

Registration of Kennel Name:

The applicant is the person in whose name the kennel name is to be registered if the application is approved.

These points should be noted:

1. If the applicant is an individual person, membership rates apply only if the applicant is currently an individual "Ordinary" member of the C.K.C.
2. If an individual applicant is part of an "Ordinary" partnership membership, membership rates do not apply regardless of the relationship to the other persons in the partnership membership.
3. Membership privileges are not transferable from one person to another. For example: If the husband is a C.K.C. "Ordinary" member, but it is his wife who is the applicant, these membership rates do not apply unless the wife is also a C.K.C. "Ordinary" member.
4. If the applicant is a partnership, membership rates apply only if the partnership is currently a C.K.C. "Ordinary" member, OR if each and every person in the partnership is currently a C.K.C. "Ordinary" member.
5. A person, partnership or company, is not a C.K.C. "Ordinary" member until they have been C.K.C. "Associate" members in the three years immediately prior to the payment of the "Ordinary" membership fee.

POLITIQUES APPLICABLES A L'EVALUATION DES DROITS

Liste de Tarifs

La liste de tarifs applicable aux services donnés par le C.C.C. par l'entremise de sa Division d'Enregistrement, se divise en deux parties, dont l'une est applicable aux requérants qui sont membres "ORDINAIRES" du Cercle Canadien du Chenil, et l'autre, aux requérants qui sont membres "ASSOCIES" ou "NON-RESIDANTS" du C.C.C., et aux requérants qui ne sont pas membres du Cercle Canadien du Chenil.

Le requérant, qui est-il?

Portées:

Dans le cas d'une demande d'enregistrement d'une portée, le requérant est le propriétaire de la portée à la naissance de cette même, ou il est le locataire de la mère de la portée quand un contrat de louage est enregistré avec le C.C.C.

Chiens individuels:

Chien né au Canada: Le requérant est le propriétaire du chien à la naissance de ce même.

Chien importé: Le requérant est la personne qui a importé le chien au Canada. (NOTE: Tels droits de propriété doivent figurer sur le certificat d'enregistrement étranger soumis avec la demande d'enregistrement.)

Chien dont le propriétaire habite les Etats-Unis: Le requérant est la personne dont le nom figure en tant que propriétaire sur le certificat d'enregistrement américain.

Transfert de propriété:

En tout cas, le requérant est la personne qui cède les droits de propriété du chien, NON PAS la personne à qui on est en train de transférer les droits de propriéte du chien.

Enregistrement du Contrat de Louage:

Le requérant est le propriétaire enregistré du chien, non pas le locataire du chien.

Enregistrement des lettres de tatouage pour fins d'identification:

Le requérant est la personne à qui les lettres de tatouage ont été allouées.

Commande pour pedigree certifié:

Le requérant est la personne soumettant la demande pour un pedigree certifié.

Enregistrement d'un Nom de Chenil:

Le requérant est la personne au nom de qui le nom de chenil sera enregistré si la demande est approuvée.

Considérations à noter:

1. Si le requérant est une seule personne les tarifs de membre s'appliquent aux demandes d'enregistrement seulement si le requérant, une seule personne, est couramment membre "Ordinaire" du C.C.C.
2. Si le requérant, une seule personne, est nommée sur une carte de membre "Ordinaire" pour une société, les tarifs de membre ne s'appliquent pas aux demandes d'enregistrement sans faire aucun cas du lien de parenté avec les autres personnes nommées sur la carte de membre pour une société.
3. Les prérogatives de membres ne se passent pas d'une personne à une autre. Par exemple: Si l'époux est un membre "Ordinaire" du C.C.C., mais que le requérant se trouve à être son épouse, ces tarifs de membre ne s'appliquent pas aux demandes d'enregistrement à moins que l'épouse soit aussi membre "Ordinaire" du C.C.C.
4. Si le requérant est une société, les tarifs de membre s'appliquent aux demandes d'enregistrement seulement is la société est couramment membre "Ordinaire" du C.C.C., OU si chaque et chacune des personnes nommées sur la carte de membre pour la société, est couramment membre "Ordinaire" du C.C.C.
5. Une seule personne, société ou compagnie n'est pas membre "Ordinaire" du C.C.C., avant d'avoir été membre "Associé" du C.C.C. pendant les trois années immédiatement avant le versement des droits de membre "Ordinaire".

Show & Trial Results

The awards at shows and trials reported in this issue are in accordance with official returns received by The Canadian Kennel Club. As such the reports are subject to any necessary corrections and to such cancellations as may be required by the applicable rules and regulations. Any correspondence regarding these published reports should be addressed to the Shows & Trials Division, The Canadian Kennel Club, 2150 Bloor St. W., Toronto, Ont. M6S 4V7. A request for a correction will not be entertained if the request reaches The Canadian Kennel Club more than one month following publication, and if the error originated in a judge's book a correction will only be made if the officiating judge specifically and conclusively authorizes the correction.

In order to remedy possible errors in judges' books at championship shows exhibitors (and agents for exhibitors) are advised to closely examine pages from judges' books as posted at a championship show and report immediately to the show Superintendent any error which has been noted.

Index of events reported in this issue will be found on the last page of this official section.

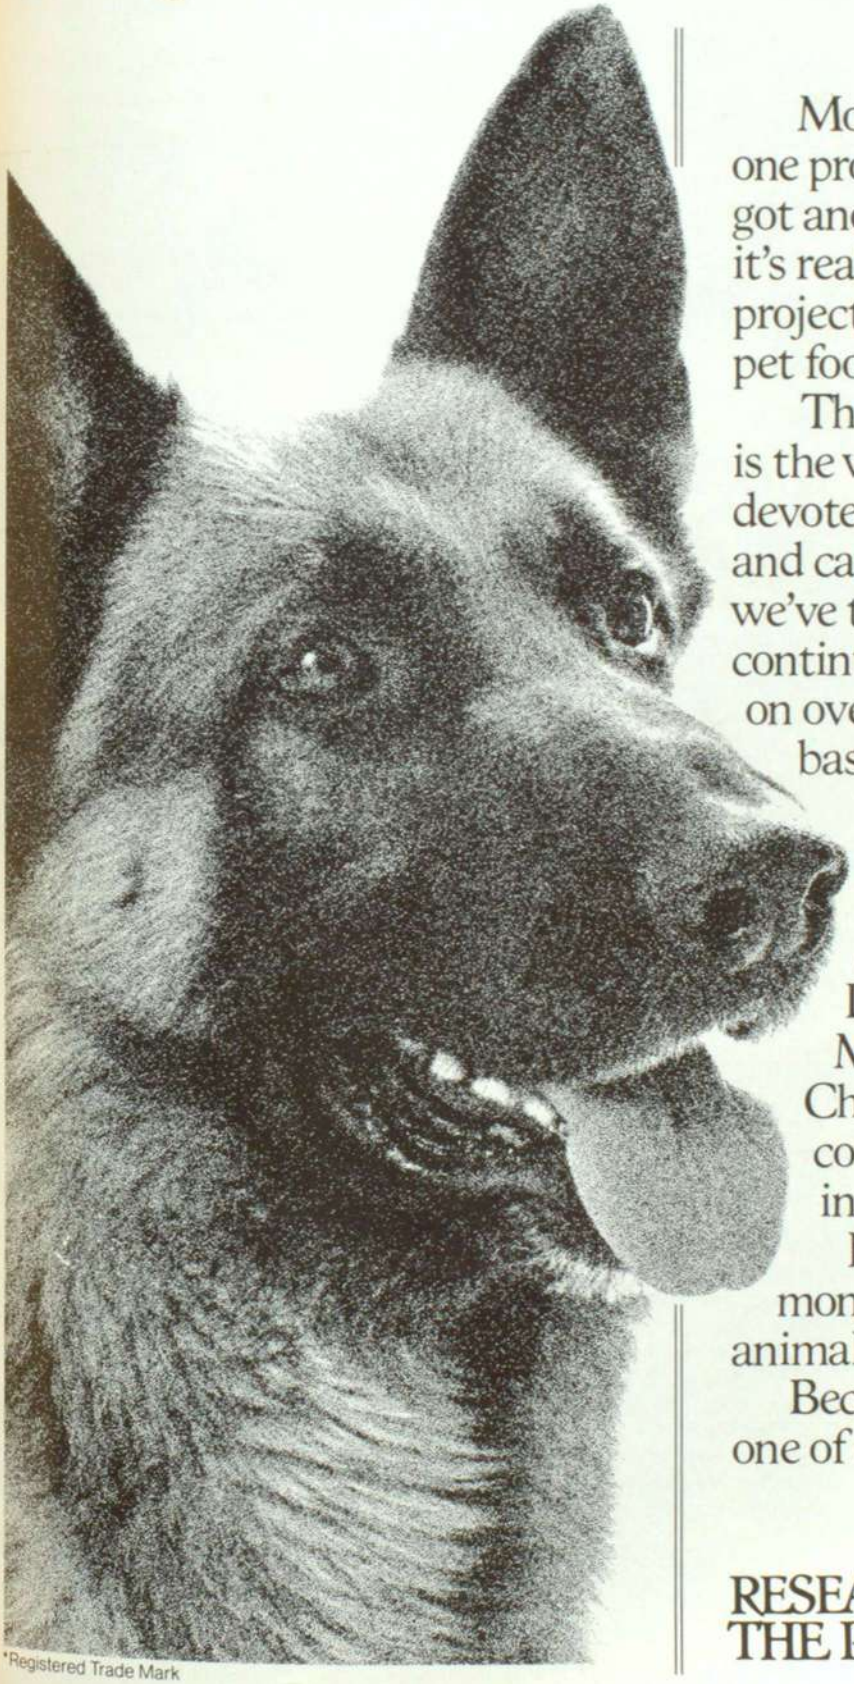
RESEARCH.



Most people know us for one project—pet food. But we've got another—research. And it's really our most important project, because without it no pet food can be complete.

The Purina Pet Care Centre is the world's largest facility devoted entirely to pet nutrition and care research. Since 1926 we've tested the effects of our continuously improved products on over 18,000 dogs in studies based on palatibility, growth, breeding, digestion and maintenance.

That's why we can state that Purina* Dog Chow,* Purina Dog Meal and Purina Puppy Chow dog foods deliver complete, balanced nutrition in flavours dogs like.

Research. We invest more money on it than any other animal food manufacturer.

Because your pet's health is one of our pet projects.

RESEARCH.* THE PURINA DIFFERENCE.

Finally.
A soft moist especially for puppies.

A puppy is special. His development establishes the physical and emotional condition of the adult dog.

New Gaines* Puppy Choice* is a special puppy food that meets a puppy's special nutritional requirements (approximately double versus the adult dog per kg. of body weight).

The first soft moist puppy food in Canada, new Gaines Puppy Choice delivers all the NRC nutritional recommendations for extra protein, extra vitamins and extra minerals for the 100% complete and balanced diet a growing puppy needs.

Kennel tested by professionals, Puppy Choice has a high digestibility factor, indicating a high level of nutrient utilization. And it has the high palatability and meat content of soft moist foods to encourage full nutritional intake.

New Gaines Puppy Choice comes in individual pouches in premeasured portions ideal for a puppy's appetite, and is available in a special 20kg. kennel size.

And through the Gaines Professional Plan special quantity prices are available.
